Then haste thee in this font to plunge and rise
More comely made than winter's robe of white!
Here bathe, and swiftly thou may'st lift thine eyes,
By dust undimmed, to meet God's blessed light.

Nor cease to seek his heaven, though passion's fires
Beat on thy path, to lure the wayward will.
Thy soul, indignant, scorns their vain desires,
While dearer joys divine thy spirit fill.

And in its hidden deeps thy heart shall find
How thou art bound to Jesus by love's band,
Tender and strong, and thou shalt call to mind
The gifts he gives thee with a bounteous hand.

For he is still thy glory and thy stay,
Within thy heart a quenchless fire of love,
A tower of strength in life's hard fought-en fray—
A light to lead thee to his home above!

TRAPPIST MONKS IN ALGIERS

How They Live at the Famous Monastery of Staoueli.

If Algiers is at present a rather lawless paradise, the famous monastery of La Trappe de Staoueli is a paradise of peace. The life of the Trappist monk is no idle dream, says a writer in the Oswego Palladium. He is the hardest laborer one can imagine. As I stroll about the farms and plantations, I see monks digging potatoes, chopping wood, gathering grapes, drawing water, wheeling huge barrows of vegetables, directing the laborers in the vineyards, planting, hoeing, destroying weeds, trimming flower beds, toiling in the distillery, carpentering, bottling wine—doing a thousand things. Generally they are clad in sober brown or white habits, with hoods, stout boots and big straw hats. But sometimes, when their labors are very menial, they cover themselves up in a sort of loose blouse, such as a butcher might wear. In this they are unrecognizable.

A few days ago I was on a farm watching a herd of little black pigs fighting over their food, when a young laborer came up and began to talk—about pigs, naturally. He told me that he looked after them, and invited me to make the tour of the piggeries. The conversation slipped from the subject of pigs to that of bulls, from bulls to bullfights. Thinking the young man was a Spanish workman—half the world is Spanish at La Trappe de Staoueli—I drew out my cigarette case and offered him a cigarette. He refused it gently, saying: "It is forbidden. I have not smoked, I have not been outside these walls for 15 years." And turning up his blouse with a smile, he showed me his monkish habit underneath. I learned afterward that he and his father had been monks together at La Trappe. The father is buried now in the cemetery, and the son presides over the destinies of the Trappist pigs.

It is a mistake to believe, as many people do believe, that the Trappists never speak. Some of them may speak at certain times and in certain places with strangers. They may speak in order to give directions to the workmen in the fields and about the farms. But within the monastery and among themselves they preserve continual silence.

READ YOUR CHURCH PAPER.

A Protestant's Advice That Also Applies to All Catholics.

The following paragraph from The Christian Standard gives us an idea of how Protestants talk to each other about reading their church paper:

"The church member who does not read his denominational paper will soon become shriveled, narrow antimissionary and then go into 'innocuous desuetude.' On the other hand, a church member who reads and becomes an agent in his church for a religious paper is a benefactor. He is performing a service for Christ and the church which is second to none. A pastor who will from time to time call the attention of his people to important articles, special numbers and will urge upon his congregation the value and need of taking a religious paper and then follow it up with a little earnest solicitation will strengthen himself among them. They will become informed, appreciative and responsive to the denomination and to Christ."

The Pope's Vineyards.

Three years ago, his holiness, noting the uncultivated spots in the garden of the Vaticam, decided to set out grapevines. He placed an order for 1,000 vines with the nurserymen of Italy, and the roots, on their arrival, were carefully set out and tenderly nurtured. As Italy is a fertile country, they grew and prospered, and, owing to their good care, became full grown vines in a short time.

Last year the pope was more than proud of the results of his agricultural enterprise. The wine yield from the young vines has filled eight hogsheads, every drop of which promises to be the rarest vintage. The pope has reserved a small portion for the use of himself and his successor. Another small portion he sent to the churches to be used at communion. The remainder, amounting to several hogsheads, he sold at good prices. His holiness would not dispose of the wine for trade purposes, but carefully placed it where it will be dealt out to the sick.

His lagoons in the Vatican have brought in a large income from the fresh fish they yield, and now he intends to fill the Vatican with vines in every available corner. Years hence "Pope Leo's vintage of 1898" may be among the physician's prescriptions.

A Protestant Tribute.

The Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage pleaded for a wider tolerance in church circles recently, saying in the course of his sermon: "Now, you know some people have gone stark mad upon the question of the Catholic church. They think the name of the pope is only another name for the devil. I myself could never be a Catholic. But I firmly believe that some of the best men I have ever known were not only members of the Catholic church, but Catholic priests themselves. And some of them I never expect to meet in heaven, because I believe they are so good that God will honor them with a seat so near the throne that I, on the outskirts of the multitude, will never be able to even touch the hem of their garments."

A Catholic Drama.

According to the Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times, a drama for female characters, entitled "The Shepherdess of Lourdes; or, the Blind Princess," has been written by the Very Rev. F. Felix, O. S. B. It treats of the history of the apparitions at Lourdes, 1858, and of the favored child of Mary, Bernadette, interweaving in the plot instances of remarkable cures, spiritual and temporal. The conception has a historical basis.

Berlin. Ein Legat ist seitens des Großindustriellen Forster in Deutz bei Köln der Stadt Berlin zugefallen, dessen Zinsen dazu verwendet werden sollen, um Mädchen über 15 Jahre, welche sich ihr Brod erwerben müssen und keinen häuslichen Anhalt haben, Kost und Wohnung womöglich in anständigen Familien zu gewähren. Die Zinsen der einen Hälfte des Legats werden vorläufig zum Kapital mit angesammelt, dagegen kommen die Zinsen der anderen Hälfte, welche sich auf 5000 Mark etwa belaufen mögen, unmittelbar zur Verwendung. Der Magistrat beschloß, das Vermächtniß anzunehmen. —Der Hausbesitzer und Gastwirth Karl Baatz ist mit Hinterlassung großer Schulden geflüchtet.

Spandau. Große Arbeiterentlassungen in den technischen Instituten der Artillerie, Geschützgießerei, Artilleriewerkstatt und Feuerwerkslaboratorium stehen demnächst in Aussicht. Da das neue Feldgeschütz fertig ist, werden die Betriebe bedeutend eingeschränkt. Man glaubt, daß ungefähr 1500 Arbeiter ihre Entlassung erhalten werden. Die Borsig'sche Maschinenfabrik in Berlin hat sich bereit erklärt, einen großen Theil der zur Entlassung kommenden Arbeiter zu übernehmen.

Karnin. Neulich Nachts brach auf dem nahe gelegenen Gute Wilhelmsfelde Feuer aus. Der große Stall, die beiden Scheunen und das gesammte Sommerkorn sind verbrannt. Es liegt Brandstiftung vor.

Pasewalk. Das Projekt eines Uecker-Havel-Kanals scheint seiner Verwirklichung entgegengehen zu sollen. In Pasewalk, Prenzlau, Torgelow und Ueckermünde haben sich bereits Ortsvereine gebildet, welche die Ausführung des Projekts eifrigst betreiben. Auf die Unterstützung der Provinz und der Kreise kann mit Sicherheit gerechnet werden. Die Kosten des Baues werden sich auf etwa 12,000,000 Mark stellen und das Anlagekapital sich mit 6 bis 6½ Prozent verzinsen. Der Uecker-Havel-Kanal soll mit der Ostlinie des Großschifffahrtsweges Berlin-Stettin nicht konkurriren, sondern durch die mit dem Kanalbau verbundene Entwässerung große Brachländereien nutzbar machen und nach aufblühenden Ortschaften billige Verkehrsverbindungen schaffen.

CHAPTER VII.

Three days after the adjournment of Nevins' court martial Camp Cooke had dropped back to the monotone of its everyday life. Everybody was gone except the now sullen, complaining prisoner and the little garrison of two companies of infantry. Vanished even were all but two or three of the colony of gamblers and alleged prospectors, who occupied, to the annoyance of the commanding officer and the scandal of the sutler, a little ranch just outside the reservation lines, whither venturesome spirits from the command were oft enticed and fleeced of their money that the authorized purveyor of high priced luxuries considered his legitimate plunder.

By this time Camp Cooke waked up to the fact that it had been dozing. While its own little force of cavalry was scouting the valleys of the Verde and the Salado to the east and Blake's troop had been rushed up the Hassayampa to the north and there was no one apparently to do escort duty through the deserts along the Gila, Camp Cooke and the outlying prowlers believed that those costly trinkets which Nevins had begged Mr. Loring to take to his wife would not be withdrawn from the quartermaster's safe, much less sent forth upon their perilous way.

Not until after Colonel Turnbull and the engineer had ridden off southward, escorted by a sergeant with six tough looking troopers, not until after Loring's announcement that the jewels themselves had been sent ahead, not until after Mr. Gleason had been remanded to his quarters to "sober up," and the adjutant dispatched to Captain Nevins with the intimation that if his too audible imprecations were not stopped he and his tent would be transferred to a corner of the corral, did Camp Cooke learn that Major Starke had sent a fly by night courier after Blake, recalling his troop; that it had halted on the stream ten miles above the post, resting all afternoon and evening, had ridden silently in toward camp an hour after midnight, and, after receiving certain instructions from Starke and a visit from Loring, had gone on southward, silently as it came, accompanied by the presiding officer of the court, who hated day marches and the sun scorched desert, and leaving escort for those who were still to follow.

There was mild surprise in camp, but untold wrath and vituperation along the line to Sancho's, for from far and near the choicest renegades of Arizona had been flocking to the neighborhood, only to find themselves outwitted by the engineer. Not half an hour after the burst of blasphemy from Nevins' tent informed the camp that something more had happened to agitate anew his sorely ruffled temper, and the story flew from lip to lip that it was because the precious jewels were already on their way to Frisco, guarded presumably by Blake and 40 carbines, a swarthy half breed courier spurred madly southward from the outlying roost on the borders of the reservation, with the warning that it would be a useless risk to meddle with the Teniente Loring's party when it came along—there were no valuables with it. They had been sent with the cavalry hours before the dawn.

Yes, even the sealed record of the court must have been sent at that time, too, for at 10 o'clock in the morning, when Colonel Turnbull and Mr. Loring mounted and gravely saluted the cap raising group of officers as they rode away from the major's quarters, it was observed that Loring had not even saddlebags, and the major's striker admitted that he had hoisted the lieutenant's valise to the pommel of a trooper's saddle at 2 o'clock in the morning. Various were the theories and conjectures at the sutler's all the rest of the day as to the information possessed by Lieutenant Loring which led to such extreme precaution.

The major was close mouthed and for him rather stern. He held aloof from his juniors all day long and seemed to be keeping an eye and ear attent on Nevins. That officer's conduct was a puzzle. Six months before he was the personification of all that was lavish, hospitable, good natured, extravagant. Everybody was apparently welcome to the best he had. Then came the collapse, his arrest, his flight, his capture and confinement, his laughing defiance of his accusers, until he found how much more they knew than he supposed, his metaphorical prostration at the feet of his judges, his humility, repentance, suffering and sacrifice, his pledge of future atonement, his protestations of love for his long suffering wife, his surrender of his valuables for her benefit, his meekness of mien until the court had concluded his case and gone; then his sudden paroxysm of bold, truculent, defiant manner, his midnight breach of arrest, which had leaked out through the guard that was promptly sent forth to fetch him in; then his demand for the return of his property and his furious outburst on learning that Loring had taken him at his word and sent it without delay by the safest possible hands.

That proved an exciting day. The adjutant's message had temporarily awed and quieted the man, but toward 3 p. m. the mail carrier arrived from the Gila with his sack of letters and papers. He reported having been stopped only five miles out from Sancho's by masked men, who quickly examined his big leather bag, silently pointed to a curious mark—a dab of paint that must have got on it while he was there at the ranch—and sent him ahead without a word being spoken. He saw other men, but they passed him by in wide circuit. He met Lieutenant Blake and the troop, and the lieutenant bade him hurry. So the letters were delivered nearly two hours earlier than usual. In the mail were a dozen missives for Captain Nevins—two in dainty feminine superscription postmarked San Francisco, several that might be bills, others that were local, one postmarked Tucson, and one slipped in at Sancho's.

The major himself looked these envelopes over as though he thought their contents ought to be examined, but even a convicted man had his rights, and the letters were sent to him. In less than three minutes thereafter the hot, breathless air of the long afternoon was suddenly burdened with another eruption of oaths and ravings. One or two women sitting in the shade of their canvas shelters across the parade clapped their hands to their ears and ran indoors, and the major's orderly dashed full tilt for the guard. Half an hour later Captain Nevins was escorted to a new abode, a tent pitched just outside, not within, the corral, and there he was left to swear at will with the sentry on No. 4 warned to call the corporal of the guard if the gentleman for one moment quit the seclusion of his solitary quarters.

And this was the status of affairs when the sun went down at the close of the third day after adjournment.

When it rose upon the fourth, all was quiet about the impetuous captain's canvas home—too quiet, thought the officer of the day after his visit to the guard at reveille, and therefore did he untie the cords that fastened the flaps in front and peer within. Five minutes later two new prisoners were placed in charge of the guard, of which they had been members during the night—Privates Poague and Pritzlaff of the first and second reliefs respectively. But the aggregate gain in the column of "in arrest or confinement" was only one, for Captain Nevins had disappeared.

Of course there was a rush to the outlying ranch whose few remaining occupants grinned exasperatingly and shrugged their shoulders, but gave no information. Of course a courier was sent scurrying away on the trail of the cavalry, but he came back sore footed at night, relieved of his horse, arms and equipments and thanking God for his life. Of course another courier was started by night to make the perilous ride to the Salado and order the instant return of at least a platoon, but nothing more was heard of him for a week, and it was nearly five days before these desert bound exiles of Camp Cooke got another atom of reliable news from Sancho's, and meantime wondrous other things had happened.

It did not take long to determine the means by which Nevins had succeeded in getting away. There was little indeed to prevent his doing so if he saw fit to go, for unless sentries were posted on all four sides of his tent he might crawl off in the darkness unobserved. The sentry on No. 4 had received orders merely to summon the corporal and report to him if the officer ventured to leave his tent, and as No. 4 was a post over a hundred yards in length and the sentry responsible for all of it there was no right or reason in demanding of him that he should give his undivided attention to what might be going on close to the corral.

In fact, by removing Nevins from the inner quadrangle of the camp and placing him outside the walls Major Starke had made it all the easier for him to skip a second time if he saw fit to do so, but Starke reasoned that Nevins still had some hope that congressional influence would save him from dismissal, and therefore would not peril his chances by a second flight. Starke did not know that Nevins was honest at least in one statement—that he expected dismissal. His fate was sealed; his pay was confiscated to square shortages. There was actually nothing to be gained by staying at Cooke in virtual confinement perhaps eight or ten weeks until his case could be decided in Washington and the orders received back in Arizona. It actually simplified matters in many ways for Nevins to go.

Somebody, for instance, would have to pay the cost of his subsistence all that time at Cooke. Thrice a day his meals were sent to him from the little bachelors' mess, already sorely taxed for the "entertainment" of the members of the court, and the four poor fellows who constituted that frontier club had been only too glad when its members from other stations insisted that they should pay their share of the long three weeks' burden on the culinary department. But Nevins now was penniless, so he said, and why should impecunious infantry subalterns support in idleness a disgraced and virtually dismissed officer? Yet that is precisely what that government compelled them to do—or starve him.

Thinking it all over during the day, Major Starke concluded that at least Camp Cooke had something to be thankful for, and sending for Privates Poague and Pritzlaff he sternly rebuked them for their probable negligence (for "discipline must be maintained"), and with dire threats of what they might expect in the way of punishment if they transgressed in the slightest way for six months to come he bade them go back to duty, released, which they did, each with his tongue in his cheek and a wink of the inner eye, as they strode off together and went grinning to the guard tents for their blankets.

All the same, Starke wished to know whither Nevins had gone and whether anything new had started him. This time no horse or mule had disappeared, but the tracks of two quadrupeds were found on the mesa coming from "Rat Hell," as Captain Post, who had done time in Libby, named the gambling ranch outside the reservation, to a point within 100 yards of the corral, and thence bore away southward straight as the flight of the crow. Two reprobates in the captain's company declared that the black bearded clerk arrested with Nevins, but released because he was a civilian over whom the military had no jurisdiction, had been over at the ranch all the previous day. Sentry Poague frankly admitted that he had heard horses' hoofs out on the mesa and voices in the captain's tent, but saw nobody crossing his post and couldn't be expected to in the pitchy darkness. Whither Nevins went was therefore a matter that could only be conjectured in the light of later events. How he went was a matter of little moment. It was good riddance to bad rubbish, said Starke, until at last the next mail came from Sancho's. For nearly five days the major declared himself content if he never saw Nevins again. Then he turned to and prayed with all his soul that he might catch him—if only for five minutes.

Proceedings of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, N. J., held on Thursday, March 2, 1899, at 2 30 p. m.

Roll-call showed all members present—17.

The minutes of the previous meeting, (reading of bills being omitted), were on motion approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

From Freeholder Adams, as follows, viz:

To the Union County Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen: The township committee of Cranford, N. J., have made a request that the board maintain and furnish electric lights on the county road through the township, and have sent this communication to me through the township clerk, who was instructed to advise me and request same done.

Very respectfully,
E. K. Adams.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell received and placed on file.

County Attorney Codington reported in the matter of bill of James Mitchell's Sons, for burial of Peter Smith, etc., "that in his judgment the county was not liable for payment of said bill. Said Smith had been employed in Linden township, and when taken sick had been removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital, where he died. His body was unburied for three or four days, the city of Elizabeth refusing to assume the expense. County Physician Westcott was then called, and he gave a permit for Smith's burial. In this act Mr Codington thought the physician acted without authority. His authority is to investigate deaths due to accidents, and in cases where no physician had been in attendance upon the person who died. Smith died of natural causes, and in the hospital, where physicians could certify to it. In such instances the county physician is not called to act, and if the deceased is a pauper the burial expense must be paid by the city or township where the person had settlement.

Freeholder Farrell was of the opinion that the county physician had made the county responsible by ordering the burial, and he did not believe it good policy for the county to stand a suit under such circumstances.

Freeholder Roll could not agree with his colleague, and said the board, in the face of the opinion of its attorney, could not order the bill paid.

After some further discussion it was ordered, on motion of Freeholder King, that the report of the county attorney be received, that the matter lie over until next meeting, and that the clerk write to the county physician and request further particulars.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

By the committee on legal questions and county road committee, as follows:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county:

Gentlemen: Your committee, to whom was referred the communication regarding the assuming control of the lighting of Westfield avenue, in Westfield township, would respectfully report that after duly considering the matter that in our opinion no action should be taken by your Honorable Body in the matter, and that the Clerk of Board be authorized to so notify the Township Committee of Westfield township.

Signed,
Chr. Ehrich, F. T. Higgins, J. Robison, committee on legal questions.
J. Martin Roll, W. H. Swain, B. King, W. H. Hulskamper, county road committee.

After some discussion the report, on motion of Freeholder Farrell, was adopted without dissent.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Swain:

Resolved, That the account of Frank Murphy, amounting to $107, for building bridge at Union avenue and Kyrthoc place, Summit, N. J., be paid when properly audited by committee.

Freeholder Brucklacher moved the adoption of the resolution, which was duly seconded.

In reply to Freeholder King it was shown that no committee had been appointed on said bridge, whereupon Freeholder Bruchlacher withdrew his motion.

TROUBLE ABOUT A NAME

NORTH ROSELLE CITIZEN OPPOSED TO NEW ORANGE IDEA.

Promoters of Latter Town Imported Their Workmen to Outvote the Townsmen—Want Roselle Park for a Name

Roselle, March 23—The property owners and citizens of the north side of Roselle, which comprises the First election distcict of Union township, have for years been endeavoring to procure a system of sewerage, and have been envious of that borough on the south side, but would never agree to become a part of that borough.

The New Orange Industrial Association came to their aid and offered to give $1,000 for the erection of a town hall if the borough was formed and callsd New Orange. Accordingly a bill was drafted and presented to the Legislature for the organization of a new borough.

A meeting of the citizens was held Saturday evening, and when the question of name came up many citizens left the hall and refused to vote. Dennis Long, of Union, brought thirty-seven workmen who live in Brooklyn to the meeting. These men were engaged in building the New Orange Industrial school. They outvoted the citizens, and the name of New Orange was adopted. The citizens are greatly wrought up over the action of Mr. Long, and it is claimed if the bill does pass the Legislature for the organization of the borough of New Orange it will be impossible to find men who will serve as a Board of Aldermen.

The people of the north side want the borough called Roselle Park Borough.

TO REORGANIZE THE THIRD.

Trouble Over the Return of the Volunteers to the National Guard.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 23.—Steps are about to be taken to reorganize the Third New Jersey as a National Guard regiment, and Company C, Phil Kearny Guard, of this city, will take the intiative, having called a meeting for this week. Whether the regiment will be reorganized under the officers who commanded it during the recent Spanish-American War is extremely doubtful.

Company C will select its late commander, Captain Parks, while Com-E will stand by Captain McCarthy, but the other companies have all had disagreements with their commandants.

Colonel Lee, since his return from the South, has visited the regimental headquarters daily, as also has Paymaster Compton, of Rahway, but the other staff officers rather fight shy of the place.

Mr. Pitney's Record.

Mahlon Pitney, Senator from Morris county, made no friends by his vote in the New Jersey Senate against the 5 per cent. interest bill.—Plainfield News.

It is not only Mr. Pitney's vote on this bill, but his whole action as Senator has been against the interests of the masses. He voted against the weekly payment of wages. He, by his vote and action, has strangled every bill in the committee of which he is chairman that was calulated to help the people, notably the bill limiting the term of grants for riparian lands, to twenty-five years. This was a most just measure and deserved to pass, but corporate interests said No! and hence the bill never came to light. And yet this aristocratic gentleman poses on the stump as the friend of the people. About election time he talks of the dear people, the oppressed miners of Morris and the burdened farmer, in a voice choked with sympathy and emotion. I am prompted to quote as applicable to Mr. Pitney the following:

When a man gets into office
Things he thought were bad before.
Such as lying, cheating, stealing,
Don't seem wicked any more;
He assembles with the bosses,
Nothing's wrong that's done to win.
And you've got to grin and bear it,
For you helped to put him in.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

The season for the basket ball team of the Y. M. C. A. is rapidly nearing its end. The only game now scheduled is for Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium with the embryo mining engineers of Columbia College.

There seems to be a mistaken idea prevailing that The Daily Press blames the girls of the basket ball team of the Plainfield High School for the false information given regarding the score of the game in East Orange. Such is not the case. The information was given to the Press by one outside the High School, although connected in a way with the team. What the Press did criticize was the secrecy shown by the High School girls regarding the score, as it did not seem the right spirit with which to meet defeat. Incidentally, it might be remarked that the trouble would never have occured had the result of the game been frankly announced in the first place.

AROUND THE BASES.

Dunellen is already making arrangments for a strong baseball nine this season. Some of the old players are coming back and a number of new men are candidates for the positions.

Arthur W. Lederer, captain and catcher of the Plainfield High School team last year, is now a candidate for the freshman nine at Princeton University. He is well spoken of and seems likely to earn a place in the field.

Ernest Rapalje, who formerly attended the Plainfield High School and has many friends here, is a prominent candidate for the position of pitcher on the Rutgers College team. Rapalje has played on the Rutgers nine for the last two years and is considered one of the best players of the college. Rapalje also has quite a reputation as a football player at Rutgers.

Young Brampton, who has been the star pitcher for the Bound Brook team for several seasons past, is now trying for a place on the New York National League team. Brampton is the son of the justice of the peace in Bound Brook. He is now at Charleston, S. C., with the New York team. Several days ago he pitched on the University of South Carolina team against the New Yorks and was batted heavily. New York won the game 30 to 1. While Brampton is a good little pitcher, it is feared that he will not make the New York nine this season.

WHIST

The annual whist congress of the New Jersey Whist Association will be held at the rooms of the Jersey City Club, in that city, beginning this afternoon and continuing tomorrow and Saturday. The Park Club will be represented by the "pony" team, although several members of the veteran team from the Park Club will be present. The "pony" team will enter the contest for the state trophy.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

It was very evident, judging from the limited attendance at Music Hall last night, that there is little interest in Cuba or any other place in the country. The lecture by Miss Anna Northend Benjamin deserved much better patronage than was bestowed, for it was first-class in every particular, but it is doubtful if there will be any more of these exhibitions in Music Hall, as Manager Maze Edwards is satisfied there's no money in such and the Plainfield public want something more enlivening.

* * * * *

The Sawtelle Dramatic Company will play all next week at the Stillman Music Hall, producing Monday evening "The Dangers of a Great City." This company played Trenton last week and the True American said: "Few of the popular price theatrical organizations that visit Trenton have received more popularity than the Sawtelle Dramatic Company, which played an engagement at Taylor Opera House last week. While it played to such business as any manager would feel well satisfied with on the occasion of its visit here last season, yet this year it far surpassed last year's business. The company is a capable and well balanced one, presenting a repertoire of strong and popular plays, each one of which is adequately staged, and presented in a thoroughly artistic manner. J. Al. Sawtelle and Miss Jessie Sawtelle, who enact the leading roles, are actors of experience and ability, and their interpretations were altogether pleasing. For its leading comedy parts Mr. Sawtelle has been fortunate in securing so ready and natural a fun maker as George H. Summers, who kept his audience in roars of laughter whenever he was on the stage. One of the strongest features of the company is its specialty numbers, which are new and of high order. Trenton's popular price patrons have nothing but praise for the Sawtelle company."

Mr. Graeder was obliged to go home and he will not be able to work for some time. He is very weak from loss of blood.

WHAT! NOT TIME FOR SUCH WORK AS THIS?

Governor Voorhees Undecided About Trust Legislation.

HE HAS BEEN TOO BUSY.

RECOGNIZES TRUSTS AS A STUPENDOUS EVIL THOUGH.

Declares That No One Has Told Him That the Trusts are Working Injury to the People of the State—Says He Does Not See Any Movement Against the Trust—Attorney-General Says Little.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Trenton, March 24—Governor Foster M. Voorhees, who in his inaugural message hinted that the rapid formation of trusts, with the seal of the State as an approving mark, was a subject worthy of special investigation, was asked his views on Attorney-General Griggs' letter.

"I do not see what I can do," he said. "The Legislature is in session and has several anti trust bills under consideratton. I still hold to the opinion that the matter is acquiring such stupendous proportions that it might be a subject worthy of special investigation. I did have it in mind to make some inquiry into the subject, but the business of the Legislature has been so pressing that I have had no time. It is such a wide subject that I do not care to jump at conclusions.

"Nobody has presented to me any facts that indicate that these combinations of interests are working any hardships, such as raising the price of the necessaries of life. In fact, the trend of information, as I hear it, is to the contrary—that they cheapen these necessaries.

"There may be under the surface conditions that we are not familiar with which may sooner or later lead up to results that will not be desirable. Other States imitate our laws and are even going to make their laws more attractive to these combinations, which has had the effect of giving an indorsement of the legal integrity of the laws of New Jersey.

"We all know the effects of these laws from a legal standpoint. Their moral effect is only hinted at by some, and it is matter of conjecture by others. I stand ready to hear any statements of facts that any of these combinations of interest are in compact to increase the burdens of the poor people. In the absence of any information on the subject I must say that I do not see the beginning of a movement against these trusts."

Attorney General Grey was asked whether he would move against any of the trusts.

"I never say what I am going to do," he replied, "until I am sure what I am to do. All I know of the subject of combinations and trusts I communicated to the Legislature a few days ago."

SOCIETY WAS OUT TO HONOR MRS. MYERS' GUEST

CHARMING TEA GIVEN YESTERDAY.

Miss Stillman, of London, England, was the Guest of Honor—Beautiful House Decorations.

A very charming tea was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, of 139 East Seventh street, in honor of her cousin, Miss Stillman, of London, England. Mrs. Myers and Miss Stillman were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Myers' mother, Mrs. Charles E. Stillman, Mrs. William Stillman, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman and Mrs. John Doull Miller. Some of these ladies alternately dispensing tea and chocolate in the tea room. The other attendants in the tea room were: Misses Ginna, Dumont, Mary Wells, Dorothy Wells, Margaret McCutchen, and Miss Stillman from Elizabeth. The decorations were Easter lilies and the prevailing colors in the tea room, white and green. A large number of guests were present.

HEROIC ACT SAVED THE LIFE OF A LITTLE BOY.

FELL FROM SECOND STORY WINDOW

Driver Townley Caught Him in His Arms—The Boy Not Injured in the Least.

William H. Townley, driver of Alert Hose Company's wagon, performed a heroic act this morning at 10 o'clock that was out of his ordinary routine of duty, and thereby probably save the life of three-year-old James Hansen, Jr.

The child's parents live in a flat in the Cole building, adjoining the West Second street engine house. Mrs. Hansen left her boy in one of the rooms on the side of the building for a moment while she stepped into the kitchen. The window was open and it is evident that the child climbed to the window sill, where he lost his balance and fell out. At any rate Driver Townley was nearly under the window when he heard a child's piercing scream He looked up and saw the child toppling out of the window, which is thirty feet from the ground. He rushed under the spot where the child was to fall. As the boy, who weighs about 35 pounds, dropped, Townley held out his arms and dexterously caught the little fellow without so much as giving the child a serious shock.

A moment after the mother appeared in the room and was startled to find the boy gone. She looked out of the window and was quietly told of the circumstances by Townley.

The parents thought it best to call Dr. Hedges, but the latter, after seeing the child, said that he was not injured in the least.

NEW PARSONAGE IN USE.

SUPPER GIVEN IN HOME DESIGNED FOR GRACE M. E. PASTOR.

The Affair Given Under the Auspices of the Epworth League—Largely Patronized—To be Continued This Evening.

It was a proud time for the members of Grace M. E. church last evening when for the first time the new parsonage was opened to the public by means of a supper given under the auspices of the Epworth League. It was also a proud time for the pastor, Rev. G. W. Gardner and his wife, who are to occupy the handsome building after conference, which takes place the second week in April. This building was started many months ago and all but the furnishing was completed yesterday morning. It is a substantial structure, three stories high, and presents an attractive appearance adjoining the church on Park place.

The supper given last evening, and which will be continued this evening, was arranged under the chairmanship of Mrs. Most and an excellent corps of assistants, for the purpose of assisting in the furnishing of the house.

A feature of the affair is the sale of housefurnishing goods which is conducted in one of the rooms upstairs. All the things needed by Pastor Gardner and his wife were purchased and placed in this room. Visitors are invited to enter the room, where they are persuaded to make a purchase. They not only leave their money with Mrs. E. E. Winckler, who is in charge, but also their purchase, therby contributing something toward the furnishing.

The house decorations, consisting of greens and flowers, were arranged under the supervision of Andrew Wilson and A. A. Taft. Dyckman Winckler assisted by William Schuck, had charge of the serving of ice cream.

Mrs. Most is chairman of the supper committee and her assistants are Miss Clara Steiner, Miss Mamie Steiner, Miss Marguerite Schuck, Mrs E. E. Winckler, Miss Agnes Tingley, Miss Carrie Tingley, Miss Della Voehl, Miss Ada Woolston, Miss Lizzie Conroy, Miss May Conroy, Miss Nellie Vermeule, Miss Bertha Stevens, Miss Minnie Marsh, Mrs. Hardin, Mrs. Stine, Mrs. DeMott and L. A. Hummer.

During the evening a programme of music was rendered by Miss May Conroy, Miss Mamie Steiner and Dyckman Winckler, and this proved to be a pleasing diversion. Among those who deserve mention for assistance are Mrs. J. H. Carney, Mrs. Voehl and E. E. Winckler.

The contractors who helped to erect the house include Pope Bros., carpenters; Higgins & Tunison, masons; A. D. Phillips, electrician; A. M. Griffen, plumbing; Carney Bros., heating and ventilating; R. A. Dilts, painting. The architect was O. S. Teal.

Had a Cakewalk.

Miss Aimee Emmons, of Prospect place, entertained eighteen of her friends Thursday evening in honor of her sixteenth birthday. It was a salamagundi party. A cakewalk was introduced later in the evening and furnished much merriment.

OFFICIAL RESULTS OF BOWLING LEAGUE.

Interesting Facts Regarding the Finish.

THE INDIVIDUAL WINNERS.

SECRETARY F. O. BALL GIVES FINAL TABLES OF CONTESTS.

F. O. Ball Stands Fourth in the Contest for Highest Individual Averages and for Average Number of Spares—Dr. Thiers Stands Next of Park Club Team—The Average Scores.

While the tournament of the Central Journal Bowling League was over several weeks ago, the results of the individual contests have been watched for with considerable interest. F. O Ball, secretary of the League, has now furnished The Daily Press with the official results of the tournament, including the individual contests for the highest average scores and the highest average number of spares.

It is interesting to note that the team that won the championship did not roll the highest average score. The Parks were well down in the list and yet managed to stand second. It is a fact that has already been noted that the Parks and Roselles won oftener with moderate scores than by any remarkable exhibition of bowling The following table shows the averages of the teams:

	Games Won.	Games Lost.	Team Average.	High Score.
Roselle	25	11	794.86	904
Park	22	14	776.68	905
Elizabeth	20	16	797.3	911
N. B. B. C.	19	17	797.63	955
Westfield	18	18	796.86	915
N. J. A. C.	16	20	785.88	914
Cranford	6	30	748.55	825

When it came to star individual work, the Parks did not do anything sensational. As was eminently proper F. O. Ball, the captain of the Park Club team, set an excellent example of steady bowling to his team. He stood fourth in rank for the highest average score. Following is a table of the leaders with the clubs and average scores:

INDIVIDUAL SCORES.

Pope, Elizabeth	172.84
Bodine, N. B. B. C.	167.16
Warner, Roselle	165.30
Ball, Park	164.61

A $12 CALF ENTAILS $500 LEGAL COSTS

Trouble Started Over an Apparently Frivilous Matter.

FOUR LAWYERS ENGAGED

CASE DECIDED IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFF IN DISTRICT COURT.

James McCarthy and Edward Coughlan Were the Litigants—Calf Was Put in Pasture Lot by the Former. But Coughlan Claimed it as His at the End of Last Summer—Replevins and Replevins.

An innocent looking black calf which is claimed by two neighbors, James McCarthy and Edward Coughlan, has been causing no end of trouble between them, and has plunged the men into law suits that already have cost both litigants nearly $500. The last chapter in the case was presented yesterday when a jury of six of Elizabeth's business men, sitting in Judge Atwater's court, gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

The calf is now worth $25. At the time the trouble started, six months ago, it would have brought $12 in the market. Councilman Walter L. Hetfield represented the successful litigant, while the defendant had an imposing array of three lawyers, City Judge W. N. Runyon, Counsellor W. S. Angleman and Attorney G. W. V. Moy.

Last spring McCarthy hired pasture of Charles Hyde for two heifers. When November came and McCarthy went to take out his two heifers, Coughlan, who claims to have put one calf in the pasture in May, but who never hired pasture, so witnesses said, had taken one of them out. McCarthy found the calf in Coughlan's barn and demanded it as his. Couglan was equally as positive that it was his, so McCarthy brought an action before Justice Mosher for the value of the calf.

Acting on his lawyer's advice McCarthy discontinued that case, as he wanted the animal, not the money, and then began replevin proceedings in the District Court at Elizabeth. They replevined the calf and kept it twenty-four hours when Coughlan replevined the animal, and has it today.

When the case came to trial the court decided that McCarthy owned the calf. W. S. Angleman, Coughlan's counsel, made an application for a new trial upon expert testimony as to the calf's age, and the application was granted. That came up yesterday. Twenty witnesses were sworn and the trial lasted all day. At night the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for the value of the calf, $25, and $25 damages.

Expert testimony was given in the case, and the exhibits consisted of six wax impressions taken of cows' mouths, to show the jury how the animal's age can be told by looking at the teeth. Dr. Pocock and Mr. Hetfield took an impression of the calf's mouth, which showed the calf's under jaw with the eight "milk teeth" as they are called. From Adam Fritt's collection, five more plates were shown, taken of cows six, ten and eighten years old. These were shown to convince the jury that the calf in question was two years old, as McCarthy claimed, instead of eighteen months as the other said.

MISTOOK CARBOLIC ACID FOR HARMLESS LINIMENT.

MRS. ABBOTT WAS BADLY BURNED.

Mrs. C. F Abbott Met With Serious Accident Monday That Still Confines Her to Her Bed.

Through a mistake in taking a bottle of carbolic acid for one containing liniment, Mrs. Charles F. Abbott, of Stelle avenue, is still confined to her bed after suffering great agony. The accident happened Monday.

Mrs. Abbott had been suffering from rheumatism and has been bathing the afflicted parts with a special liniment. Monday she took a bottle which she supposed contained the liniment and bathed her side and thigh with it. The bottle proved to contain strong carbolic acid.

The acid ate into the flesh, leaving it very painful and raw. Her hand was in the same condition. The mistake was discovered too late. The injury was a very painful one and Mrs. Abbott was compelled to retire to her bed, swathed in bandages. It will be sometime before the wounds will heal.

YOUNG CHRISTIANS REVIEW PAST YEAR.

Annual Meeting of the Christian Endeavor Local Union.

MANY GOOD THINGS DONE.

MISS FLORENCE G. HAWKINS IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT AGAIN.

There Are Now Sixteen Societies in the Union Representing a Total Membership of 764—Brief Reports From the Various Superintendents—After Business a Sociable Was Held.

Three hundred Christian Endeavorers gathered in the First Presbyterian church last night to attend the annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Local Union. Almost every society in the Union responded at the roll-call, which goes to prove that interest in Endeavor affairs is just as deep as ever.

The president, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, presided, and on the pulpit platform with her sat the secretary, Miss Ernestine C. Smith, and Rev. C. L. Goodrich. The meeting opened with a service of song led by Rev. C. E. Herring. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist, was accompanied on the violin by Arthur Mosher.

After the devotional exercises, led by Rev. Mr. Goodrich and Rev. Mr. Herring, the business session was opened. An amendment to the constitution, proposed at a previous meeting, came up to be voted upon last night, and was adopted unanimously. The amendment was to the effect that "all former presidents of the Union and junior superintendents become members of the executive committee of the Union."

The secretary's report, written and presented by Miss Smith, was a straightforward statement of the year's history of the union, and was one of the best reports of this kind ever read. The secretary took a general review of the past twelve months, told what the Endeavorers had done and gave them a few words of advice as to what they should aim to do in the future. There are now seventeen societies in the union, representing eighty-six committees, with a total of 764 members. Seven societies reported decided progress in their work during the year. The report of the condition of the treasury showed that the receipts had been $60 11 and the expenditures $56 36, leaving a small balance of $3.75 to begin the new year with.

Mrs. K. L Remson, as chairman of the nominating committee, presented her report in which she proposed the following to fill the offices: President, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, of the Park Avenue Baptist Society; first vice-president, Robert F. Bogardus, of the Presbyterian Society, Dunellen; second vice-president, A. V. Searing, Jr., of the First Presbyterian Society; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ernestine C. Smith, of the Seventh Day Baptist Society. E. E. Anthony took charge of this part of the programme and put the question. The report was received, and the officers nominated elected, the secretary casting the ballot. Miss Hawkins, who was reelected president, thanked the Endeavorers for electing her again to the office, and told how much she loved the Christian Endeavor work.

Brief reports from I. W. Travell, superintendent of the social department; from Mrs. W. S Lowry, superintendent of the junior work; and from Mrs. D. M. Runyon, superintendent of the missionary department, finished the business. All were then invited to adjourn to the chapel where a sociable was held. Miss Sarah Curry, matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, Rev. Mr. Fox, pastor of the Mission church in New York, where many of the poor people who are brought out here come from, and Mr. Torrey, a New York banker, who is interested in the work, were present, and the Endeavors were enabled to meet them.

The sociable was a success. It was under the auspices of the social department of the union, of which Mr. Travell is chairman. Miss Annie Wyckoff had charge of the sociable last night, and was assisted by two members from each society. Mr. Travell was chairman of the temporary reception committee, and was assisted by three members from each society. These committees were distinguished by white badges which they wore.

Judge William N. Runyon and Charles E. Lewis sang a duet together during the religious service, and also rendered solos at the sociable.

—The regular Friday evening Lenten services will be held in St. Mary's church tonight at 8 o'clock.

DEATH CAME WHILE PUTTING ON HIS SHOES.

WAS STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

Complained of a Severe Pain in His Head—Didn't Live Till Doctor Came.

Richard Schiller, of 442 West Fourth street, a block-cutter by trade, died suddenly this morning of apoplexy. He was about fifty-two years of age, and leaves a wife and one child.

Schiller arose this morning as usual, ate his breakfast and was drawing his shoes on preparatory to going to work when he began to complain of an intense pain in the back of his head at the base of his brain. Mrs. Schiller applied hot water and did other things to relieve her husband's suffering, but to no purpose. Dr. VanHorn was sent for, but when he arrived Schiller was dead.

Schiller was born in Germany. He came to this country when a young man, and for over fifteen years has lived in Plainfield, and been employed in Edward Love's wall paper factory. He had no intimation of illness, and last night was out among his friends. This morning, too, he was well, until he began to complain about the pain in his head.

Schiller was a member of the Sangerbund Society, and attended the German Reformed church. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

WOMAN BIT THE HAND OF HER NEIGHBOR.

The Trouble Caused by Drinking Beer in Ross' Apartments.

SENT TO JAIL FOR 40 DAYS.

MRS. KATHERINE CAHILL DEFIED MAJESTY OF A COP.

Cahill Was Enjoying a Quaff of the Amber Fluid When His Better Half Appeared on the Scene—Ordered to Depart, But Failed to Go—Fight Ensued and all Hands in Police Court This Morning.

Mrs. Katherine Cahill objected strongly to her husband drinking beer with the man down stairs. Patrick Cahill was not pleased with his wife's interruption. The man downstairs resented her refusal to depart without delay and applied a little force. Mrs. Cahill left the imprint of her teeth upon his hand. Then the man downstairs, whose real name is William Ross, had to go to Edward S. F. Randolph's pharmacy and have the wound cauterized. This was, in substance, the story that was rehearsed before City Judge William N. Runyon this morning.

Patrick Cahill and Wm. Ross, with their respective families, occupy a house on South Second street. Cahill has the upper floor and Ross resides downstairs. Last night the Cahill children made so much noise that Ross felt obliged to draw the attention of Cahill to the fact. Cahill returned from the Pood Tool Works, where he is a faithful employe, shortly after 9 o'clock, and was requested to step into Ross' rooms. He did so and a pint of beer was forthcoming.

While the neighbors talked it over Mrs. Cahill appeared and ordered her husband home. He told her that it was time for her to be at home. Then words passed between Mrs. Cahill and Ross. Refusing to depart when he told her to go, Ross felt constrained to put her out. She bit him. She says he threw her off the porch.

Mrs. Cahill summoned Patrolman Totten and asked him to arrest Ross and her husband, claiming that they were drunk and beating her. Totten investigated and decided that Mrs. Cahill was the cause of the trouble. She became abusive and defied the majesty of the law. Totten locked her up.

This morning, Judge Runyon heard the story and took the policeman's view of the case. Mrs. Cahill's excuse for her behavior was that she didn't want her husband spending his money in beer for Ross to drink. The Judge sentenced her to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for 40 days. It will be the imprisonment.

A HUNDRED REASONS

Can be given why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best and most effectual cure for every form of indigestion.

They are in the tablet form, which retains their good qualities indefinitely, while liquid preparations become stale and useless with age.

They are convenient, can be carried in the pocket and taken when needed. They are pleasant to take.

After each meal dissolve one or two of them in the mouth, and mingling with the food, they constitute a perfect digestive, absolutely safe for the most sensitive stomach.

They digest the food before it has time to ferment, thus preventing the formation of gas and keeping the blood pure and free from the poisonous products of fermented, half digested food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the only remedy designed especially for the cure of stomach troubles and nothing else.

One disease, one remedy, the successful physician of today is the specialist, the successful medicine is the medicine prepared especially for one disease.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets make the complexion clear by keeping the blood pure.

They increase flesh by digesting flesh forming foods.

A whole package taken at one time would not hurt one, but would simply be a waste of good material.

Over six thousand men and women in the State of Michigan alone, have been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia by the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package.

ASSEMBLY TO DISBAND

The Cuban Mob of That Name Will Quit This Week.

GOMEZ COMES OUT AHEAD

The Assembly Adopts Resolutions Which Indicate that it Will Get in Line With the American Policy Before Final Dissolution—Spaniards Flocking to Cuba.

Washington, March 24.—Advices from Cuba received by Senor Quesada, which he regards as trustworthy, are to the effect that the Cuban Assembly will dissolve before the present week ends, probably on Saturday. Senor Qusada regards this as a most satisfactory outcome, as the dissolution is brought about voluntarily and without that agitation which enforced action might have caused. It will clear the way, in his judgment, to a pacific adjustment of the affairs of Cuba.

At an important meeting of Cuban generals it was decided to notify the Assembly that the Cuban army must be immediately disbanded and its arms surrendered, and the soldiers allowed to accept the money offered to them by the United States government. Gen. Mayia Rodrigeuz, the only prominent general who favored the Assembly, after a long discussion decided to join the other generals in their efforts to bring about disbandment. Gens. Betancourt and Rojas were appointed officially to notify the Assembly of the action taken. The generals also decided that, no matter what answer the Assembly might make, they would accept in behalf of the army the offering from the United States, the money to be distributed by Governor-General Brooke. The meeting further declared that notwithstanding the action of the Assembly in deposing Gen. Gomez from his position of Commander-in-Chief of the Cuban forces, it recognized him as the only chief of the Cubans. The Assembly, after receiving the resolution, adjourned until Saturday.

The Adjutant-General has received from Gen. Brooke two communications which that officer has received from the Cuban Assembly. The first announces "the Assembly's profound acknowledgment of the honors paid to the remains of Major-Gen. Calixto Garcia Iniguez." The other declares, "in the name of the liberating army and revolutionary party of Cuba," that it shares in the grief of the whole American people over the Maine disaster."

Many Spaniards Arrive.

Havana, March 24.—A total of 1,000 strangers arrived here yesterday, a record-breaking number. Six hundred were Spaniards, and came on one ship. There are 6,000 more Spaniards on the sea or about to embark for this island, and their coming means a revival of the industries, for the Spanish, and not the Cubans, do all the hard work on the island.

One of the best known steamship men of Havana, who is as well known in New York as in Mexico, summed up the Gomez incident in a strictly matter-of-fact manner to-day. He had attended an informal meeting of anti-Assemblyites and at its conclusion said: "I will tell you the whole thing in a nutshell, providing you do not use my name, for I have business connections with both factions, and cannot afford to go before the people as a critic. In a word, the members of the Assembly are against annexation, and Gen. Gomez is, if the truth be known, in favor of it. So are nine-tenths of the business men of the island. Well, the Assembly recognizing that the United States had some troubles of its own in the Philippines, came to the decision that the States were scared, and that the present would be about the best time to enforce any demands if they were to be enforced at all. I have spent twenty years in the United States, was raised and educated there, and know the Americans well. The members of the Assembly do not. I know that it is impossible to scare the Americans, but the Assembly has that to learn.

"I also know, which its members do not, that Gen. Brooke can carry out the wishes of his government more readily and successfully than ever and for these reasons: First, because he has had a practical illustration that the United States Government must do something at once to protect the general masses here, and secondly that the pretext for which his government has been waiting is at hand, and thirdly, that the Cuban people have backed up Gomez. I do not know what the American Government, through Gen. Brooke, will do within the next few days, but if it wishes to please the Cubans as a people it will demand the immediate dissolution of the Assembly, the unarming of the Cuban army and the appointment of Gen. Gomez as Civil Governor.

To Keep Up Freight Rates.

Washington, March 24.—A number of railway presidents and traffic managers representing Western trunk lines held a long conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission in this city to-day to consider the freight rate situation.

The object of the conference is not only to discuss some past violations of law in regard to rate cutting, but to devise means of maintaining rates in the future. This is a season of especial anxiety in the West on account of the fact that navigation on the Great Lakes will soon open. A large part of the carrying trade will then be diverted from the railroads to the lakes, and the temptation to cut rates will be increased. It is to insure honest cooperation between the several lines in order to maintain rates under all conditions that the conference of the leading railway representatives with the Interstate Commerce Commission is held to-day.

Secretary Alger's Trip.

Washington, March 24.—While in Cuba Secretary Alger will act upon the proposition to divide Cuba into four military departments. This has been under consideration in the department for some time. If it is determined to do so, after consultation with Gen. Brooke, Secretary Alger will telegraph to Gen. Corbin to that effect and the necessary orders will be issued from Washington.

MORE DECISIVE BLOWS

War Department Expects a General Advance at Once.

AGONCILLO GOES TO PARIS

A Crisis Near in the Filipino Insurrection—Aguinaldo Boasting of What He Will Do—English Refugees from Dagupan Tell of Sympathy With Rebels

Washington, March 24.—War Department officers profess much satisfaction with the progress of the campaign in the Philippines, and expect even better results from the aggressive movement soon to be inaugurated by Gen. Otis, who is now reorganizing the American forces for that purpose.

Re-enforcements are rapidly reaching Manila. The arrival of the Grant with over 1,000 men was followed by the arrival yesterday morning of the Sherman with an equal number of re-enforcements to nearly 5,000. Before the Sheridan arrives, however, the Department expects to hear that Gen. Otis's reorganized command has made a movement that shall result in a decisive engagement and probably in the capture of Aguinaldo. That leader has announced his intention of marching upon the American troops soon, and, if possible, of entering Manila. At the War Department no fear is entertained of the success of any such action. The troops under Gen. Otis are strongly entrenched, and occupy such advantageous positions that any attack by the Filipinos would be promptly repulsed.

The Department feels much easier now that cable communication has been opened between Manila anl Iloilo, and from Iloilo to Buocolod, on the island of Negros, as it enables Gen. Otis to keep in closer touch with the American forces under Gen. Miller and receive prompt notice of any intended movement of the enemy in that part of the Philippines.

Agoncillo Trying to Buy Arms.

London, March 24.—Agoncillo and Marti, the Filipino Commissioners, have started for Paris. In well-informed quarters it is said that Agoncillo is greatly mortified at the rebuffs he has received from the British Government, whose sympathy with the Filipinos he endeavored to arouse, and that he expects better treatment at the hands of the French. Agoncillo's real object, however, is to obtain arms and ammunition, for the purchase of which he has made unsuccessful overtures to several London and Birmingham firms. It is said that he believes that with the assistance of the Paris Junta he will be able to obtain the supplies he seeks in France, in the event of which he intends to charter a small vessel at Brest or St. Malo to transport his purchases to the Philippines.

A former German Consul who recently left Manila has addressed a letter to a friend, in which he says: "The success of the American arms is not doubted for a moment. They will soon clear the plains of Luzon of the Tagalos, who cannot maintain themselves in the mountains. Their entire subjection is only a matter of time."

Northern Filipino Rebels.

Manila, March 24.—The steamship Saturnus, which arrived here from Dagupan, brought fifteen men and women refugees, who were taken on board by permission of the Filipinos. They report that the people in the northern country are in sympathy with the war which the Filipino rebels are carrying on against the Americans, and that steps have been taken by them to insure good crops as food supplies for the soldiers and non-combatants. The foreigners, the refugees say, are not ill-treated.

Fighting Near Iloilo.

Manila, March 24.—Details of the fighting at Iloilo on March 16 show that 400 Filipino riflemen from Panay were met by seven companies of the Eighteenth Regiment of the United States Infantry and a battalion of the Tennessee Volunteers. As supports these troops had three two-inch Hotchkiss guns, under Gen. Miller, north of Jaro, across the river.

The Americans were met with a heavy fire. One man was killed and fifteen were wounded of the Eighteenth Regiment, and there were several cases of sunstroke. Gen. Miller estimates that fifty insurgents were killed and that one hundred were wounded.

Imprisoned Miners Rescued.

Leadville, Col., March 24.—At 11 o'clock last night the two mine pumpmen, Charles Rouss and Bart Frey, who were imprisoned in the Bon Air mine thirteen days ago, were reached by the rescuers and restored to their friends. They show little effects of their experience.

They were on the 430-foot level when a cave near the top shaft cut them off from the outer world. Fortunately the big water pipe was not broken, and by blowing a hole in it with dynamite the men were able to communicate with their friends, who kept them supplied with food, while a new shaft, over 200 feet deep, was sunk. The cost of rescuing the men has been over $3,000.

Silver Combine's Mortgage.

Meridan, Conn., March 24.—One of the largest mortgages ever recorded in the State has been filed in the Town Clerk's office here. The mortgageor is the recently organized Intrnational Silver Company, of New Jersey, and which takes in concerns all over the country, and the mortgagee, the Continental Trust Company, of New York City. It is a first mortgage deed of $4,500,000, which is to secure bondholders. Two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars in revenue stamps were required.

Election Decided by Chance.

Little Falls, N. Y., March 24.—Tuesday's village election in Dolgeville resulted in a tie for President between Julius Breckwoldt, Republican, and J. B. Fenner, Democrat. Thursday the village trustees had a number of ballots put in a hat and a blindfolded child drew one. It contained Breckwoldt's name, and he was declared elected.

AGONCILLO GOES TO PARIS

A Crisis Near in the Filipino Insurrection—Aguinaldo Boasting of What He Will Do—English Refugees from Dagupan Tell of Sympathy With Rebels

Washington, March 24.—War Department officers profess much satisfaction with the progress of the campaign in the Philippines, and expect even better results from the aggressive movement soon to be inaugurated by Gen. Otis, who is now reorganizing the American forces for that purpose.

Re-enforcements are rapidly reaching Manila. The arrival of the Grant with over 1,000 men was followed by the arrival yesterday morning of the Sherman with an equal number of re-enforcements to nearly 5,000. Before the Sheridan arrives, however, the Department expects to hear that Gen. Otis's reorganized command has made a movement that shall result in a decisive engagement and probably in the capture of Aguinaldo. That leader has announced his intention of marching upon the American troops soon, and, if possible, of entering Manila. At the War Department no fear is entertained of the success of any such action. The troops under Gen. Otis are strongly entrenched, and occupy such advantageous positions that any attack by the Filipinos would be promptly repulsed.

The Department feels much easier now that cable communication has been opened between Manila anl Iloilo, and from Iloilo to Buocolod, on the island of Negros, as it enables Gen. Otis to keep in closer touch with the American forces under Gen. Miller and receive prompt notice of any intended movement of the enemy in that part of the Philippines.

Agoncillo Trying to Buy Arms.

London, March 24.—Agoncillo and Marti, the Filipino Commissioners, have started for Paris. In well-informed quarters it is said that Agoncillo is greatly mortified at the rebuffs he has received from the British Government, whose sympathy with the Filipinos he endeavored to arouse, and that he expects better treatment at the hands of the French. Agoncillo's real object, however, is to obtain arms and ammunition, for the purchase of which he has made unsuccessful overtures to several London and Birmingham firms. It is said that he believes that with the assistance of the Paris Junta he will be able to obtain the supplies he seeks in France, in the event of which he intends to charter a small vessel at Brest or St. Malo to transport his purchases to the Philippines.

A former German Consul who recently left Manila has addressed a letter to a friend, in which he says: "The success of the American arms is not doubted for a moment. They will soon clear the plains of Luzon of the Tagalos, who cannot maintain themselves in the mountains. Their entire subjection is only a matter of time."

"Several years ago I was troubled with an aggravated case of dyspepsia and, of course, the first thing I did was to consult a physician. As I had always enjoyed the best of health I was worried a good deal over this, my first illness, and my only desire was to get well as speedily as I could. I took regularly all the medicines as my doctor prescribed them. In a short time I felt all right, thought I was cured and stopped taking the medicine. But it wasn't long before I was feeling as badly as ever, and again I had recourse to the doctor. This kept up for some time until at last I made up my mind I would quit doctoring and try some of the remedies I saw advertised. I had read so much of Ripans Tabules that I concluded I would give them a good trial. It said 'one would give relief,' and I thought if one could give relief a whole lot might cure me. I purchased a dollar's worth, and when I had finished them I was feeling better than I had for years. I continued to use them, and to-day I believe I am a perfectly well man. Once in a great while I do have a slight touch of the old malady, but a single Tabule fixes it all right. I generally keep a supply at home."

A PENSION RULING.

Important Decision Affecting Spanish War Applications.

Washington, March 24.—A decision just rendered by the Department of the Interior that no application for pension is valid unless it came from a person who has already acquired a pensionable status, sounds like a dry technical proposition, but its bearing will be more fully understood by reference to the crop of cases which called it forth. It appears that a large number of aplications have come in since the war with Spain passed its crisis, from soldiers still in the field or in camp, who claimed to have suffered disabilities from wounds or disease contracted in the service. The Commissioner of Pensions believed that it was his duty to set these applications aside as invalid, because the law does not recognize any soldier as having a pensionable status till he has been mustered out, and a muster-out in the late war has always been immediately preceded by a physicial examination as to the soldiers' condition at that time.

To establish a precedent for letting in such applications, now that we are keeping or preparing to keep anywhere from sixty to one hundred thousand men in the field, would be a constant drain upon the Treasury, for it would often be possible for a soldier to get a bad report from the surgeons while he was still suffering from some trouble quite capable of cure. This, and the ease with which comrades could be induced to swear to the conditions apparently leading up to the trouble, would tend to swell the pension list unduly. The question raised by the Commissioner was referred by him to the department, and drew forth the decision mentioned at the beginning of this dispatch.

WORK OF THE WARSHIPS.

Dewey Reports the Sailing of the Buffalo—Dolphin to Blow Up a Wreck.

Washington, March 24.—Admiral Dewey cabled the Navy Department that the transport Buffalo had left Manila for New York. She carries enlisted men of the navy whose terms have expired. The Buffalo and the Solace, which arrived at Manila yesterday, will make trips between New York and Manila and San Francisco and Manila twice a year.

The auxiliary cruiser Badger arrived at Valparaiso and left in a few hours for Callao. She is on her way to Manila.

The cruiser Newark sailed from Brooklyn to-day, presumably in obedience to her orders to join Sampson's squadron of evolution, although the telegram received at the Navy Department did not tell her destination.

The gunboat Dolphin left the Washington Navy Yard for Norfolk. She has been directed to blow up a wreck off the North Carolina coast. This wreck one skipper declared that his craft, on striking the obstruction, bounded back like an india rubber ball. Naval officers say they have never before heard of such a remarkable happening.

Monnett Still in the Hunt.

Cleveland, March 24.—Depositions will be taken here to-day in the Standard Oil contempt cases by Attorney-General Monnett. The Attorney-General announces that he will tell the bribery story to the Supreme Court at Washington as soon as he finds the time.

"It would not be proper for me to make answer to the taunt of the Standard Oil's attorneys," said Monnett, "without bringing the matter officially to the attention of the court of which I am an officer. The attorneys of the Standard peddled the letter they wrote me around the streets but I cannot retaliate in kind. If the Supreme Court decides that the information in my possession warrants it, it will doubtless have the subject investigated. Then I can make a reply under oath. The Standard had attorneys at Ann Arbor for the purpose of discovering if I had not denied the charges. I had not, nor will I."

Gov. Roosevelt Will Testify.

Albany, March 24.—Gov. Roosevelt will go to New York city to-day; and in the evening will attend the military tournament in progress in Madison Square Garden.

On Saturday he will testify before the United States Army Board of Inquiry as to the condition of beef furnished to the Rough Riders.

The Governor has invited Senator and Mrs. Platt to spend several days next week with him and Mrs. Roosevelt at the Executive Mansion. The Governor will probably hold a conference with him in New York Saturday.

Rev. Dr. Hall's Successor.

New York, March 24.—At a meeting of the Session of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church the Chairman of the joint meeting of the committees of the congregation and the Session presented the name of the Rev. Dr. Alexander Connell of London as a successor to the late Rev. Dr. John Hall.

Dr. Connell is now in the far East making a tour of inspection through India and China for the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. He is known to have a strong liking for this country and its institutions, and it is believed that if elected he will accept the call.

Refused a Pardon.

Indianapolis, March 24.—Mrs. Augusta Schmidt, who is serving a ten years' sentence in the Indiana Women's Prison, has been paroled by Gov. Mount, and declines to accept her freedom. She is in the prison for the alleged murder of Oscar Walton, a Cass county farmer, in 1894, and says she will not leave the institution until the judge and jury which tried her acknowledge to Gov. Mount that she is innocent, and that they were in error when they passed judgment on her.

The officials say that it is one of the very few instances in the criminal history of the State where liberty has been offered and refused.

The Army Beef Inquiry.

Washington, March 24.—It is expected that the army beef inquiry board will go to New York the last of this year. It is the intention to examine officers and men of the regiments now in New York before they go to San Francisco, notably the Thirteenth Infantry.

CROKER CAN NOT GET IN

Mr. Bryan's Friend Says the Dinner is Not for Plutocrats.

ALL OTHERS ARE WELCOME

Unison in the Democratic Party is Not Only Impossible, but Undesirable, Says Promoter of the Opposition Feast—Banquet to be Held on April 19—Bryan Will Attend.

New York, March 24.—The $1 Democrats who are making arrangements for the big dinner to be held in Grand Central Palace have at last openly announced that the question of harmony in the Democratic party is not one that concerns them. The dinner is to be held on the evening of April 19, and W. J. Bryan, it is announced, will positively appear.

"Harmony in the Democratic party at this time is not only impossible, but decidedly undesirable," said Eugene V. Brewster, head of the committee which is making arrangements for the $1 Democratic dinner, when he was seen in his office in Brooklyn. "For years," he continued, "we have been trying to get the plutocratic element out of the old Jeffersonian party. At last we have been successful and we should be glad of it."

Mr. Brewster has been in almost constant communication with William J. Bryan for the past week. When he was asked whether or not Mr. Bryan thought as he did, he replied: "I wish you would not question me on that point."

Invitations will be sent out within a week, and the list of speakers will be made up as soon as the replies are received. Invitations will not be sent to any person not believed to be opposed to Tammany, and tickets will be sold only to those persons who satisfy the committee that they are loyal to Bryan.

The members of the committee are evidently afraid that Tammany will make an effort to raise a disturbance at the dinner or kill off the enthusiasm and they are taking precautions to guard against anything of the kind.

"One man sent me a telegram," said Mr. Brewster to-day, "asking me to reserve 100 tickets for him. The telegram cames from out of town, but I replied that before any man could get that many tickets he would have to present good proof of his loyalty. The man replied that any person who would order 100 tickets must be loyal. I have not commnicated with him since then, and he must produce the money and answer several questions before he gets them."

The following telegram was received from Mr. Bryan:

"Nashville, Tenn., March 23.

"E. V. Brewster:

"Nineteenth satisfactory if necessary, but prefer seventeenth. Answer Birmingham. W. J. BRYAN."

Mr. Brewster said that the committee having charge of the arrangements would notify Mr. Bryan that April 19 had been selected. Mr. Bryan will probably be astonished when he learns just what the $1 dinner is to be. In several of his telegrams he said that he would appear at "Chicago platform Democrat dinner." The dinner which is to be held in the Grand Central Palace on the evening of April 19 will be something else. Many of the men who are helping in completing the arrangements belong to the Labor party, and others were Socialists, if they are not now. Many of them do not believe in free silver, and they announced it at the meeting held in Clarendon Hall when the dinner was proposed. The matter was talked over for two hours there, and the men in charge speak of the dinner as a "Jefferson Day Dinner." Not many of them have a word to say about the Chicago platform.

If Mr. Bryan is as particular when he arrives here as he appears to be now, he will have a lot of questions to ask before the guests get a chance to listen to him.

Gov. Pingree of Michigan has already sent word that he is coming and Mayor Jones of Toledo has written a letter which as much as says that he will be on hand. Altgeld, Tom Watson and Samuel Gompers will be invited early, and it is expected that they will appear when the time comes. It has not been decided whether Edward Murphy will be asked to attend the dinner, but Mr. Brewster says he is certain that ex-Gov. Hill couldn't get in if he tried. "Coin" Harvey's name is on the eligible list, and Elliot Danforth will be invited.

When Mr. Brewster was asked if Messrs. Croker and Belmont would be allowed to enter if they presented themselves at the door, he replied:

"Most centainly not; there will be no room for them."

James K. Jones, it is announced, will be invited, as will also Tom L. Johnson.

The date for the $1 dinner was decided upon after many conferences, and after Bryan had been consulted half a dozen times. The promoters of the dinner, when they first spoke of their project, announced that it would be held on the evening of April 13, the same evening on which Mr. Croker and his friends are to sit down to their $10 a plate dinner in the Metropolitan Opera House. They thought it probable that Mr. Bryan would not appear at the $10 dinner, and hoped to get him for their own.

Mr. Bryan, after an exchange of letters with Perry Belmont, made it known that he would not speak at the $10 dinner, but he also announced that he had accepted an invitation to speak in the South on April 13. Then the $1 dinner crowd asked him about Saturday, April 15. That day was satisfactory to Mr. Bryan, but a lot of labor men who wanted to attend raised objection. They said that their employers could not spare them on a Saturday night. Next Mr. Bryan was asked about April 17. He replied that he would be pleased to speak on that date and the committee members were happy until they learned that the Grand Central Palace was engaged for then. Some of them wanted to tell Mr. Bryan to come prepared to speak on April 15, but the labor men raised objection and another telegram was sent, asking him whether or not he could come on April 19. The telegram received from him was in reply to this one.

WINDING UP AT TRENTON.

Legislature Adjourns Friday—Fate of Anti Coal Trust Bill in Doubt.

Trenton, March 24.—Although no definite action has yet been taken on the matter of final adjournment, there is every probability that the New Jersey Legislature will adjourn Friday. The Assembly has adopted a resolution fixing 3 o'clock on Friday as the hour for sine die adjournment.

There seems no good reasons for a prolongation of the session beyond that period. Business is well advanced, and the calendars of both Houses are so light that night sessions have not thus far been considered necessary. The Governor, as well as the Legislature, is working hard so as to make adjournment possible at the time stated. All bills delivered to him are acted upon with promptness

The anti-Coal Combination bill introduced by Mr. Abbott at the instance of Attorney-General Grey is yet in status quo, and there is much doubt expresed as to its chances for passing, owing to the lateness of its introduction. The fate of the bill rests with the House Judiciary Committee, which has the measure in charge. If the committee reports the measure, it may be rushed through under a suspension of the rules.

The bill makes it a misdemeanor for any person or corporation to form a combination to restrain or prevent competition, punishable with a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, or imprisonment for a period of not less than six months nor more than two years.

Any corporation or body politic convicted under the provisions of this set shall immediately after such conviction forfeit its franchise, each and every one of them, to this State, and its charter shall become void and of no effect.

SAYS MRS. PLACE CONFESSED.

Clergyman Who Attended the Woman Writes a Letter to Gov. Roosevelt.

Albany, March 24.—The Rev. David Cole of Yonkers, the clergyman who attended Mrs. Martha Place at the time of the execution of her death sentence, has written a letter to Gov. Roosevelt, telling him that the woman made a confession which removed all doubt as to her sanity. The Rev. Mr. Cole was the first person to bring to the Governor's attention the question of Mrs. Place's mental condition as affecting her responsibility for the murder of her stepdaughter in Brooklyn. The letter is as follows:

"My Dear Gov. Roosevelt.—The clear confession of Mrs. Place at a late hour having swept away all ground for the impression under which I had so confidently rested, of her irresponsibility for her act in killing her stepdaughter, I hasten to say that I have nothing left to my manhood sense but to sustain your action in her case throughout. The case has drawn my attention more than it had ever been drawn before to the study of the subject of capital punishment. But this has nothing to do with you. In your position it was your duty to execute the law as it is, and your course has been beyond criticism. Your very sincere supporter and friend,

"DAVID COLE."

In the State Legislatures.

After several hours of debate the Massachusetts House voted an appropriation of $10,000 to Carney Hospital in Boston. This is a Roman Catholic institution, but its doors are open to the ailing of all creeds. The debate was along sectarian lines and was quite bitter.

An enactment in Connecticut to punish attempts to influence jurors improperly provides a penalty of five years' imprisonment for any one guilty of such an attempt, and a penalty of a fine not to exceed five years for any one who conceals knowledge of such an attempt.

A bill providing for the publication in the newspapers of all the laws enacted by the Legislature has been rejected by the Pensylvania Senate. Its political character appeared in the proposed division of the patronage, which was to go to three papers in each county, two of the three to be organs of the majority party.

Arkansas is to have a new capitol, the Legislature having voted to build one at an expense not to exceed $1,000,000. It is to occupy the present site of the penitentiary in Little Rock, and in its construction 200 convicts are to be employed, who are to make brick, and to quarry and cut stone on lands to be acquired by the State for such purposes.

Under the new constitution in Delaware the Governor has the veto power, and Gov. Tunnell has made good use of it in killing a bill, passed in the closing hours of the session, which practically licensed gambling. The bill ostensibly provided a penalty for gambling, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, but limited the penalty to fines "not exceeding $500 in any one year."

It is pointed out by a correspondent of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer that, although the Washington Legislature refused to enact an anti-pass law, it created a law under which State officials with passes cannot mulct the State for mileage not paid by them, unless they perjure themselves. Under this law expense accounts must be itemized and sworn to, and vouchers are required, even for transportation.

Long Sentence for Express Robber.

Carroltown, Ill., March 24.—In the case of Frank Ainsworth, who in an attempted holdup of a night express on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad shot and killed Engineer Fred Dempsey, the jury returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the penalty at forty-nine years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

The attempted holdup took place at Whitehall, in this county, on June 24 last. When the engineer failed to comply with Ainsworth's commands the latter shot him and fled. His accomplice, William Jackson, turned State's evidence.

Connecticut Sunday Trains.

Hartford, Conn., March 24.—The Connecticut House of Representatives yesterday passed the bill which permits the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company to operate trains on Sunday during hours heretofore prohibited. The measure has already passed the Senate and now goes to the Governor for his signature

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Governor Voorhees and the Trusts.

Governor Voorhees' views in reference to the formation of trusts seem to be very elastic. When he was inaugurated as Governor he devoted a portion of his first messege to the consideration of monster trade combinations and expressed his belief that formations of enterprises such as New Jersey was and is fostering, should be made the subject of legislative investigation. At the time, however, he stated that he was not conversant enough with the situation to deal with it in explicit words and would at a later date submit a special message concerning the subject.

What has been the result? The great majority of New Jersey people have been patiently waiting for the Governor to present his promised message, but as the days of the Legislative session were drawing to a close those who followed the trend of affa rs at Trenton were unable to see that the Governor intended to do as he had suggested at the commencement of his term. But Governor Voorhees has finally come out of his hole and says in a newspaper interview:

I did have it in mind to make some inquiry into the subject, but the business of the Legislature has been so pressing that I have had no time. * * * Nobody has presented to me any facts that indicate that these combinations of interests are working any hardships, such as raising the price of the necessaries of life In fact, the trend of information, as I hear it, is to the contrary—that they cheapen these necessaries.

Mr. Vooreees' excuses are weak and flippant. His plea of overwork by reason of the Legislature is satirical rather than serious. That body has only made a pretence of work. Is it necessary for Mr. Voorhees to have a delegation of eminent citizens to call on him and formally present their complaints now when less than three months ago he himself openly proclaimed almost the very things that he innocently avers he has no knowledge of today? Does Mr. Voorhees read the newspapers? Does he talk with his friends and his neighbors in his home city? Does he heed the voice of members of his own party who are not gagged by corporation influence? Has he ears for what the Democrats of the Legislature urge as right and just? We have no doubt that he does all these things to a more or less extent, but yet in the face of it all he declares that he sees no harm in the present tendency of capital to centralize itself and put the control of the important industries and necessities of life into the hands of a few men.

In his present attitude towards the corporation laws of New Jersey Mr. Voorhees is a symphony of the tart political saying that party platforms and ante-election promises are but empty things used to get into office with—and after once in let the Devil take the hindmost.

In discussing the influence of commuters in local affairs the Summit Herald truthfully says: "In some of the smaller cities and towns of New Jersey there is a disposition around election time to sneer at the commuters who live in these places and do business in New York. Why these men should be treated as outsiders, having no right to meddle in local affairs, is not quite clear when one notices the extraordinary efforts made by other communities to attract just this class of citizens."

The Philadelphia Record thinks that the gods are just because one returned traveller who was belated, bullied and buffeted by the baggage inspectorship which greets the homeward bound citizen at the doorway of his native land, had been in the habit of subscribing $10,000 annually to the Republican campaign fund and will do so no more.

The Tennessee Legislature has sustained a veto of a bill, which gave street railway companies the right to sell electricity for heat, light and power purposes. Gov. McMillin objected to the measure on the ground that it was against public policy to give a corporation more than one function, and that it would foster a monoply.

The Daily Press is informed on excellent authority that Dr. Cooley can be a member of the Borough Board of Education and at the same time be a Commissioner of Appeal. The two offices do not conflict. In the case of Collector Brown he was obliged to handle school money and could not be a school trustee at the same time.

A New York minister is doing his best to prevail upon the women who attend his church to remove their bonnets during the services. There is reason to believe that there will be plenty of empty pews in that church Easter Sunday.

Mr. Bryan will attend the dinner of dollarites in New York. This will also be a fine occasion for Congressman Baily to appear in his Prince Albert without feeling that he is shocking the fashion of formalities.

An aged Indiana couple have just been married—the groom for the sixth time and the bride for the fifth. Between them they have over ninety descendants. No one will dare say that marriage is a failure in their case.

The great trouble with Mr. Croker's ideas of harmony is that they view the Democratic party only from the standpoint of Tammany and its desire to be the one potent factor in its council.

If one dollar is the limit of the money to be spent for each guest at the anti-Tammany dinner in New York there is not likely to be many headaches the following morning.

The proposed coal combine must have been a gigantic myth or else it is waiting for the Legislature to adjourn before showing its hands conspicuously.

It is estimated that there are 25,000 officers in the native Cuban army. Kentucky must beware of her laurels for producing Colonels and Majors.

Mister Thompson, of Somerville, must regard Senator Reed as some pumpkins by this time.

What has become of that much vaunted scheme of Former Mayor Fisk for a city hall?

The passing of the Legislature of 1899 causes no sorrow.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Some of the noisiest dogs that ever wagged a tail live right here in Westfield. The can be relied upon to assist the Board of Trade and Improvement Association in their worthy efforts to proclaim the charms of the place to city seekers of peaceful, rural life.—Union County Standard.

* * * * *

We were not among the number of those who imagined that the North Plainfield boroughites would favor consolidation with the sister-town of Plainfield, which lies in another county. The vote last week was very decided—103 in favor of and 385 opposed to consolidation. Old Plainfield will have to jog along for some time before she becomes a county seat.—Somerville Messenger.

* * * * *

With the consolidation question emphatically decided the Plainfield newspapers will have to look for some other topic when the days are dull. After reading their columns for the past year one would think that the borough was only awaiting the opportunity to rush pell-mell into the embrace of the city. The vote at the recent election showed that the borough is much better satisfied as it is and that the people have no special desire to get out of Somerset county The borough has no reason for making a change. The city can show no such picturesque streets or building sites. She has no better government and the tax rate is much higher. There are no advantages possessed by the city that the borough does not have as good if not better. If the Plainfield editors had not wasted so much time and paper in talking about the matter, little would have been thought about it.—Somerville Unionist Gazette.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

At Music Hall next week. The Norristown Herald says: "'Dangers of a Great City,' a four-act melo drama, was given a splendid interpretation by the Sawtelle Dramatic Company last night. It was the company's first appearance in Norristown, and they were given a rousing reception by one of the largest audiences of the season. Long before 8 o'clock standing room only could be had and when the curtain was rung up on the first act the theatre was packed, while many persons were turned away. The play has been produced here before on several occasions, but its production last night by the Sawtelle Company excelled all others in every respect. Jessie Sawtelle looked and acted charmingly the part of 'Ruth Fielding,' while J. Al. Sawtelle, as 'Edward Vaughn, the panther,' proved himself a clever character actor Geo. H. Summers, who by the way is one of the best comedians ever seen here, kept the audience in the best of humor throughout the entire play. The rest of the cast was satisfactory. A pleasing feature of the performance was the specialties introduced by Bell Stevenson, George Summers, with his witticisms and songs, and Little Queen Mab." Monday evening, "The Dangers of a Great City." Ladies can have the usual half-price ticket by applying at the box office. Popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run down invalid. Only 50 cents at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

The Deception of Sight.

"I'm through trying to prevent crime," exclaimed Brown.

"What's up now?" asked Cumpstead, wiping his fingers on the towel that swung from the counter.

"Well, it was this way," his friend went on. "You see, I went over to the Lyceum theatre the other evening—George Nicolai's a friend of mine, you know—and after the first act I strolled out into the confectionery next door for a package of cigarettes.

"There was a girl waiting on the crowd there. I bought a large package of the brand I smoke and handed the young lady in payment ten cents. She rang up five on the register. 'Ah, ha,' I said to myself, 'knocking down, I see.' Then a man came along and bought three glasses of ginger ale for himself and two friends. He gave the girl fifteen cents. She rang up another nickel. Then a fellow bought a quarter's worth of cigars and she rang up five dollars. Light began to dawn upon me. I understood. 'That girl,' I thought, 'knocks down a while, then rings up a big amount to sorter square her stealings.' I watched her a few moments longer. I saw her ring up three nickels on three purchases of a dime each, and then I made up my mind to tip her off to George. I couldn't see my friend Nicolai done like that, you know. So I went and told him. He listened till I had finished, and then what do you suppose happened?"

"I don't know," replied Cumpstead, "what did?"

"He laughed a loud, hoarse, winter weather laugh and told me the register was busted and had been for three weeks, and that nickels and five dollars were all that it would ring. And I've been buying things for Lyceum employes ever since."

An Ancient Chair.

There has been recently deposited in the British museum what is probably the most venerable piece of furniture in existence. It is the throne of Queen Hatasu, who reigned in the Nile Valley some one thousand years before Christ and twetny-nine years before Moses.

This now dilapidated object seems to be of lignum vitae, the carving of the legs being inlaid with gold, and those of the back with silver.—Golden Days.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 26, "True Penitence"—Text, II Cor. vii, 1-11.

"Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death."

There are a great many ways of being sorry and a great variety of sorrows. Some are extremely dangerous to health and even life, while others are very helpful. Many if not most sorrows are the result of some wrong done or suffered. One awakens to the fact that the evil has been committed. If done by himself, all the circumstances, the carelessness or provocation which led up to it may come clearly to mind. The shame, the pain caused to others, the responsibility which rests upon himself, the unworthiness and meanness of the spirit which led to or allowed the wrong to be done, the sense of disapproval by others, all flash in upon the soul and make a tumult of thought and conflict of feeling. Resentment at the injustice done him and condemnation of himself for the injury inflicted on another struggle for the mastery, defiance of the opinions of others and hatred of the wronged one may gain the ascendency, or a softening of feeling, a hearty sorrow that others must suffer because of his fault, a whole souled heartache and wish to repair the wrong, may possess one.

When one sees his wrongdoing and heartily wishes it had not been done, determines to repair the evil as far as possible and not to be guilty of like conduct again, that is real repentance. It is followed by conduct that strives to make amends for all injury and suffering caused. Such repentance is more than a feeling of sorrow. It is all that and much more. It assumes the duty of repairing the injury done. It goes beyond this and lays upon itself the obligation to feel good and do good to the one who has suffered. Beyond all this, it sees that the wrong done has been in violation of God's law and against His nature. Right relations to God must be restored by a complete change of attitude. Every wrong done a fellow man is a sin against God. Repentance, if genuine, effects a change in the man's thought, feeling and determination toward his fellows and His God and results in a complete change of action.

True repentance brings the sense of satisfaction and peace. It makes a man happy and hopeful and contented.

The reverse of this is irritation of soul, enmity against others, especially the ones wronged, dislike of the laws of right, shame and contempt of self, hatred of the good and determination to do the evil. This leads to strife, despair and may end in suicide or murder or any other crime.

An Epworth Leaguer Honored.

REV. W. I. HAVEN.

League and one of the most promising as well as prominent of the younger ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church.

His father was Bishop Gilbert Haven. His uncle was Bishop E. C. Haven. He is a graduate of Wesleyan university and Boston university school of theology. He is a member of the New England conference and has been particularly successful in his pastorates, especially that of St. Mark's, Brookline, Mass., which he leaves to enter upon the duties of his new office. He was a member of the Cleveland convention which formed the Epworth League and has been a member of the board of control and general cabinet from the first. He was the first president of the first general district and held the office longer than any one else has done.

He carries to his new position rare executive ability, wide acquaintance with men and things, a warm heart and level head. The blessing of God attend him in his new work as it has in the past!

Max Muller's Testimony.

He says: "I had not read it for many years, and was prejudiced against it before I took it in hand. The light which struck Paul with blindness on his way to Damascus was not more strange, more surprising to him than it was to me when I suddenly discovered the fulfillment of all hopes, the highest perfection of philosophy, the explanation of all revelations, the key to all the seeming contradictions of the physical world. I saw religion appear at the moment most favorable to its appearance and in a manner most adapted to its acceptance. The whole world seems to be ordered for the sole purpose of furthering the religion of the Redeemer, and if this religion is not divine I understand nothing at all."

So will every sincere searcher who reads the New Testament desiring to know the truth find the light break forth convincingly and amply satisfying all needs.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 26—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC—True penitence.—II Cor. vii, 1-11.

In his first epistle to the Corinthians Paul severely rebuked the church for certain serious evils which existed in the church—schism, idolatry, gross sensuality and abuse of the Lord's supper. The rebuke, though severe, was administered from the purest motive and with the tenderest affection, and therefore produced a salutary effect. It led to a godly repentance, the ultimate end of which was salvation.

In describing the effects of this reproof Paul gives a comprehensive description of what true penitence or repentance is.

1. True penitence is preceded and caused by conviction of sin. We will never repent of our sins until we are convinced that we are sinners. David did not repent until Nathan pointed out to him his sin. Simon Peter did not go out and weep tears of repentance until the look of Christ brought to his mind a conception of the baseness of his treachery. The Corinthians did not repent until Paul's scathing rebuke made them to see their actions in their true light. The sins of men and the true character of sin need to be pointed out more persistently today, that men may be led to repentance. Salvation without repentance is impossible, and repentance is impossible without conviction of sin.

2. The characteristics of true penitence are: 1. Godly sorrow. Godly sorrow is here distinguished from the sorrow which the world feels because of sin. Godly sorrow is the sorrow that God feels because of sin as He looks upon it, with His pure and holy character. The guilt and the pollution of sin are abhorrent to God. Only the consequences of sin are abhorrent to the world. The unregenerate, unrepentant man fears the consequences of sin; the repentant man loathes sin because it is transgression against a loving God and Father, and he sorrows above everything else because he has done that which grieves God. This is godly sorrow. 2. Renunciation of sin. To repent we must turn from sin, as the Corinthians did, with earnestness, loathing, indignation and vehement desire to serve and glorify God. We must "cease to do evil and learn to do well." We must give up sin and take up God and God's work in the world.

3. The ultimate end of true penitence was salvation. "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." The only pathway to salvation and eternal life is that of repentance of sin and faith in Christ.

Bible Readings.—Job xi, 13, 14; Isa. i, 16-20; lv, 7; Jer. iii, 12-15; Ezek. xiv, 6; Hos. vi, 1-3; Joel ii, 12-21; Math. iii, 1, 2; iv, 17; Mark i, 14, 15; Luke iii, 1-9; xv, 1-10; Acts ii, 37-39; iii, 19; Rev. ii, 5.

Be Cheery.

Why should a person make himself a nuisance? What gain is there in grimness and sourness and unsociability? Few people care to listen to whining and complaint. On the whole, the world uses us as well as we deserve. It is very hard for the defeated to admit this, but it is a fact nevertheless, and if only admitted one of the chief reasons for defeat is removed. A cheerful philosopher is an important element of success. He who is perpetually suspecting others of ill treating him and keeping him down is not a welcome companion. Every man is of less importance to the world around him than he likes to think. But he can easily test it by asking how much he himself dwells upon the condition of others. By as much as their grievances do not particularly concern him by so much his own are matters of indifference to them. So let him be pleasant, bury his sorrows, pocket his affronts, make himself agreeable, trust to Providence and thankfully take what comes.—Zion's Herald.

Had to Take Them In.

Many years ago a German family applied for admission to the church in Hartford of which Dr. Joel Hawes was the pastor. Through an interpreter Dr. Hawes propounded to them elaborate questions concerning the atonement. They looked perplexed and shook their heads. As the questions were repeated in changed forms their faces grew stolid. Evidently they had given up trying to comprehend the subject. At last Dr. Hawes said impatiently, "Well, well, ask them if they love Christ." The question was put. At once their faces lighted. Their eyes grew moist. They answered in chorus, "Oh, ja! Wir Christus lieben. Ja wohl!" And the doctor's eyes glistened also as he said, "We shall have to take them in."—Congregationalist.

Ready to Be Used.

A noted gambler in Chicago was converted. His prayer to God was in gambler's slang, but God knew what he meant and received him. The man thought he ought to do something in his Master's service. He told his story; God blessed it, and in the power of the Spirit he has been telling it ever since, with wonderful success. He has won more souls than any man in my church.

If the world wants anything, it wants men and women set apart to God, filled with the Spirit and ready to be used.—Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D.

No Such Thing.

When through carelessness one speaks of "comparative religions" or "comparative religion," he exposes himself to a suspicion that he does not know what religion is. There is no such thing as comparative religion, although there is happily growing in favor the comparative study of religions—that is, study by the method of comparison.—Christian Register.

Be Courageous.

It takes courage to go into the world with a Christianity which you mean to make use of.—Anon.

Mühlhausen. Der Bauunternehmer Keppler wurde von der Strafkammer wegen mehrfachen Betruges zu einer Geldstrafe von 1000 Mark verurtheilt. Keppler hatte in den Jahren 1895 und 1896 mehrere von ihm gebaute Häuser zum vollwerthigen Preise verkauft, während sich später herausstellte, daß die Häuser ganz liederlich gebaut und namentlich die Brandmauern an vielen Stellen hohl und mangelhaft ausgeführt waren.

Salzwedel. Dahier wurden von einem Kommando Magdeburger Pionniere die letzten Ueberreste der im Jahre 780 angelegten Burg Albrechts des Bären gesprengt. Die Gebäude, welche auch stark ummauerte, tiefe Keller enthielten, waren derartig baufällig, daß Decken und Wände zum Theil eingestürzt waren oder einzustürzen drohten. Die uralten, festen Außenmauern widerstanden jedoch wie Felsen jedem Versuch, sie niederzureißen, die Dynamitexplosionen aber ließen die Burgruinen donnernd in sich zusammenstürzen. Als ältestes geschichtliches Bauwerk der Stadt Salzwedel steht jetzt nur noch das Burgverließ der ehemaligen Burg, in welches Kaiser Heinrich der Fünfte im Jahre 1096 den Markgrafen Rudolf wegen Gehorsamsverweigerung werfen ließ. Dieser Thurm darf laut Verfügung der königlichen Hofkammer nicht zerstört werden.

CHAPTER VIII.

It was two long days' cavalry march from Sancho's to Camp Cooke, and many a time it had taken three. Midway, very nearly, the Hassayampa emptied its feeble tribute into the murky Gila. There was water enough, such as it was, for man and beast along the way, but, except in the winter months, both man and beast preferred the night hours for the journey. In order to provide mounts for the three officers Blake had left as many of his men at Cooke, and pushed ahead with the veteran president two hours before the dawn. That his march was watched from afar by mounted men he knew as soon as the sun rose upon his pathway, but Blake's only concern was that they kept at respectful distance. Not more than half a dozen did he see, and these were as single scouts or in pairs. He felt little anxiety for Turnbull and Loring. They, too, were well guarded. The only thing he hated about the whole affair was having to dismount any of his men, but there were only two ambulances at Cooke—one was undergoing repairs, and, the inspector being present, the post surgeon wisely protested against the other being sent to the distant south. It was the plan of the party to ride leisurely to Sancho's, there to await the coming of the stage, which should pass through on its way to Yuma Saturday noon.

And early Friday evening the troop went into bivouac at the same old willow clump, and Sancho, profusely and elaborately courteous, had come forth, sombrero in hand, to implore the caballeros to partake of his hospitality. His brother was returned from a visit to Guaymas and Mazatlan, and he had brought wine of the finest and cigars such as Arizona never had known, and Sancho was manifestly disconcerted at the regrets or refusals, coldly courteous on part of Loring, blunt and brusque on part of Blake. The veterans, however, saw no harm in going and were sumptuously entertained by mine host in the best room of the ranch. Blake caused a strong guard to be posted at camp—a most unusual thing and one instantly noted among Sancho's people—and, after making the rounds and giving strict instructions to the three sentries, and, further, ordering side lines as well as lariats for the horses—all this as a result of a low toned conference with Loring—he came back, to find that officer with his valise rolled in a blanket and used as a bolster, while the owner lay on his back gazing dreamily up at the stars. A trooper was silently making down the bedding of the other officers. The sand was soft and dry; no campfire was needed, no tent, no mattress. All four were hardened campaigners, and the night was warm and dewless.

"You can think of nothing else in the way of precaution, Loring?"

For a moment or two Blake fidgeted about. Good wine and cigars were as acceptable to him as to anybody. It was Sancho and Sancho's brother he could not stomach, and he would not be beholden to either.

"You can think of nothing else in the way of precaution, Loring?" he presently asked as he threw himself down beside him, puffing at his little brier root.

"Nothing."

"It would take a nervier gang than Arizona owns to try to rob this outfit," and Blake looked complacently around among the shadowy forms of the troopers flitting about the bivouac.

"We are all right so long as we've got you and your men," said Loring quietly.

"Well, there's no order that can come in time to take us away from you, old man. I'll send one platoon ahead at daybreak to camp half way, and they'll be fresh to ride into Yuma with you Sunday morning."

Loring nodded appreciatively.

From the open doorway of the ranch came the faint clink of glasses and the murmurous flow of voices. Presently the boom of the veterans' jovial laugh swelled the "concourse of sweet sounds," and Blake stirred uneasily.

"Wonder what that old thief is giving them?" muttered he. "Uncle Billy's telling his bear story."

A quarter of an hour passed. The infant moon had sunk below the westward horizon. The sounds of joviality increased, and Blake's mouth watered. "Dash those heartless profligates!" he muttered. "Reckon I'll have to go and reconnoiter. You don't mind being left to your own reflections, Loring?"

"Go ahead," said Loring, and so presently the tall, shadowy form of "the longest legged officer in Arizona" was dimly seen stalking forth from the gloom of the willows and threading its way through the open starlight toward the bright and welcoming doorways of the ranch. Only one or two of the usual loungers had been seen about the premises since the cavalry came in. Sancho and his brother were practically destitute of other guests than the officers whom they were entertaining. Slowly and more slowly did the lieutenant saunter open eared toward the scene of revelry.

More than half the distance had he gone when suddenly from another and smaller clump of willows below the ranch there came floating on the still night, faint and cautious, the musical tinkle of a guitar, and then, soft and luring, yet neither sweet nor silvery, the voice of a girl was timidly uplifted in song. Blake knew it at once. "The daughter of my brother" was out there in the willows, a most unusual thing. Blake remembered how her eyes had spoken to him twice before—how she had thrown herself upon him the night of Higgins' arrest! Could it be, was it possible, that she was signaling to him now?

Much as his curiosity and interest had previously been aroused by the occasional peeps he had had at this attractive little Mexican girl, the events of that night had intensified them. True, it was a moment of thrilling excitement. Higgins, cornered like a rat, had drawn and fired, not with either aim or idea of shooting his accuser, but in the hope of so startling both officers that in the confusion he could leap to the back doorway and escape. Loring's imperturbable nerve and practiced fist had defeated that scheme and laid the deserter low, and Higgins was now languishing at Yuma awaiting trial on triple charges. But Blake for a second or two had felt the clasp of soft arms about him, the wild flutter of a maiden heart, much below his own, and Blake was human. Somewhere he had met that slender girl before. Twice he had danced at the bailes in Tucson and once attended a masquerade where for nearly an hour he had enjoyed the partnership of and had been tantalized by a maid just about the stature of this dark eyed "daughter of my brother."

Blake knew as well as does the reader that this was no time for philandering and had been told but not yet taught the wisdom of keeping well away from the damsels who, like the sirens of old, twanged the vibrating strings and sang their loring songs. Why should she have flung herself between him and the desperadoes at that perilous moment and thrown her arms around him unless—unless she was the girl he had been making love to in broken Spanish during the fiesta at Tucson? He would not have let Loring know where he was going or why for a good deal. But once away from him Blake was alone, with no one to interpose objection, and he went.

In three minutes he had made his cautious way to the westward willows, and his heart began beating in spite of his determination to be guarded and even suspicious, for there sat the little senorita alone. That fact in itself should have opened his eyes and would have done so a year or two later, but Blake was still a good deal of a boy, and in another moment he stepped quickly to her side and almost swept the ground with his broad brimmed scouting hat as he bowed low before her. Instantly the song ceased, the guitar dropped with an Æolian whine upon the sand, and as Blake stooped to raise it she sprang to her feet, a half stifled cry upon her lips.

With smiling self assurance he bowed low again, as if he would restore the instrument to the little hands that were half upraised as though to warn him back, but she began coyly retreating from the bench on which she had been seated, and he quickly followed, murmuring protest and reassurance in such Spanish as he could command, declaring he had never yet had opportunity to thank her for a deed of daring that perhaps had saved his life (he knew it hadn't—the long legged, nimble tongued reprobate), and trembling, timorous, sweetly hesitant, she lingered, she even let him seize her hand, and only faintly strove to draw it away. She began even to listen to his pleading. She shyly hung her pretty head and coyly turned away and furtively peeped across the starlit level toward the ranch, where two dark forms, serape shrouded, were lurking at the corner of the corral. They had come crouching forward a dozen yards when something, some sudden sound, drove them back to shelter, and in the next moment Blake heard it, and the girl, too, for, like a frightened fawn, she darted away and went scurrying to the rear entrance of the ranch, leaving him to confront and hail two horsemen, "Gringos" evidently, who came loping in on the Yuma trail, and at his voice the foremost leaped from saddle and called:

"Is it Lieutenant Blake? We've come with dispatches, sir, from Yuma." And unfastening his saddlebag the trooper placed a packet in the officer's hand.

"Come this way," said Blake briefly, leading toward the light and inwardly bemoaning an ill wind that had blown him far more good than he dreamed. A few strides took him to the door of the ranch. The dispatches were for the president of the late court at Camp Cooke, for Turnbull, for Loring and for himself. Sending the courier to camp, he tore open his order—a brief letter of instructions to furnish such escort as might be deemed sufficient for the safe conduct of Lieutenant Colonels Vance and Turnbull to Tucson. Then he waited to hear from them. With Sancho eagerly scanning their faces, the two veterans had opened and read their orders, then looked up at each other in evident surprise. Presently they rose, and, begging their host to excuse them a moment and beckoning Blake to follow, stepped into the lighted bar beyond. Another court had been convened, another officer was to be tried, and the two who had officiated as seniors at Camp Cooke were directed to proceed at once to the old Mexican capital for similar duty there.

Before sunrise, escorted by a dozen troopers, Vance and Turnbull were on their way, their farewell words to Blake being an injunction to see Loring and his precious charge safe to Yuma City.

As long as he lived Gerald Blake was destined to remember the Saturday that dawned upon them as the little party rode away southeastward. Even the men seemed oddly depressed. Neither to Turnbull, to Loring nor to Blake had this detachment suggested itself as possible. What with having to send a large portion of his command forward on the Yuma road so as to provide comparatively fresh horsemen to accompany the stage with its relays of mules, Blake found himself at reveille with just 18 men all told, awaiting the coming of that anxiously expected vehicle. He prayed that it might bring at least one or two officers from Grant or Bowie. He vainly sought another peep at or word with Pancha; but, though Sancho was everywhere in evidence, grave, courteous, hospitable, imperturbable, though one or two ranchmen rode in and out during the morning, and there was a little gathering, perhaps half a dozen men and "Mozos" apparently awaiting the coming of the stage at noon, the women kept out of sight. At 12 the old lorgnette was brought to bear on the eastward trail; but, to the apparent surprise of the loungers, 1 o'clock came and no stage, and so did 4 and 5, and then Blake and Loring took counsel together in the seclusion of the willow copse, while their men, silent and observant, gathered about the horses 30 yards away, grooming and feeding and looking carefully to their shoeing, for there was portent on the desert air and symptoms of lively work ahead.

At 6 came Sancho, oppressed with grievous anxiety as to the safety of the stage. There had been rumors of Apache raids to the east of Maricopa. Only three days before he had warned the caballeros—the gentlemen of the court who were going back to Grant and Bowie—to be on their guard every inch of the way beyond the Wells, and now his heart was heavy. He feared that, disdainful of his caution, they had driven straight into ambush. Ought not the Teniente Blake to push forward at once with his whole force and ascertain their fate? Blake bade him hold his peace. If harm had come to that stage, said he, it was not on the eastward, but on the westward run, not at the hands of Apaches, but of outlaws, and Sancho went back looking blacker than night and saying in the seclusion of the corral to beetle browed hermano mio and his dusky wife things that even in Spanish sounded ill and would not be publishable in English. Both officers by this time felt that there was mischief abroad. It was decided between them that if by midnight the stage did not arrive Loring, with the precious packet in one saddlebag and the court proceedings in the other, should take eight men as escort and gallop for the west until he reached the platoon sent forward at dawn. From that point the danger would be less, and with either the same or a smaller number of fresh riders he could push on for Yuma, sending all the others back to join Blake, who meantime, with what little force he had, would scout eastward for news of the stage.

But that plan was destined never to be carried out. The long day came to an end. The darkness settled down over sandy plain and distant mountain. The silence of midnight reigned over the lonely bivouac and the somber ranch, yet had not Blake given orders that every man must remain close to the horses throughout the evening adventurous spirits from the troop could surely have heard the ominous whisperings within the corral and marked the stealthy glidings to and fro. At 9 o'clock the famous roan was cautiously led forth from the gateway and close under the black shadow of the wall, and not until well beyond earshot of the willows was he mounted and headed eastward.

At 10 Loring was sleeping soundly in preparation for the night ride before him, and Blake, nervously puffing at his pipe, was listening to the low, murmurous chat where the guard were gathered about their watch fire, when soft, timid, luring, sweet, again he heard the tinkle of that guitar. It ceased abruptly. There was a minute of silence; then a trifle louder it began again, again ceased as though waiting a reply, and Blake sat up and listened. Once more, not at the westward willows, not at the ranch, not on the open plain, but somewhere close at hand, close to his side of the bivouac, away from the guard, away from the occasionally stamping, snorting horses and equally far from the dark, shadowy buildings of the stage station, and Blake slowly, noiselessly got to his feet and after listening one moment to Loring's deep, regular breathing buckled on his revolver belt and stole forth into the starlight. Yes, there was the sound again—a few notes, a bar or two of the song Pancha was singing at the willows the night before, and close to the edge of the willows crouched the musician. With his hand on the butt of his revolver Blake strode slowly toward the shrinking form and beckoning it rose and moved swiftly away. "Halt where you are!" growled the lieutenant. "If you want me, stay here."

For answer there came the same softly played bars and another gesture as though imploring him to come farther away from hearing of the ranch or even of his bivouac, and, whipping out his revolver, the tall trooper sprang forward, and a heavy hand came down on the shawl hidden form, and there, trembling, imploring—aye, weeping—was Pancha. Before he could speak one word she began, and to his amaze began in English—broken English, to be sure, disjointed, incoherent, tremulous—and he listened, at first incredulous, then half convinced, then utterly absorbed, too absorbed to note that a dark form went scurrying from the shelter of some stunted brush straight toward the ranch, whence presently a bright light shone forth and loud voices harshly shouted the name of Pancha, Pancha—whose wrist he still grasped—Pancha, who, weeping, had implored him to hasten with all his men, that the stage was not three miles away with officers from Grant aboard, that wicked men had planned to murder them to prevent their joining him, and now in terror she sought to break away. She begged him to release her. They would kill her if they knew—

And even as she pleaded, far out on the dark, eastward plain, there suddenly uprose a chorus of yells, a rattling fusillade, and Blake darted to the bivouac, shouting as he ran: "Up with you, C troop! Mount, men! Mount!" And then all was stir and bustle and excitement. Springing from their blanket beds the troopers threw their carbine slings over their shoulders and flew to their horses. "Never mind your saddles—no time for that!" yelled Blake, as he slipped the bit between the teeth of his startled charger, then threw himself astride the naked back. "Up with you and come on!" Then with a dozen ready fellows at his heels away he darted into the gloom, guided only by the yells and flashes far out over the sandy plain. In less than two minutes every trooper in the little command had gone spurring in pursuit, and Lieutenant Loring, suddenly aroused from slumber, revolver in hand, looking eagerly about for explanation of the row, found himself standing guard over his treasure laden saddlebags—utterly alone.

Then came the whish of a riata through the pulseless air, the quick whir-r-r of the horsehair rope through the loop as it settled down over his head, a snap as it flew taut, a sudden and violent shock as his feet were jerked from under him, the crack of his revolver, aimless, a stunning blow on his prostrate head—then—oblivion.

Other soaps than Ivory may have this quality, but will likely contain alkali, which is injurious to the skin. Ivory Soap is made of pure vegetable oils, no alkali, produces a white, foamy lather, that cleanses thoroughly and rinses easily and quickly. Money cannot buy a better soap for the toilet.

POLICE BOARD INVESTIGATION.

Looked Into Circumstances of Recent Raid of Alleged Poker Game.

The facts concerning the recent raid of an alleged gambling house and the subsequent dismissal of the prisoners were revived by the members of the city Police Board, at a meeting held last evening. The officers of the force and the patrolmen who took part in the raid were present as was also the City Judge. The Judge explained his reasons for dismissing the prisoners and the policemen told of the circumstances of the raid.

The Board decided that, while there seemed no doubt but that the officers were inspired by the right motive, they acted without a full knowledge of the local ordinances on the subject and on the impulse.

No action was taken in any of the cases. The Board also considered troubles said to have arisen owing to jealousy in the force.

PRESENTED A PAST MASTER'S JEWEL.

Pleasant Event at the Meeting of Central Lodge.

Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., met last night, received three propositions and initiated two candidates. Representatives to the Grand Lodge, C. T. Rogers and James B Dunham, reported the proceedings of that body, and their report was supplemented by a few words from William Newcorn and T. C. Smith.

After the business had been transacted Past Master Workman Newcorn presented Past Master Workman James B Dunham with a Past Master Workman's jewel, from the lodge. Mr. Dunham responded, and then all sat down to a banquet.

A programme of vocal and instrumental music, with literary features, was provided by the good and welfare committee, of which Charles H. Randolph, Past Master Workman, was the chairman.

DEATH ENDS SUFFERING

MRS. M. F. MARCLEY RELIEVED OF HER EARTHLY AFFLICTIONS.

Sustained a Fracture of the Hip and Then Became Blind—Native of This City—She Was a Faithful Baptist and a Christian.

Mrs. M F. Marcley, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known residents, died yesterday afternoon at her home on New street, after a very long and serious illness. Sometime ago she sustained a fracture of the hip after which she lost her eyesight. These afflictions made her an invalid and her relatives have given to her every attention possible. Mrs. Marcley was advanced in age and has been unable to go out for sometime past.

She was a native of this city, where she has lived the largest part of her life. She was the daughter of the late Stephen Vail, who was a prominent citizen in Plainfield for many years. Mrs. Marcley was a faithful member of the First Baptist church and a regular attendant. Almost the last place she attended was the services at this church. She is survived by a husband and son, Dr. Marcley, of Buffalo.

THE POETRY OF MOTION.

Promenade and Cakewalk at the Crescent Rink Last Night.

The Martin brothers tried their hand at entertainment again last evening. They held a promenade and cakewalk at the Crescent Rink, which was attended by some 200 people. The white folks went to see the cakewalk and the colored people wanted to dance. So the two were alternated.

The Martin brothers quartette gave several camp meeting melodies. Then followed a cakewalk for the little people, in which Miss Henrietta Martin and Harold Wales did some well executed stunts and took first prize. Only one other couple competed.

In the big cakewalk that followed at midnight there were three competing couples. Andrew Oby added an other victory to his list, Miss Nora McCabe sharing it with him this time.

LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS

THE ASSEMBLYMEN AND SENATORS FINISH THEIR WORK.

Both Houses Transacted Considerable Important Business Today Before Quitting—The Work Done Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 24—The Legislature of 1899 concluded its business this afternoon and adjourned sine die. Both Houses met early this morning and delved into the business before them with a desire to get it out of the way on schedule time.

Assemblyman Bell's bill providing State supervision for building and loan associations, passed the Senate last night.

The Teachers' Retirement Fund bill, which passed the House recently, was amended in the Senate by striking out the provision that all new teachers should join the fund.

The House defeated the bill providing that building and loan stock shall be considered personal property and be taxed as such to the individual owner, and the House bill which permits Judges of District Courts to appoint a stenographer at a salary of $5 per day.

In the Senate yesterday afternoon there was a spirited debate on party lines between Senator Pitney and Senator McDermott about the annual Appropriations bill. Mr. McDermott charged that the bill was extravagant. Mr. Pitney refuted this, and a good deal of solid political linen was washed in the discussion. The Appropriations bill afterward was passed.

The House passed these House bills during yesterday.

Amending the Union county trolley bill of last year. The bill provides that appeals from the award of Commissioners shall be tried in the Circuit Court. Providing that horse flesh sold as food shall be labeled horse flesh; providing for a pension for the family of Patrolman Gebhart of Hoboken, who was recently killed by a burglar; allowing parents to grant to orphan asylums children for their entire minority; with Senate amendment providing that workmen employed on public works shall be citizens of the United States.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even set up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." EDITOR RUNYON SIZED UP IN A ROUGH WAY

Editor Rollinson, of Rahway, Indulges in Tart Comments.

FRESH POLITICAL NEWS.

WAS RUNYON A CANDIDATE FOR POSTMASTER OF PLAINFIELD?

The Advocate Declares That He Was and That He is "Sore" and Disgruntled Because Congressman Fowler Did Not Award This Plum to Him—"Vainglorious as a Peacock."

For the past few years Editor and Postmaster Rollinson, of Rahway, who is one of the influential G O P. politicians of Union county, has been the object of many alleged brilliant editorial jibes from the esteemed Editor Runyon, of The News. A few days ago the latter indulged in one of his characteristic comments on the Rahway newspaperman, doubtless little thinking of the hornets nest that he was to stir up But yesterday's Advocate ripped Editor Runyon up the back in great shape and told some things that will be surprising news to most Plainfielders. The Advocate's size-up of Editor Runyon follows:

Editor Runyon, of the Plainfield Courier-News is one of these common nuisances—a man with a grievance. Like the ostrich, he fools himself with the delusion that he has safely protected his grievance from public view and hypocritically poses before the fraternity as one of those rare creatures, a truly independent editor. The "grievance" that is gnawing at his vitals like a canker worm, however, runs away with his discretion at periodical times, and the editor holding an office becomes the especial victim of his spleen. On Saturday, using our reference to Governor Voorhees' refusal to favor a bill for the publication of the laws and statement that it was only consistent with his record, for a prentense, he malignantly assails us for holding an office, repeats the stale falsehood as to total income therefrom—just about doubling same—and concludes with an insulting reference. In common with several other editors who have been made a mark for Runyon's poisonous shafts, we are tired of passing over his gratuitous slurs from a charitable feeling for his weakness. It is not pleasant to expose a fellow editor, especially one of your own political faith, but, when a man is continually going out of his way to criticize and condemn others who in no way give him any cause or excuse therefor, why patient forbearance is no virtue. While Runyon criticises editors holding office, or securing "pap" as he states it, there is no more rapacious "pap" seeker in the State than he.

In local matters, we are informed on the best authority, he has gone to the verge of political blackmail in the prosecution of his search for "spoils;" his methods have been on a level with the Tammany striker, in his dealings with local officials. While claiming to publish a straight party paper—when spoils are in sight—he nevertheless has abused his position as editor to gratify personal spite through the editorial columns and caused more disturbance in the Republican party in Plainfield than all other causes put together. While holding up other editors to scorn and ridicule for accepting office, he at the same time was one of the most persistent seekers after the Plainfield postmastership—on the quiet—and when he found himself outside the breastworks by the appointment of Mr. Bird, he was so disgruntled and sore at his failure to get an office, that he has never made a favorable editorial reference to Mr. Fowler since. In the campaign last fall with all the important issues involved in the election of a Congress, this straight (?) party paper had no opinion on the question of the election of a Congressman from this district whatever. So far as the Republican cause was concerned in this respect, it had no supporter or advocate because forsooth Runyon, the editor, didn't get the postoffice. That's the kind of a Republican he is; that's the kind of a man he is, and that's the kind of a paper the Courier-News is.

Did this man ever accept an office? Perish the thought! Yet as a matter of fact, he was elected some years ago by the Republicans as City Clerk of Plainfield. When his term expired he was refused a re-election by his own party because of his shameful neglect of the duties of the office and another Republican was selected for the position It is thus shown that this man Runyon is not only an office-seeker but a retired office-holder with a record—a portion of which we have reluctantly made public. "Fools venture where angels fear to tread."

With this we dismiss the sore head Plainfield editor from all further consideration He is a "hollow mockery and sham," vainglorious as a peacock and just about as useful.

WEDDED FIFTY YEARS.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. ABNER CORIELL.

Celebrated at Their Home in New Market Yesterday Afternoon—The Event the Occasion of Congratulations.

(Special to The Daily Press)

New Market, Market, March 25—Mr. and Mrs. Abner Smalley Coriell celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage yesterday afternoon and evening, and gathered a host of their relatives and friends about them for the occasion. Mr. Coriell is one of the oldest and most substantial residents of this section.

They are a hale and hearty old couple and enjoyed the gathering with as much zest as the younger members of the Coriell family. Mr. and Mrs. Coriell first stood together in the parlor of the homestead and received their guests. Then followed an informal time. In the evening the young people were predominent.

Invitations were sent all through the country, many of them to friends and relatives in the west. There were many letters of congratulations received from those who could not be present. The house was thronged with guests from New York, Philadelphia, Bound Brook, Plainfield, Stelton, New Brunswick and Dunellen. There are nine children and twenty-three grandchildren, most all of whom were present.

Mr. Coriell was born at Harris Lane, Middlesex county, in 1821. He was wedded to Miss Margaret Giles, his first wife, in 1841. She died December 3d, 1846. In 1849 he married Miss Catherine Anne Blue, the present Mrs. Coriell. The first ceremony was performed by Rev. R. K Rogers, of Bound Brook. Rev. W. B. Gillette, of New Market, performed the second.

The aged couple were remembered in a substantial way by many, and have quite an array of presents to remind them of the day.

WHAT A BEE SOCIABLE IS

NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT AT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Given Under the Auspices of the Young Men to the Young Women—Hunting for Slips of Paper in Flower Pots.

The young folks of the Congregational church are noted for giving odd sociables, but the one held last night excelled any that has been held there for some time. It was a "bee sociable," and was given by the young men to the ladies.

The first part of the evening was spent in a social way, with piano solos by Miss Sadie Mae Howell and vocal music by M. C. VanArsdale. Then the doors to the Sunday-school room were thrown open, and everyone was invited to walk into the room, and take part in the game, the "swarming of the bees."

Flower pots labeled rose, geranium, lily, etc., were set about in different parts of the room. Each one was handed a slip of paper directing him or her to such and such a flower pot. There the seeker found a slip of paper corresponding to the slip he held in his hand, which directed him to another flower pot, and so on until he had completed the chain, when he found that he had a complete story by putting together the different pieces of paper. These were taken to the hive keeper, George Fuller, who took the slips, and for a small sum of money gave in return a typewritten copy of the story brought to him

The game was intricate and required the exercise of patience to reach the end. Mr. Fuller is responsible for introducing it and deserves great credit. He and Stacy and Walter Raynolds were in charge of the sociable, and took Mr. VanArsdale into their confidence. They kept everything pertaining to the sociable a secret, and there was an air of mystery about it. Sponge cake and chocolate were served at the close.

A MUSICAL RECITAL.

Programme to be Arranged and Presented by Mrs Frank J Smith.

Mrs. Smith announces a recital to be given at the Casino April 4th. She will have the assistance of Miss Martha Miner, soprano, and G. Morgan Stricklett, tenor both from New York. A recent St. Albans paper speaks of her in the following terms:

Everybody had looked forward with pleasure to hearing Mrs. Smith, and no one was disappointed. She is perfectly at ease on the stage and her gestures are graceful. Her voice is magnificent. Her readings were given with the feeling expression which is the mark of an artist. It would be hard to say which of her readings found the most favor with the audience, for she showed a wide range in her selections. Possibly she was at her best in the selection from Sir Edwin Arnold entitled "In the Garden with the Persian Poet Saadi," yet it would be hard to improve upon her excellent rendering of the humorous monologue, "A Pair of Lunatics."

The music which Mr. Smith rendered on the piano during the readings was beautiful and formed an artistic setting for Mrs. Smith's selections. The music was composed by Mr Smith.

A Happy Surprise.

A complete surprise was given to Horace J Martin at his home on Jackson avenue, last evening, in honor of the celebration of the anniversary of his birthday. During the evening recitations were given by Mrs. Willard Ross, Helen Woolley, Miss Ross, Mrs Lindsey Woolley and Charles VanMiddlesworth sang a solo. A feature was the singing of a song composed for the occasion by Mrs. Woolley, entitled "The Martin Ball," and rendered to the tune of "A Hot Time in the Old Town." The affair was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Woolley

Annual Meeting of Mission Society.

The Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the First Baptist church held its twenty-sixth annual meeting yesterday afternoon and heard reports from the officers, the substance of which have already been presented and published in The Press. All the departments showed progress and the society is in a better condition than ever. During the afternoon a stirring address on missions was heard from Mrs. Heinrich, a missionary doing work in India.

Trolley Party to Brunswick.

A party of twelve Plainfielders enjoyed a trolley ride to New Brunswick and back Thursday evening and made a visit to Mrs. Miller, of the latter place. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Nomer, of the borough. En route the party had a cakewalk and a musical programme was rendered. It was 11:30 o'clock when the happy crowd reached home, but they all voted that they never had a better time.

Death of Cornelius Cooper.

Cornelius Cooper, of Somerville, father-in law of J. E. Flannery, of Scotch Plains, died yesterday after a long illness. He was 89 years of age and had resided in Somerville for fifty years. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the house at Somerville.

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE TO DRAIN CELLARS.

Borough Citizens Want to Live on Dry Land.

TO BUILD SURFACE DRAINS.

MISGIVINGS ABOUT THE NEW WATCHUNG SCHOOL BUILDING.

Neighborhood in the Vicinity of Somerset and Regent Streets and Mountain Avenue Affected by the Damp Ground Caused by Gathering Surface Water—Cost to Remedy Would be $700

Last evening at the home of A. I Smalley, of Somerset street, about a dozen property owners living in that vicinity met or the purpose of discussing ways and means for constructing a drain or sewer to carry off the surplus water that fills the cellars in the neighborhood of Regent street, Somerset street and Mountain avenue. For sometime past residents have had considerable trouble with the water which is near to the surface of the ground. When land was purchased on Mountain avenue for a public school there were many who had misgivings about the advisability of building in that locality on account of the water. In order to overcome this difficulty the contractors laid the foundation only eighteen inches underground, claiming that this would overcome the difficulty. It is now a question as to whether the trouble will be averted. Many claim that the cellar of the new school will always be more or less damp.

The discusion last evening at the meeting led to a decision which will probably provide for a drain to carry off a great portion of this water. The idea is to run this drain through Regent street, Somerset street and Mountain avenue, and have the water run into a small creek that crosses A. I. Smalley's property. This, it is thought, will make dry cellars and avert further trouble.

Mr. Smalley was authorized to secure a profile of the course of the drain, together with the proper grades, and the probable cost of the work. This is to be submitted at a meeting to be held at an early date when a final decision will be reached.

It is estimated roughly that the cost will be about $700 and the expense is to be borne entirely by the property owners or those directly affected. Of course these persons will not be called on to pay the expense of draining water from the public school grounds if that is found to be necessary. This expense will have to be borne by the taxpayers in general.

JERSEY LAWS ALL MADE.

LEGISLATURE WAITS WHILE THE GOVERNOR SIGNS BILLS.

Nearly Two Score of Measures Failed to Receive Executive Approval and No Anti-Trust Legislation Enacted.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 25—It was 9:15 o'clock last night when the New Jersey Legislature for 1899 adjourned sine die, although the hour fixed for final adjournment was 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Just before 3 o'clock the clocks in the two chambers were stopped.

A number of bills were passed in the two houses yesterday afternoon, and then a series of recesses were taken in order to give the Governor time to sign all bills before the session came to an end. This is an innovation in New Jersey Legislature proceedings, as heretofore the Legislature has adjourned and left in the Governor's hands from one hundred to two hundred bills to be disposed of by him. The Governor was busy all day and has probably signed not less than one hundred bills.

When the formality of the sine die adjournment took place, the members of the House, headed by Speaker Watkins and Messrs. McKee and Murphy, the Republican and Democratic leaders, entered the Senate chamber. Speaker Watkins, addressing President Reed, announced that the House had adjourned sine die, and then the President of the Senate made the announcement that the hour of 3 o'clock having arrived, he declared the one hundred and twenty-third Legislature of the State of New Jersey adjourned without day. President Reed's reference to the time provoked a smile.

When the final adjournment took place Governor Voorhees had completed consideration of all bills. There were about 35 measures which failed to receive his approval, and these will be filed with the State Librarian, and will fail to become laws.

RETURNS FROM CUBA AND HAS CONSTABLE IN COURT.

OFFICER ACTED WITHOUT POWER.

Luther Mundy is the Constable Alleged to Have Acted in an Illegal Manner.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, March 25.—Colonel William B Hayes, who has just returned from Cuba, no sooner set foot in the town than he began proceedings against Constable Luther Mundy to have him arrested. The charge is that during the Colonel's absence the officer overstepped his duty, and served a summons upon the Colonel while the latter and his wife were out of the State.

The papers were drawn up and yesterday the deputy sheriff of Middlesex county made the arrest. C. T. Rogers went on Mundy's bonds. At the time the papers were served upon the Colonel, there was no member of the family at home, and as the law directs that the summons must be served upon the party sued, or some member of his family, Colonel Hayes claims the service is illegal. After the summons had been served, judgment was taken, and an execution issued

The goods would no doubt have been sold had not the Colonel's hired man driven the constable away from the house with a pistol. Mundy has many friends who say they will stand by him and see the thing through.

OBSEQUIES WERE SIMPLE.

Funeral of the Late Mrs. Cutter Were Held Yesterday Afternoon.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Caroline P. Cutter, who died Tuesday afternoon, was held yesterday afternoon from her late home, 409 West Front street, at 2:30 o'clock. Having such a large circle of friends, and being known as a religious worker, the house was filled to overflowing.

The services were in charge of her pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., of the Trinity Reformed church, with which body she was identified. They were very simple, in accordance with a wish expressed by Mrs. Cutter prior to her death. Rev. Mr. Schenck read the Scripture, offered prayer, and made a few remarks in which he paid glowing tribute to the dead woman.

The floral offerings were abundant, and consisted of set pieces, bunches and cut flowers. There was a wreath of roses from Mr. and Mrs. Oliver, of Rahway; a lyre of roses from Mrs. Darby; bunches of calla lillies from Mrs. John Abbott and Mrs. John Lewis; American beauty roses from Mrs. Brown, of Newark, and also flowers from the members of her Sunday-school class.

Interment was at Rahway beside her husband and mother. The pallbearers were four cousins of the deceased, James Waters, Charles Woodruff, Henry Woodruff and Elmer Oliver, all of Rahway.

THE WOMAN'S EXCHANGE.

Success of the Work Demonstrated Beyond a Doubt.

At the second annual meeting of the Plainfield Exchange for Woman's Work, the following account of the year's work was rendered. Receipts $7,681.04; disbursements, $5,650.79; balance $33.25. The superintendent's report showed receipts from sales: Fancy work and infant's department, $1,383.27; household department, $3,539.83; making a total in all departments of $4,923.100. Committee on consignors reported instead of necessities. Therefore the executive committee makes this explanation, as they wish this matter so be fully understood by the public. The annual fee for subscribers is $5 with privilege of naming one consigner; $3 without such privilege. Consignors ticket $2 and the Exchange receives 10 per cent on price of articles sold. Mrs. O T. Waring was re-elected president.

Parks Lost at Whist.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, March 25—The semi-final round for the trophy of the New Jersey Whist Association was played in the rooms of the Jersey City Club last evening. The Ridgewood Club defeated the Park Club, of Plainfield, 13 to 6, and the Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club defeated the New Jersey Athletic Club by three tricks. The final round will be played tonight between Ridgewood and Elizabeth.

Mule Kicked; Sent to the Hospital

George McEntud, of 738 West Fourth street, whose occupation is that of driving mules, received a lacerated wound of the scalp yesterday afternoon while in the performance of his duty. One of the mules he was driving became balky and vented his spite by kicking the driver. McEntud went to the hospital and had the wound dressed after which he went home. The injury is not serious.

A NEIGHBORHOOD RALLY

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEMBERS MET IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Rally Was Conducted by Henry Gee, President of the First M. E. League—Discussed the Work Before Them

There was a pleasant gathering of all the Epworth Leaguers of this vicinity in Vincent chapel, last evening, to attend the "neighboring rally," given by Chapter No. 1, of the First M. E church. The chapel was crowded with young people who came from Dunellen, Scotch Plains, Westfield and Plainfield. Five Leagues were represented.

The interior of the chapel presented a charming appearance. Long streamers of red and white, the League colors, were draped about the room and from a central point over the desk to the gallery. The emblem of the Epworth League occupied a prominent place over the platform. Palms and potted plants were grouped about the platform and the sides of the room, giving a charming effect.

The rally was conducted by Henry McGee, president of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church. After an opening hymn and prayer by Rev Dr. W. C Snodgrass, the presidents of the different Leagues present were called upon for three-minute speeches. Westfield was represented by Mr. Townley; Scotch Plains by Mr. Lewis; Monroe Avenue M. E. church by Mr Beekman; Dunellen by Mr. Apgar, and Grace M. E. church by E E. Winckler.

They extended the greetings of their fellow-members and gave some happy thought of the work before them. Then followed a piano solo by Miss Florence L. Spaulding, of Bound Brook, a recitation by Miss Mary A. Luckey, a soprano solo by Miss Etta Raybert, and another recitation by Miss Luckey.

WILSON FOR SENATOR.

A FRIEND OF THE FORMER MAYOR ADVOCATES HIS CLAIMS.

A Correspondent of a Somerville Paper Starts the Ball Rolling in Favor of the Sage of "Tunlaw's" Nomination Next Fall

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, March 25.—This week's issue of the Somerville Democrat, which appeared yesterday, contained the following letter, signed a "Somerset County Democrat," advocating the nomination of Former Mayor John F. Wilson, of North Plainfield, for the Democratic nomination of Senator to be elected this fall to succeed Senator Reed:

"Col. John F. Wilson, of the borough of North Plainfield, who was last week defeated for re-election for Mayor of that overwhelmingly Republican town by 13 votes, now looms up as a probable Democratic Senatorial nominee with many elements of strength. Col. Wilson is a retired business man, a Democrat of the stern Jeffersonian school of Democracy. He is one of the largest taxpayers in the county and has resided in North Plainfield for over 30 years, where he has a handsome country seat, residing there the year round. He is a strict business disciplinarian and intellectually equipped to such a degree that he would soon become a State notable by the leaders of both parties, if he were elected to the Senate. Party leaders admit his strength and his qualifications are unquestioned. Political forecasters must look to the eastern end of the county where Senatorial timber is being discussed and ponder over the name of the courteous, dignified ex-Mayor of North Plainfield when advocating strong candidates for Senatorial honors. Col. Wilson would loyally represent Somerset. His business training would be a safeguard for the taxpayer, while his stern individuality would command State attention. The Democracy of this county will do well to consider the availability and sterling worth of ex-Mayor Wilson. 'Tis such men as he that the taxpayer demands. He administers public affairs as he does private business.

A Somerset Democrat."

Entertained at Cards.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Taylor, of Fairview avenue, entertained the card club of which they are members, at their home Thursday evening. This was the last meeting of the club for the season and an informal dance followed the play. The first and second prizes for the women were won by Miss Elizabeth Smalley and Miss Lillian A. Force, while George Fuller and Harry Maxson were the successful contestants for the men's prizes. In addition to the regular membership there were present a number of out-of town guests.

—Grace church choir had their first rehearsal of Belshazzar with the orchestra last evening.

BACK TAXES GROW SINCE LAST REPORT.

New Report of Martin Act Commissioners.

IT WAS FILED YESTERDAY

THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT NOW REACHES $78,000.

The First Report Was for $65,000—Some of the '98 Taxes, and Sewer Assessments are Now Included—Names of Innocent Property Owners Have Many of Them, Been Dropped From List

(By a Staff Representative.)

Elizabeth, March 25—The Martin Act commissioners of Plainfield have been at work again. Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock two bulky volumes containing the new report of the commissioners were filed in the office of the County Clerk in this city. The old report, which was set aside by the Union County Circuit Court, showed some $65,000 in back taxes and assessments to be collected. The new report, which includes the taxes for 1 98 and the sewer assessments, foots up to a total of about $78,000.

The Martin Act commissioners made their first report March 29th, 1898. The report was contested by some of the interested property owners and was referred back to the commissioners by the Circuit Court for reconsideration, October 19th, 1898. The commissioners resumed their hearings Dec 19th. After all the interested ones had been heard the commissioners went to work and prepared the report that was filed yesterday afternoon. It will now await the approval of the Circuit Court, after which steps will be taken for the collection of the same.

The report is an interesting one in view of the agitation over the Martin Act and its results and the fight made against the decision of the commissioners. The increase in the grand total is caused by the addition of the taxes due for 1898 and the sewer assessments that were not paid. A glance over the pages of the two volumes of the report show that a number of the property owners, who had been entirely innocent of the fact that taxes were still due on property they had purchased, have been omitted in the new report.

The report is divided into two volumes, one for the east section, containing the First and Second wards, and the other for the west section, containing the Third and Fourth wards. There are, in all, 555 properties affected, which are divided among some 200 different property owners.

Among the first items noted in the First ward is one against the Young Men's Christian Association of $504.12 back taxes and assessments for property on East Front street. If the bill, which has just passed the Assembly at Trenton, be made a law, the Y. M. C. A. will hereafter be exempt from taxation.

The largest item is against the estate of Elias Cole, for property on East Front street and Leland avenue, and amounts to $4,769.15. Among the other large charges are those against Loomis & Rice, $1,800; Franklin Wiley, $2,245, and John K. VanNess, $1,400. Among the prominent names on the list, against whom the amount of back taxes varied, were those of J. M. Vail, Rev. J. P. Taylor, D. W. Littell, George DeMeza, Craig A. Marsh, William A. Coddington, John E. Beerbower and A. D. Thompson. There were 141 properties involved in the ward.

The most prominent name to figure in the report of the Second ward was that of Martine. The back taxes placed against it amounted in all to $14,106.33, and were divided as follows: Estate of Daniel Martine, $10,660.60; estate of Anna N. Martine, $2,163.37, and James E. Martine, $1,282.36.

Back taxes were recorded against the name of Constantine P. Ralli to the amount of $900; against the Hotel Hunterston for $622.21; against Ella J. Cokefair for $789.78; against Dr. Edward Rushmore for $705.37, and against J. T. H. Poillion for $567.56. Among the other names noted for lesser amounts were those of Mrs. Catherine H. McClure, J. T. Vail, estate of Elizabeth D. Vail, Emma A. Jones, J. B. Mills, C. H. Hand and the First National Bank. There are 130 properties affected in the ward.

The principal item of back taxes in the Third ward is against a farm, the interest in which is divided among their parties. The division of back taxes is as follows: William J. Leonard, $1,63.59; estate of Cornelia B. Leonard, O. B. Leonard executor, $340.60; and Mrs. E. M. Leonard,

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

Escaped Spanish Prisoners Say That the Insurgents Intend to Give Battle at Malabon—Their Supplies Said to be Short—Gen. Otis' Plan to Force Surrender.

Manila, March 25.—The enemy are extremely active in the vicinity of Malabon in preparing defenses, evidently anticipating an attack. They keep well under cover. A small body, however, emerged from the jungle on the extreme left yesterday and fired upon the Kansas troops in the trenches, fatally wounding Private Cohen, of Company B, and Private Musr, of Company E.

The Oregon Volunteers and the Twenty-second Regulars marched to the front to-day. The third and Seventeenth regiments have disembarked from the Sherman. Gen. H. G. Otis's brigade struck their tents this morning, and an early move is probable.

Sixteen English refugees arrived here yesterday from Dagupan, the railroad terminus, on board the steamer Saturnus. They report that the natives are generally friendly and the officers invariably courteous. Mr. Higgins, manager of the railroad, and about a dozen unmarried men in charge of the various business interests declined to take advantage of the opportunity to leave.

Nothing has been heard from the two American planters at Calumpit since hostilities began.

According to Filipino accounts, the English refugees say, a thousand Americans have been killed, the fatalities being especially heavy at Caloocan, where the United States troops "rushed like madmen against a storm of bullets."

Two Spanish prisoners who have escaped from Polo to the lines of the Kansas regiment report that the Filipinos have concentrated their forces at Malabon and Polo. They add that only Aguinaldo's bodyguard is at Malolos, and that the rebel leaders apparently intend to stake their fortunes on a fight at Malabon, where it was expected an engagement would take place yesterday. It defeated, it is further asserted, the rebels intend to disperse to the swamps and mountains.

The rebels were putting their Bolos in front, believing that the Bolomen's charms will avert the bullets. The Bolos of the Filipinos greatly outnumber the rifles in their hands. The rebels are further said to have admitted that they could not stand the American shells and bayonet charges.

The escaped Spaniards corroborated the stories told of food shortage among the rebels, and they added that their hospitals are short of supplies.

To Pen Rebels In.

Washington, March 25.—The next movement at Manila is expected to be by water. It is believed that Gen. Otis will place a complete brigade on board vessels, steam rapidly northward and land them beyond the insurgent headquarters at Malolos.

If this movement succeeds, as it should if made with rapidity, the insurgent army will find itself completely penned in with no opportunity for retreat. To the north will be this flying brigade, on the Laguna de Bay, across which they will be prevented from escaping by the American gunboats now afloat there; the Pasig River to the south is well policed by tinclads, and with a strong line in the position occupied by Wheaton's brigade, will cut off any movement in that direction, while to the west the Bay of Manila is closed by Dewey's vessels.

It is hard to conceive how, if this plan carries, the insurgents can longer avoid a decisive conflict, which must end either in their breaking through the American lines or in their surrender. It is evident that Otis expects the latter, for he has already advised the War Department that the insurrection cannot last much longer.

WE WILL BE SHY OF SOLDIERS.

Troops Going Out of the Country and None left to Fight Indians.

New York, March 25.—Six regiments of regulars have just received orders to proceed to Manila, and a seventh regiment to go to Cuba to take the place of the volunteers released from the Government service. The regiments which are preparing to go to the Philippines are as follows:

Sixth Artillery, the headquarters of which is at present at Fort McHenry, Maryland. Companies of this regiment are now doing duty in Maryland, Florida, North Carolina, Washington, D. C., and Virginia.

Sixth Infantry, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Ninth Infantry, stationed at San Francisco.

Thirteenth Infantry, stationed at the headquarters of the Department of the East, in New York harbor, and at several of the forts in this State along the Canadian border.

Sixteenth Infantry, companies of which are doing duty in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri.

Twenty-first Infantry, stationed at Plattsburg barracks, New York.

The Second Infantry, which is about to proceed to Cuba, is now located at Savannah, Ga.

Army officers say that if these orders are carried out they will leave the United States in poor condition to prevent outbreaks by Indians or to protect the large cities from possible riots. They say that the few artillery regiments are scattered along the coast to guard the forts, and the five and a half cavalry regiments in the country are also so scattered that they also would be useless on a sudden call.

The only force that could be called on is three regiments of infantry, two of which are colored troops.

More Windsor Victims.

New York, March 25.—Ten charred bodies and portions of spinal columns which the police believe represent the bodies of two other victims have thus far been taken from the ruins of the Windsor Hotel. The total number of known dead has now reached twenty-two, and the list of missing persons approximates sixty.

LONG DISTANCE FOR BOGUS MONEY.

Mr. Gardner Came from California to Buy "Green Goods."

Jersey City, March 25.—Matthew J. Gardner, of Long Beach, Cal., arrived in the Pennsylvania Depot late yesterday afternoon in response to "green goods" circulars. He had telegraphed from Harrisburg to the person who had lured him on that he would meet him at the Palace Hotel, near the railroad station in Newark, but went through Newark by mistake.

A policeman suspected his errand from his queer actions and took him to a Jersey City police station, where he admitted his errand. He had several hundred dollars.

Chief Murphy, of Jersey City, arranged by 'phone with Chief Hopper, of Newark, for Gardner to keep the appointment with the "green goods" man. Gardner was taken to the Palace Hotel last night and assigned to room No. 9. Several detectives occupied adjoining rooms. Soon there was a knock at Gardner's door, and the "steerer" of the "green goods" gang presented himself, and after receiving the countersign agreed upon, "Jewel 709," was satisfied that Gardner was the man he was to meet. He was preparing to take him from the hotel when the detectives arrested him. The prisoner said he was W. Griffin. Gardner was detained as a witness.

J. Percival, of Ithaca, N. Y., who came to Jersey City two months ago on a similar errand, and has been in jail ever since, identified Griffin as the man who lured him on, although he called himself Garland at the time.

JUST AGAINST CROKER.

Chairman Brewster Expects to Have the Back of Tammany With Him.

New York, March 25.—"Just say for us," said Chairman Brewster of the Bryan Jefferson day banquet committee, "that we are not against the membership of Tammany Hall, but against the leaders. We expect to win over a majority of the Tammany voters and have them in our new organization."

The names and addresses of all applicants for tickets are arranged by assembly districts in Greater New York. These names are to be used after the dinner in forming the new anti-Crokerorganization, and then a movement will be started throughout the State, with headquarters in this city, for the election of seventy-two Chicago platform Democrats to the National Democratic Convention.

"We will carry New York State, and the ticket will be Bryan and Sulzer. Congressman Sulzer is very strong in the South and West, and the labor people here are with him," said a member of the committee.

The dollar bills are pouring in for the dinner. Mayor Fiske, of Mount Vernon, sent a silver certificate to-day with a request for a seat. The Russo-American Democratic Club sent a check for fifty seats. From Paterson, N. J., came an application for 100.

Chairman Brewster said Gov. Pingree had not declined. The formal invitations are not as yet printed, and one, therefore, has not been sent to Pingree, but he is on the list. The question of presiding officer is yet to be determined. The labor unions are in a majority on the committee, and will be able to dictate the man. They have Justice Gaynor in mind, but as he does not sympathize with the Supreme Court plank of the Chicago platform, his acceptance is doubtful.

"Are you going to the dollar dinner?" he was asked.

"I'm not going to the 10-dollar dinner," he replied.

Sound Waves Photographed.

Madison, Wis., Marh 25.—Prof. R. W. Wood, of Madison, has suceeded in photographing sound waves in air. The sound wave is the crack of an electric spark, and it is illuminated and photographed by means of the light of a second spark, which flashes between two magnesium wires at some distance behind the first, and at an interval of about one-tenth thousandth of a second after the first spark. The sound wave is thus caught before it has gotten out of the field of the instrument, although moving with a velocity of 1,000 feet a second. The wave appears as a thin circle of shadow, with a light border, being simply a sectional view of a rapidly diverging spherical shell of condensed air.

By placing a glass plate near the point where the wave starts the reflected wave or echo has been photographed, which appears as a circle with equal but opposite curvature. These waves were observed by Topler, a German physicist, a number of years ago, but they have never been photographed before.

Klondike Mine Syndicate.

Tacoma, March 25.—Alexander McDonald has arrived from London, where he and H. A. Ferguson floated McDonald's Bonanza in the Klondike, with $2,000,000 capital. To this corporation they have transferred several claims which DcDonald and Ferguson believed to be the richest gold placer ground in the Klondike and probably in the world.

They purchased one of them on Bonanza Creek a year ago for $125,000. Within one month they took $135,000 from a very small hole, which Ferguson says will produce at least $5,000,000 before it is worked out.

Judge Wakefield ruled that the first proprietors were partners and had the right to give legal titles without releasing dower interest. Mrs. Jackson accordingly asked to dismiss her case. The decision disposes of all the cases.

In forming the London syndicate McDonald and Ferguson have carried out a plan projected over a year ago, of enlisting British capital to work their best Klondike holdings on a mammoth scale. An immense hydraulic plant, consisting of six carloads of machinery, has been purchased and will arrive in Tacoma next week.

Important Legal Decision.

Sioux City, Ia., March 25.—A decision affecting several million dollars' worth of real estate here has been rendered by District Judge Wakefield.

The eight original owners of the town site of Sioux City sold their land without providing purchasers with releases of their wives' dower in ninety to a hundred blocks in the heart of the city. About a year ago heirs of the original owners sued to establish their alleged one third interest. The suits of Sarah Jackson against Joseph and Sigismund Shulein were made a test.

American Women Plans to Afford Them Means for Selfsupport.

SOLDIERS, ACTS IN THE WAR

Gen. Brooke Will Issue a Decree That Neither Cuban or Spanish Soldiers Shall be Prosecuted for Their Acts During the War—This Will Prevent Partizan Officials from Venting Their Spite.

Havana, March 25.—Mrs. Kathleen Kennedy, representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, has left for the States to complete arrangements for the establishment at Matanzas next fall of a monster woman's exchange and mutual benefit society. After a short stay in Chicago Mrs. Kennedy will go to Financial aid in New York.

Before leaving Matanzas the lady gave a charitable performance at the Teatro Theatre. Major-Gen. Wilson and his staff, Gen. Sanger and the civil governor and alcalde of the province were interested spectators. A chorus of 100 Cuban children, who, after many days of practice, had committed the words of "Old Glory" to memory, sang, and a number of Cuban lads participated in a drill in which they made the outlines of the American flag.

Gen. Brooks Decree.

Havana, March 25.—That Cuban and Spanish rancors and hatreds, the outgrowth of the war conditions, are still pursued in Cuba is shown in a communication recently sent to Gov.-Gen. Brooke by Senor Launza, head of the Department of Justice and Public Instruction. He says it is a matter of daily occurrence that in different parts of the island proceedings are taken against those who belonged to guerrilla and other Spanish forces during the war for crimes imputed to have been committed at that time. Cuba's peace, Senor Lanuza adds, requires that this be stopped. Continuing, he says:

"If we open the door to such accusations we should soon have a series of actions against Cuban leaders and resident Spanish soldiers which would constitute a continuation of the war, but with other arms. The Cuban army, under the necessity of war, burned property and seized food and clothing. The Spaniards did similar things. These men should not now be prosecuted in the courts for actions committed in wartime. Cuba must forget the past. Such prosecutions disturb the country's reconstruction. The matter should be handled at the root, by ordering them to cease all prosecutions."

Gov.-Gen. Brooke will issue a decree that the civil and military judges must not recognize and must dismiss all present and pending actions against troops in the field for or against Spain during the war for acts committed then. Further, the Governor-General will order the immediate release of all men now held in custody on such charges.

Col. S. S. Dunwoody, chief signal officer on Gov.-Gen. Brooke's staff, has completed the overland telegraph wire to Puerto Principe, and it is now open to the public at 2 cents a word.

MR. SHERMAN MOVES.

Transferred from the Steamer Paris to the Cruiser Chicago.

Santiago de Cuba, March 25.—John Sherman has been safely moved from the American Line steamer Paris to the quarters prepared for him on board the United States cruiser Chicago.

Mr. Sherman rested easily during the night, and awoke cheerful and prepared for the change. The Chicago arrived here after daylight, and preparations were immediately made for the transfer of Mr. Sherman from the passenger vessel to the warship.

He was carried on a stretcher which was laid on one of the boats of the Paris while fast to the davits. The boat was then lowered into the water and was taken in tow by a steam launch. Two umbrellas were placed over the sick man to shade him from the sun. Mr. Sherman was hoisted on board the Chicago in the same manner. He was accompanied by Mr. F. B. Wiborg, Dr. Magee and a nurse.

Immediately after Mr. Sherman had been taken on board the Chicago, the Paris, with her party of tourists on board, left for Cienfuegos.

To Go to Fortress Monroe.

Washington, March 25.—Mrs. McCallum, ex-Secretary Sherman's daughter, received a cablegram from Mr. Wiborg saying that Mr. Sherman would sail to-day on the Chicago and requesting Mrs. McCallum to meet the party at Fortress Monroe on Tuesday. Mrs. McCallum will leave here next Monday to be at Fortress Monroe when Mr. Sherman arrives.

This cablegram evidently determines the destination of the Chicago. It was thought the vessel might take Mr. Sherman to Tampa.

Negroes Lynched in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., March 25.—The mob which has been chasing the negoes in Little River county came upon a gang of negroes, and from reports coming almost direct from the scene it is learned that six more negroes were lynched and that their bodies were seen dangling from the trees in the woods. The mob seems determined to drive the negros out, and the leaders say that the only way to make living safe in Little River county is to exterminate the blacks. The whites have positive proof, it is said, that the negroes under the leadership of "Gen." Duckett, who was lynched last week, planned a race war, and that each black on becoming a member of the band swore to help kill the whites.

The leaders of the mob have the names of every member of the band and will keep up the hase in the swamps until they lynch them all. Thus far twelve negroes have been lynched in forty-eight hours, but it is believed that a search of the woods will result in the finding of many other bodies. The mob is searching the swamps, but as the country is remote from the railroads or telegraph wires it is hard to reach there except by roundabout routes.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

A Weaker Market But No Diminution in the Volume of Business.

New York, March 25.—Business is not frightened, either by the great capitalization of new companies or by the wild fluctuations in Wall Street. It goes ahead with calm disregard of speculative performances, and payments through the principal clearing houses have been for the week 78.2 per cent. larger than last year. No matter how much the stock operations in New York may count, business elsewhere is large enough to warrant a wonderful expansion of industries, and that is the thing most important to observe. In no conisedable branch has production diminished, but in practically all it has been increasing during the past week.

In iron and steel a little lower price for Bessemer pig appears at Pittsburg, but with Grey Forge 7½ cents higher there, and southern iron at Chicago 50 cents to $1 higher.

The minor metals are all weaker, with the reaction of London speculation, though copper has declined to 17 cents here, and is yet so much above London that exports have been stopped for the week.

Wool is at the doubting point, with large sales ordered from the interior by tired holders, and some concessions made to secure transactions at Philadelphia and Boston, though quotations show only moderate decline, and sales at the three chief markets are almost as large as in 1892.

The wheat market is just now somewhat stronger, for although western receipts for the week are 3,359,000 bushels against 2,557,666 last year, and for three weeks 2,900,000 larger, the exports, flour included, have been for the week from Atlantic ports 2,920,476 bushels against 1,824,569 last year, and from Pacific ports 824,183 against 1,371,826 last year, other exports being 350,920 bushels.

Stocks have been slow in the market, but for good railroad securities fairly strong, the average for sixty having risen 98 cents per share during the past week, while the industrial securities average 34 cents per share higher. The earnings of railroads for the month, 2.7 per cent. larger than last year and 9.0 per cent. larger than in the same weeks of 1892 should count for something, and doubtless stimulate the steady investment demand which appears. The money market has been without real disturbance, although although questions regarding receipt of industrial stocks as collateral have given it a tight appearance whenever these are chiefly offered. Failures for the three weeks of March have been $4,916,226 against $4,906,425 last year, and $4,997,301 in 1897. Failures for the week have been 200 in the United States against 251 last year, and 24 in Canada against 21 last year.

A Womans Hotel in New York.

New York, March 25.—An incorporated company is being formed to build a woman's hotel in this city, to be ducted somewhat after the plans of the hotel built by the late A. N. Stewart, and which proved a failure.

More than one-third of the $400,000 capital stock has been subscribed, John D. Rockefeller heading the list with a $20,000 subscription. William C. Schermerhorn, Mr. and Mrs. W. Everit Macy, and Dr. Frederick E. Hyde have subscribed $10,000 each. Miss Matilda W. Bruce, Miss Catherine W. Bruce, Mrs. Joseph M. White, and Mrs. William H. Osborn have each taken $5,000 of stock. Other large subscribers have been: Mrs. H. P. Wertheim, Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, Mrs. C. C. Goodhue, Miss Emily Tuckerman, William Lanman Bull, Henry Lewis Morris, Miss Grace Wilkes, Miss A. B. Jennings, Mrs. Frederick Hasbrouck, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Henry R. Barnes, Mrs. Lionel Sutro, Miss M. M. Roberts, Miss Nora Keene, Mrs. James Speyer, M. Dwight Collier, Miss Hannah N. Lawrance, Miss C. A. Bliss, Mrs. Charles R. Lowell, and Mrs. A. L. Hyde.

As soon as the incorporation is effected a site will be selected near Fifth avenue, between Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth streets. The plans for the building are already completed. It is proposed to erect a twelve story fireproof structure, modelled after the best hotels, and to furnish it well throughout. The promoters desire that the plan be regarded in no sense as a charity.

In the State Legislatures.

An enactment in Tennessee provides that all contracts hereafter entered into shall be payable in any legal tender. It is a silver victory.

The Ohio law requiring those who sign nomination papers to promise, under oath, to support the candidates petitioned for has been adopted in Missouri.

Groceries are being sold too cheaply in Pennsylvania, according to an argument made in the House in support of a bill to tax proprietors of retail stores $500 each for every store they operate over three. The bill passed with but little oposition.

A bill providing for the municipal ownership, somewhat remotely perhaps, of street railroads in Detroit, has been adopted in Michigan. It permits the City Council to appoint, at any time within twenty years, three commissioners with authority to buy or lease any street railway in the city, payment to be made by an issue of bonds secured by the railroad property acquired. The plan is the joint product of William L. Johnson and Gov. Pingree.

New York's Chinatown.

New York, March 25.—The order has been promulgated that gambling must stop in Chinatown from to-day. Before the order was issued thirty-five fan-tan establishments, twelve lotteries and six policy-shops were running Quan Yick Nam said.

There are 20,000 Chinese according to Quan Yick Nam, in Greater New York, and 1,300 of them are in Chinatown, and many from all parts of the city go to Chinatown on Saturday evening and play fan-tan all day Sunday.

There are, Quan Yick Nam says about 100 white women in Chinatown, besides several recently brought from China.

Opposes French Operas.

Montreal, March 25.—Archbishop Bruchesi, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Montreal, has created a sensation in theatrical circles by writing to the proprietor of her Majesty's Theatre that unless some of the pieces contained in the repertoire for the French opera to be produced there are eliminated, he will be obliged to issue a letter forbidding the faithful to attend.

SENATE PATRONAGE

Work Has Already Begun for the Next Session.

PRES.'S EASTERN POLICY

A Strange Tale That the President Did Not Know His Mind Before the Commissioners Sailed—Clarkson to be the Axman of the New Senate If He Can be Left Unhampered

Washington, March 25.—Gen. Clarkson, of Iowa, formerly First Assistant Postmaster-General, has notified Vice-President Hobart that he will accept the position of Secretary of the Senate, provided the "reorganization" is completed and the patronage dispensed on strictly partisan lines; otherwise, he says, he does not care for the place. Some time ago a majority of the Republican Senators, at the instance of Vice-President Hobart, signed a letter to Gen. Clarkson, asking him to become secretary. Mr. Clarkson, of Iowa, formerly First Assistson's record in the Postoffice Department, where he replaced 60,000 Democratic Postmasters with as many Republicans, would be a sufficient guarantee, should he become Secretary of the Senate, that the office would be conducted on parisan principles.

Gen. Clarkson has no desire to undertake the duties unless he is unhampered.

Senator T. C. Platt has secured the first appointment of the new Senate. He had Curstis, of New York, appointed clerk to the Secretary of the Senate in place of Robert P. Troy, of California. Curtis was doorkeeper in the Senate gallery.

An agreement was reached by the Republican and Democratic managers in the Senate before Congress adjourned that the employes were to hold over until December, unless the Senate should sooner be called together. This is in accordance with the custom of the Senate, which permits retiring Senators to hold their committee rooms until the next meeting. It is also customary to permit employes who owe their positions to retiring Senators to remain in office until December 1. It was in violation of this agreement that Mr. Bright removed Troy and appointed Curtis. There is always the efficiency record, and Mr. Troy, being found inefficient, according to the record, gives way to Mr. Curtis. It appears that when the Republicans control the Senate the Democratic employes are found deficient, and vice versa.

The patronage of the Senate is divided at present into three classes. A certain number of places are given to the efficiency roll, others to the caucus roll and the remainder equally divided among Senators. This agreement was reached two years ago. Six years ago, when Mr. Cleveland was re-elected, he found a Democratic Senate. Col. Bright was made sergeant-at-arms and Mr. Cox secretary, and the patronage was divided on a partisan basis. All except caucus and efficiency employes were Democrats. This continued for four years, although toward the end of this period, as the impression grew that the Republicans might control the Senate, leading Republican were given a few places. Two years ago the Democrats and Populists combined, as the latter held the balance of power. They prevented the Republicans from wholly "reorganizing" the Senate, and the agreement was made that outside of a few excepted places, the rest were to be divided among all Senators pro rata. Now the pendulum has swung the other way. The Republicans will have a clear majority over all, and can dictate their terms.

McKinley's Philippine Policy.

Washington, March 25.—The news that the United States Commission to the Philippines is about to issue its the Philippines is about to issue its formal proclamation at Manila, as a preliminary to the "fight to a finish" which Gen. Otis will begin against Aguinaldo, lends interest to a fact not generally known. At least two of the Commissioners were hostile to the imperialistic policy before setting out for the Orient.

One of these, a man of so high standing with the public that the President considered it all-important to have his services, visited the White House before accepting his appointment, and said:

"Mr. President, it is only right that we should understand each other frankly. If you have offered this appointment to me under the impression that I look with favor upon our acquisition of the Philippines, you have made a mistake. I am absolutely opposed to expansion."

"That makes no difference," answered the President, "I chose you because I have great confidence in your practical pudgment. If, when you have looked the ground all over, you still feel of the same mind, I want you to say so."

"Then you want our advice even on the fundamental question of the retention of the Philippines?"

"Yes. It is a question on which my own opinion is still unsettled."

This was after the Peace Commissioners had received their instructions to accept the cession of Luzon only as a minimum, but to demand the entire Philippine archipelago unless otherwise advised later. The President's defenders assert that the incongruity between his two positions will disappear when it is remembered that his duty was to take and hold, as trustee for the American people, all practicable fruits of the war, and leave it for Congress to determine how we should dispose of those which we might afterwards conclude we did not want.

Fireman Killed in Cleveland.

Cleveland, March 25.—Fire which broke out in the building of the Dangler stove works and spread to the plant of the Cleveland Stamping Screw Company yesterday destroyed both concerns, entailing a loss of $300,000. The flames originated in an explosion in the japanning room of the Dangler works.

Lieut. Roth of Engine Company No. 7 was caught beneath the falling walls and was given up for dead. Six hundred men are thrown out of employment.

NEWSPAPER STAMPS SOLD WELL.

Government Wish it Had Charged More for Them.

Washington, March 25.—When it was announced that owing to the solicitation of stamp collectors the Postoffice Department had determined to place on sale 50,000 complete sets of newspaper and periodical stamps at $5 a set, many people wondered how the experiment would turn out. But the stamps have sold so rapidly that the Department now wishes it had offered more and had charged a higher price. Notice of the sale was given on February 4 by means of a circular, and the sale began on February 15. The supply is now practically disposed of. The 3,000 sets assigned to New York were sold in one day. The stock in New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago and San Francisco is exhausted. There is a small stock in the Boston office. Very few sets now remain at the General Postoffice.

The sets consist of twelve stamps, the one-cent, two-cent, five-cent, ten, twenty-five and fifty-cent, the two, five, ten, twenty, fifty and one hundred dollar stamps. For these twelve bits of paper 50,000 persons have been willing to pay $5. The total cost to the Government is about $25. The profit on the issue will thus be about $249,975.

For many years collectors have tried in vain to obtain these stamps. They were never sold to publishers, but were placed by the postmaster in a book and canceled as the postage was used by the publisher owning the stamps. No more than the original 50,000 can be sold, for the faith of the Department is pledged that the plates shall be destroyed and all odd stamps, fragmentary lots and the stock of the last issues are to be destroyed. This will be done soon. The stamps will probably go to a high premium.

McKinley to Sampson.

Washington, March 25.—The following letter of President McKinley to Rear-Admiral Sampson, in reply to the latter's letter asking that the naval officers whose promotions failed of confirmation by the Senate might be advanced without regard to his own case, made made public yesterday by Secrtary Long:

Executive Mansion,
Washington, March 13, 1899.

My Dear Sir:—I am in receipts of your very considerate letter of the 9th inst., reference to your own interests, the other naval officers who rendered such conspicuous service in the naval campaign in the West Indies may have the advancement which you recommend for them, and in which you ask nothing for yourself. I highly commend this disinterested action on your part. Let me assure you that I have the highest appreciation of your services as Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic naval forces during the Spanish war in blockading Cuba, cooperating with the army, directing the movements of the great number of vessels under your orders, and at last, after the most effective preparation, consummating, with the gallant officers and men under your command, the destruction of the Spanish fleet. It was in recognition of your services and of your great skill that I recommend you to the State for the advancement you had earned. Very truly yours,

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Iowa's Condition Excellent.

Washington, March 25.—Reports that have been received at the Navy Department from San Francisco relative to the battleship Iowa, are to the effect that the ship is really in excellent condition, and that the long run from New York was made by her without any accident of consequence. Engineer-in-Chief Melville said that all the ship needed in the machinery department after this extended voyage was a new set of tubes for the boilers, and these tubes are required to be replaced periodically in every ship in active service. The cracked cylinder which was supposed to have been so serious an accident turns out, according to the department advices, to have been nothing more than what is known as a shrinkage crack in the cylinder casing.

Connecticut Contested Election Cases.

Hartford, Conn., March 25.—The committee on contested elections of the Connecticut Senate, which recounted the ballots in New Haven to settle the contested-election case of Averill vs. Callahan, reported errors in the original count in fourteen of the fifteen wards in the city. The discrepancies between the ballots found in the boxes and the returns made to the Secretary of State varied from one to eighty-three. Following the report came the bills of the counsel on either side of both the Averill-Callahan and the Hall-Kennedy cases. Corporation Counsel Ely of New Haven and Judge W. S. Downes, who conducted Averill's case, want $1,825. Callahan wants $1,795.50. William C. Case, who defended for Senator Kennedy, desires $1,150. The total is $5,820.50. Senator Welch denounced the bills as "simply robbery," and they were finally referred to the committee on contingent expenses There is a statute limiting the allowance for contested-election expenses to $100, but it has never been lived up to. After the presentation of these expense accounts, a bill was introduced to remove contested-election cases from the Legislature, so far as the finding of facts is concerned, such finding being made the duty of the Superior Court.

Mme. Dreyfus Loses.

Paris, March 25.—In the Court of Cassation M. Ballot de Beaupre, president of the civil section of the Court of Cassation, to-day read a report recommending the rejection of the application of Mme. Dreyfus for the exclusion from the revision inquiry of three Judges—MM. Petit, Crepon and Lepelletier—who in the early stages of the proceedings, decided unfavorably on a Dreyfus question.

The public prosecutor, M. Manau, recommended that contrary action be taken, formally supporting granting the application of Mme. Dreyfus.

After a long deliberation the Court decided to reject the application, and condemned Mme. Dreyfus to pay a fine of 100 francs.

The fining of Mme. Dreyfus was a formal matter. The civil code dictates that if a request for the exclusion of Judges is rejected, the applicant must pay a fine, the minimum being 100 francs.

Works and Pays Well.

Many New Delinquents.

The revised report of the Martin Act Commissioners of Plainfield was filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday afternoon, and the substance of the Commission's finding is published in The Daily Press today.

Since the Sepreme court ordered the Commissioners to revise their work and strike off the names of many property owners whom it considered were unfairly numbered among the delinquents, it was thought that the total amount of delinquencies would be considerable less than in the first report recorded. But such has not been the case; on the contrary the amount of money found to be owing the city in taxes at the present time is $12,000 in excess of that which was figured up a year ago. This is caused by the Commission considering and taking in part of the 1898 taxes and sewer assessments.

The method, whereby some of the '97 and '98 taxes and sewer assessments are included in the report of the Martin Act Commissioners while others are not, is not generally understood by the public. Any property on which back taxes for any year previous to 1897 are still due, has passed under the supervision of the Commissioners and the taxes for '97 and '98 on that same property, when not paid, have been included in the report. All the unpaid taxes for '97 and '98 are kept on the "unchanged list" in the City Collector's office. Including those unpaid taxes not mentioned in the report, the total amount of taxes said to be still owing the city reaches $125,000 or more.

It is very doubtful if the taxpayers, who were delinquent within the last twelve months, had any idea that their unpaid taxes would come under the provisions of the Martin Act for collection. Therefore many surprises will be caused when the complete list of delinquents becomes known. The report is a very voluminous one and its size precluded anything more than a brief review of its most important parts in The Daily Press. But notwithstanding interesting facts and figures will be found in the article printed in today's Press.

Right Kind of Civil Service.

Hudson county is not especially noted for its loyalty to civil service ideas, but notwithstanding there has occurred in that bailiwick within a day or two an incident that ought to appeal to no less a politician than the Hon. Robert Davis, if for nothing more than the fun that may be in it for his humble followers. The facts are plainly these:

Peter Denning, who has been the official poundmaster in Union Hill for fifteen years, has announced that he is a candidate for reelection. His rival is Fritz Meyer. Meyer ran for the office a year ago, but Denning defeated him by a large majority. Now he has challenged Denning to a dog catching contest for the purpose of demonstrating to the voters of the town which candidate is best fitted for the place. He proposes to turn a dozen or more dogs loose in a vacant lot. Then he wants his rival to contest with him in capturing them, each man to be provided with enough rope to secure the dogs when they have been caught. The contestant who captures the least number of dogs to withdraw from the race. Denning declares that he holds a monopoly on the poundmastership and will not accept the challenge.

We hope that the Hon. Bob Davis will look at this matter in the right light and exclaim:

"Go ahead, boys! And may the best man win!"

We shall await results with considerable interest.

The Bound Brook State Centre, which represents an agricultural constituency in Somerset county, is very wroth at the defeat of the Five Per Cent. Interest Bill in the Senate. The State Centre says: "There was no politics in this bill. It was designed in an earnest effort to aid such men as may need to borrow a little money to improve a farm or business until it shall become more productive, when the loan and moderate interest can easily be repaid and the improvement remain for further benefit. Some of the Senators who opposed the bill have reputations far from respectable. Pitney, for instance, is a self-convicted liar and could not be believed under oath. The records of some others are so bad that we hate to print them, but shall probably present them later."

Here is an advertisement that recently appeared in a Washington paper: "The United States Government will soon require in Washington the services of from 2,000 to 3,000 clerks on the Twelfth Decennial Census; salaries large for the kind of work; at least two or three times those paid by private establishments; vacations, holiday and sick leave in abundance; requirements slight; examination farcial; let no one on account of age, infirmity or neglected early education hesitate to apply. Address your Senators and Representatives at once."

The American Beet Sugar Company was organized in Trenton yesterday with a capital of $20,000 000. It seems rather ridiculous in the face of this mightly array of money to promote such an industry that the New Jersey Legislature should have appropriated $50,000 last year for the encouragement of beet sugar growth. But Governor Voorhees had good enough sense to veto such a measure.

Some enthusiastic friend of Former Mayor Wilson, of the borough, nails the Colonel's standard to the Democratic foremast in Somerset county and urges his nomination for the office of State Senator in Somerset county next fall. The Colonel's friends seem bound to keep his name before the political world.

Now that the Legislature has relieved Governor Voorhees of such onerous duties as filing the Thompson Double Bar Bill without his signature, we hope that he will find time to study the trust laws during the next nine months before another Legislature meets.

Perhaps Roger Franklin Murphy has killed himself politically because of his defiance of overpowering corporate interests in the Legislature. Well, if such proves to be the case, it is a political demise that it is no discredit to the Plainfield statesman.

John Sherman is enjoying a phase of life usually deprived most men on this mundane sphere. Ho not only knows what the people think of him when he is no danger of death, but as well what they say of him after he is supposed to have "shook off this mortal coil."

Are there any hotels in Elizabeth that would burn like the Windsor?—Elizabeth Journal.

Why should the Journal indulge in such hypothetical questions? You cannot have a hotel fire unless you have hotels.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Senator Charles A. Reed, of Somerset county, president of the New Jersey Senate, is a prospective appointee to the Court of Chancery as a Vice Chancellor by Governor Voorhees in the event of his decision not to stand for a renomination for the Senate next fall. There is also a possibility of his being named as Judge of Somerset county to succeed Judge Bartine, of Somerville, whose term expires this year. It is understood, however, that Mr Reed is not anxious to accept the latter appointment as it would destroy his practice in the Somerset county courts.—New York World.

"The Musketeers" with James O'Neill at the Broadway Theatre have treated New York to a genuine theatrical sensation. When the reports came as they did with ever increasing enthusiasm of the elaborate production by Beerbohm Tree of Sydney Grundy's play, we Americans were a bit incredulous. But now that "The Musketeers" have come and presented themselves to us in all their swashbuckling glory, there is no longer room for doubt as to their enormous popularity, nor a single question about their deserving it. Such gorgeous pictures as are presented in this modern version by Grundy, of Dumas famous Three Guardsmen have never been seen before on the New York stage. While the acting of this perennially picturesque and ever romantic subject is done at the Broadway with a dash and fervor wholly unusual and altogether delightful.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

DOES COFFEE AGREE WITH YOU?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grain. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." It nourishes and feeds the system. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening substance of pure grains. NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 25—Mrs. Charles Dodwell entertained her friends Thursday afternoon at a pink tea, which was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season. Everything was in pink, flowers, dishes and the settings of the table. Mrs. Dodwell received the guests, and also entertained them as a genuine Indian Queen, telling their fortunes. Luncheon was served in pink china, and part of the time was spent in listening to a programme of instrumental and vocal music and in dancing. As each guest departed she was given a pink souvenir to carry away with her. Several guests from Plainfield were present.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church held a dollar sociable in the Sunday school room Thursday night. The sociable was held so that each one could tell how he or she earned the dollar, and as would be supposed some queer experiences were related. One lady sewed up her groceryman's coat, and was paid for it. Another sold eggs, and so it went from one to the other, each one having some way of earning money to devote to benevolent work. In all $25 10 was realized, and some more from the sale of ice cream and cake.

The trenches for the water pipes that have been dug in that part of the borough lying south of the railroad, are now filled with water, and it is impossible to go on with the work until the water either soaks away or is pumped out.

Reporter Douglass, of the Call, went to Staten Island yesterday to visit relatives. Mr. Douglass has rented a house in the borough, and expects soon to bring Mrs. Douglass here to live.

Mrs. C. M. Bowyer spent yesterday visiting relatives in Brooklyn. Mrs. Bowyer expects soon to go to Philadelphia to spent some time with friends.

The Young Ladies' Crokinole Club met yesterday afternoon at the home of the Misses Marlow, and passed the hours pleasantly playing games, etc.

Slight repairs have been made to the wooden platform about the station and the loose boards have been taken up and replaced by new ones.

Miss Talmer, of Greenbrook, has returned from Philadelphia where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Read.

Mrs. Elias Milliken, of West Front street, spent yesterday visiting in Somerville.

B. W. Hand and H. W. Fraleigh, of Plainfield, were in town on business yesterday.

Mrs. George Vail, of Greenbrook, visited friends in Plainfield yesterday.

John Runyon and William H. Terry are spending the day in Plainfield.

One of Sandford Staples' children is reported ill with scarlet fever.

Wm. H. Carman is entertaining his two nieces from out-of-town.

Mrs. Joseph Johnson spent yesterday in New York.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 25—The officers of the Baptist Sunday-school are arranging for a stereopticon entertainment to be held in the church April 5th. Mr. Hall, the superintendent of the school, will have charge of the views, which are scenes from the far west and were taken by him during his vacation last summer.

Some comment has been made upon the absence of the ladies at the school meeting Tuesday evening. It has been customary for several years for them to attend, but the law relating to their voting for trustees only has been so discouraging that they have concluded they could use their influence in this direction at home, and in this they have no doubt succeeded.

The Committees of Fanwood and Scotch Plains are circulating a petition among their friends asking the Central Railroad to allow the 5:15 p. m train from New York to stop at Fanwood. This would make it very convenient for a number.

The Christian Endeavor Juniors met in the Baptist church parlors yesterday afternoon. During Miss Hayes' trip to the Holy Land Miss Addie Johnston will have charge of the little Juniors.

On account of the union service of the Sunday-schools of the village, to be held in the Baptist church tomorrow afternoon, there will be no morn session of the Baptist school as has been customary.

Rev. Mr. Schott led a very interesting prayer meeting in the Baptist church last evening. Mr. Schott is working hard to revive an interest in the weekly prayer meetings once more.

Mr. and Mrs. George Schick and family move next week from Peter Frazee's cottage on Bartle avenue to Dr. J. Ackerman Coles' cottage on Union avenue.

Edward L. Hand and District Deputy Charles Frentz were in Plainfield Thursday evening on business connected with the Knights of Pythias.

Ernest Marsh and Harry Flannery will attend the New Jersey Naval Reserve drill at Jersey City Tuesday evening.

Another cock fight was held Wednesday evening at a resort near Westfield. Several from the village attended.

Rev. Charles Lewis, of Plainfield, will occupy the pulpit in the Methodist church tomorrow morning.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., met and initiated one new member last evening.

WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 25—Paul Q Oliver, the township attorney, wishes the statement that appeared in the Elizabeth Journal, to the effect that heretofore the office of township attorney had been and unsalaried one, contradicted as it has for the past ten years had a salary attached. For the past two years it has been as now, $100, but before that time it was only $50. Mr. Oliver held the office last year and saved the township a great deal of expense in different ways.

The fire which destroyed the home of Henry Piker on Dudley avenue on Tuesday evening, is supposed to have started in the cellar. Mr. Piker went from the store to the house to dress before meeting his wife, and while at the house attended to the furnace and put the ashes in a wooden barrel, which caught fire. People should be more careful in taking up their ashes and putting them in wooden boxes or barrels.

The people of Westfield are looking forward with a great deal of interest to the public hearing which the Common Council of Rahway will give to the application of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company for the Rahway end of the cross town trolley road Friday evening next. If the company succeeds in getting a franchise from Rahway they will commence to build at once.

The Westfield Club will give a progressive euchre at the clubhouse Monday evening. Following the card playing there will be dancing, for which music will be furnished by Prof. Westervelt, of Newark. The Social Club will also give a reception Monday evening.

John Morrow will leave for Mexico some time during the coming month. Mr. Morrow, who is a mine expert, will penetrate into the heart of that country for the purpose of locating several abanded mines.

The Westfield public schools will close Thursday of next week for an Easter vacation of ten days. This is new for Westfield, no vacation at this time of the year having been given before.

—There seems to be excellent prospects that the W. C. T. U. will decide to remain at their present location on East Front street.

—Next week will be doubly attractive at our store. It being Easter week, of course we will have souvenirs as usual and a very pretty one at that. Look up our ad. in another column and see what else awaits you. Grand Union Tea Company, 138 West Front street.

KATE PARSONS LATHROP TELLS HOW EUROPE BEHAVED TOWARD US.

How Some American Women Found Friends In Italy, Were Persecuted In France, Lionized In Austria and Snubbed In Germany.

[Copyright, 1899, by American Press Association.]

NOT until the Maine was blown up was there much agitation in this country over the question of war, whereas abroad, where they are always looking forward to strife and are alert to the least sign of trouble, in February, 1897, two years ago, a great commotion swept over Europe as to whether there was to be or not to be fighting between us and Spain.

At the time President McKinley was inaugurated the interest ran highest. Just then we Americans were in quiet old Siena, Italy, and were astounded at the furore that convulsed the country, for home papers did not prepare us for any such intense excitement as we saw around us.

For many reasons the sympathies of the Italians inclined to us, but their decisions struggled in the balance for a long time before they finally took our side.

In all of the Italian towns the cafes di vino, the cafes chansons, all the rendezvous, were simply alive with buzzing humanities, who declared war, fought war and decided the war ten thousand times a day with bobbing heads and gesticulating arms. Men vowed that their neighbors, the Spaniards, were stupid pigs and sly dogs, whom they would like to stick personally; but, then, it was an entirely different thing when somebody else was going to have this pleasure.

Now, this was the uneducated mass, whose oil and olives and straw goods were at stake in the issue. All nations know what the men in the cabinets thought at the time, but few are aware, except those who were on the spot, of the general feelings of the bulk of the people.

But "pace" was not the terminus of the struggle, as all of us know, whereupon the Italian nation again writhed in throes of anxiety as to which side it should take. Had not the holy father blessed the Spanish arms, and yet were not the American merchants the best customers in the market?

Now every one knows what a hard fight ensues when religious sentiment and pocketbook are pitted against each other. But no nation can appreciate the full bitterness of what took place in Italy during our fighting with Spain except those who witnessed the clamorous bread strike in Lombardy, Tuscany and Naples by men, women and children, who used clubs one minute to gain their point and kissed crucifixes the next in repentance for having opposed both church and state.

Now matters in France were not in this state at all. We crossed from Italy into that country, when feeling against America was rampant and redhot. 'Twas just after the blowing up of the Maine. 'Twas high treason to suggest this fearful outrage was anything more than an accident. America had no sense of the nice decencies, when for a moment she could suspect foul play as having taken part in the fall of her man-of-war!

After the bugle note of battle rung out defiantly, venomous hatred boiled in the blood of France. Our dress, our manner, our bearing, marked us American women. Even the dear, sweet, pretty girl whom we picked out as parleying without a particle of English accent was snubbed right and left. Cochers never saw us when we wanted cabs, clerks never had time to wait on us, hotel proprietors, if they happened to have a room, charged double for everything.

And the reason for this? Money, money, again money. Each cabman and clerk and countryman had his saved up earnings at stake. Millions of dollars belonging to the French people had been lent to Spain for railroads and street car lines and what not.

Some of our countrymen and countrywomen left for England and Austria in self defense, but we remained in this hornet's nest and did queer things. Jingoes would have called us traitors and renegades, but in our patriotic hearts we knew that we were listening to the calls of pity, only to which womanhood is never deaf.

This is what happened: The students of Barcelona college, Spain, called upon President Faure and asked his permission to play and sing in Paris for the benefit of the widows and orphans of Spanish soldiers. This request was granted, and even the executive palace was opened to introduce this glee club to the fashionable public, from whom most could be expected in the way of donations. One palace after another entertained these musicians and contributed generously in francs and sympathy.

At last our turn came. The dear little politic madame with whom we were staying had to have her finger in the pie too.

"It would not do, mes cheres," she suavely said to her 25 American guests, "for me not to do something. Mes amis would think that I was not solicitous for these pauvres petits. Then you, too (with a pretty, pouting, pleading pucker of her mouth), would help me just a little, would you not?"

None of us would have willingly hurt madame's feelings. Besides, we were not loath to study a real Spaniard at near range. Then, too, it was interesting to have 30 students talk, sing and play while we took our afternoon cup of tea. It is unnecessary to say that we cautiously kept the topic of conversation on safe ground. Besides, we were not brutal enough to wound the sunken eyed, gaunt, pale faced lads, most of whom already had lost brothers and fathers in the war. Afterward we heard that later nearly all of even these poor young fellows lost their lives in Cuba. Does any one blame us for generously contributing to their exhortations?

They left behind them a lot of American girls sewing on plain muslin for the sisters and mothers of the men who were trying to kill our own loved ones. But I suppose it was the "trying" and failing to kill that made us generous to the under dog in the fight.

A short time after this above mentioned episode our navies won their astounding victories, and we openly showed our pride and delight. This was more than madame could stand. She didn't exactly ask us to leave her house, but she suddenly concluded to close her pension and go away to Boulogne-sur-Mer for a few weeks' rest on account of the hot weather. Well, we just had to pack up and move on. Now I am glad we had to do so, as it gave us an excellent opportunity to judge personally of the sentiments toward us of the different nations.

We sought refuge in Budapest, where we were received with open arms as heroes. All that was necessary was that we were a part of the great nation that stood before the whole world miraculously successful.

I believe, on this account, that our words and our manners were studied as object lessons to be copied and our opinions valued and respected. As mothers and sisters of our navy and army demigods we took to the place given us in the spheres.

This was acceptable to our self respect and vanity after the treatment we had received in France and proved a consolation when we reached Germany, where again we were put on the rack of criticism and cross questioning. In the first place, we were women, and that was against us, as Germans consider all women a necessary evil. Besides, we knew nothing of Krupp guns, of right flank movements, of hollow square movements, of cavalry charges, of artillery charges. In the beer gardens the constant discussion was our army tactics, and they seemed to find no pleasure in any other topic.

In this great military nation the press was rife with criticism of what we were doing in Cuba, and minutely detailed accounts were published in all the small town journals. I was told that at first the empire was opposed to our war, condemping us as meddlers and crowing cocks that were unprepared to fulfill our threats.

But as months went by and it grew upon them that our resources were immense, their philosophical minds took to weighing and judging us by the tremendous results that we were accomplishing.

The public, as a whole, satisfied itself by calling us bad names and in feeling highly superior to us as a nation, because our volunteers had never been taught the shritt step.

All of this time that we were in Germany, France, Austria and Italy we received letters from one of our party who was traveling through England. In the beginning she wrote dolefully. The whole of the matter was this, that all those that were near and dear to us were to be swallowed up by the sea. She kept this up for some time, quoting her authorities for doing so, when Dewey's, and later Sampson's, victories, shook and aroused the civilized globe.

What a change came upon the spirit of her dreams! She was half mad with delight, and so was England. One of the world's greatest triumphs had been granted to the English speaking race! We were chips of the old block, we were courageous, we were capable, we were great! KATE PARSONS LATHROP.

FOR YOU.

[illegible] little girl could [illegible]
[illegible] just like you,
[illegible] lips as rosy,
[illegible] as fair,
Such eyes of [illegible]lue, and [illegible]ning hair,
What do you think
I'd do?

I'd w[illegible] and sweet a smile,
I'd h[illegible] all the while,
I'd n[illegible]l with my hand,
So qu[illegible] and ge[illegible]tle to command,
You soon would see
That every one would turn to say:
"I'm good to meet that child to-day."
Yes, yes, my dear, that's what I'd do
If I were you.

Or, if I chanced to be a boy,
Like some I know;
With crisp curls sparkling in the sun,
And eyes all beaming bright with fun—
Ah, if I could be so,
I'd strive and strive with all my might
To be as true, so brave, polite,
That to me each one might behold
A hero as in days of old.
'Twould be a joy
To hear one, looking at me, say:
"My cheer and comfort all the day."
Yes, if I were a boy I know
I would be so.
But now, perhaps, you'd ask of me:
"When it was you
Who had the young and merry face,
With smiles and roses all in place,
Tell us, what did you do?"
Ah, dearies! If I ever fell
Far short of doing wisely, well—
It was, you see,
Because none ever took the time
To tell me in such lovely rhyme
What I should now rejoice to do
If I were you.

The Body as a Mechanical Wonder.

The greatest of machines is the human body. That is the opinion of an engineer who looks at the subject from the technical standpoint.

Who would think that in his eye there is a block and pulley, or "tackle," as the sailors call it, as complete and efficient as that with which a ship hoists her mainsail? There it is, however; and whenever you look at the tip of your nose the muscle that moves your eyeball works in it. There are several of these pulleys in the body.

Another clever dodge of Nature is shown in the bones of the face. Accomplished engineer that she is, she always uses the smallest quantity of material sufficient for strength. In making the bones of the face she wanted a large surface to which to attach the muscles; but, as she didn't wish to encumber us with heads as heavy as an elephant's, she burrowed hundreds of little holes in the bones, called air cells, and thus secured strength, large surface and lightness.

When you get a severe cold you are apprised of the presence of another cunning device—the Eustachian tube. This tube is two inches long, and passes from the inside of the ear to the back of the mouth. It was put there to keep the air at the same pressure inside the drum as outside. Otherwise there would be no vibration of the drum, and you would be almost stone deaf. When you get a bad cold this tube sometimes becomes inflamed and blocked, and you are made quite deaf.

Adam's apple, if it was once that fruit that brought into the world all our woe, is now a useful organ. It serves as a sort of storage cistern of the blood for the supply of the brain. When the heart sends up too much blood Adam's apple intercepts it, or part of it, and when the direct supply from the heart temporarily runs short, Adam's apple gives up its store.

One of the most valuable of all the inventions made for our comfort and safety is the perspirative gland. It acts like the safety valve of a boiler, letting off heat when we are becoming dangerously warm. If our temperature rose seven or eight degrees, we would not have twenty-four hours to live. The value of the sweat gland is therefore obvious.—New York Journal.

Better Than a Trolley Fender.

To northeastern Philadelphia belongs the honor of having a life-saving dog; Jock is an immense Newfoundland. A double trolley track traverses the street on which he lives. Jock was present once when a little one was taken from under the cruel wheels and manifested the liveliest interest in the occurrence. Ever since that day whenever he has been able to stand sentinel Jock takes good care that no children shall play in the street if a trolley car is in sight. At the sound of the gong the dog plunges into the street and drives the children to the safety of the pavement, and has even been known on several occasions to pick up a smaller child with his strong jaws and quietly deposit it out of harm's way. The animal is a splendid specimen, and it is not to be wondered at that he is the most popular resident of the street.—New York World.

Cause for Rejoicing.

Returned Gold Seeker—We had reached the summit of Chilkoot Pass when we were attacked by half-starved wolves. We could hear their howls! Even in the semi-darkness of the Arctic night we could see their black muzzles—

She (excitedly)—Oh, I'm so glad they had muzzles on!

Very Much One.

Meadowbrook—I hear Morris contracted a mesalliance?

Dyker—Yes, poor chap! He married a girl who thinks golf stupid.

CHAPTER IX.

A week later the surgeon at Camp Cooke found himself minus one of the ambulances after all. In response to a penciled note from Blake it had been hurried from what there was of the shack aggregation at that point to what was left of Sancho's—Major Starke and the doctor with it. They found much of the corral in ruins and one end of the ranch badly scorched. "The wife of my brother," with Pancha, and that ceremonious copy of the Castilian himself had disappeared, but Sancho was still there, a much wronged man, and Pedro and Jose and Concho and a decrepit mule or two, all under the surly surveillance of Sergeant Feeney and a half dozen troopers, whose comrades were afield chasing banditti through the deserts and mountains, while those who were detailed to remain spent long, anxious hours watching over and striving to soothe a young officer, delirious from injuries to the head and resultant fever. Loring was a sick man indeed when the surgeon reached him, but poor Blake, wearing himself down to skin and bone in fruitless chase, would gladly have been in his place.

The stage which he and his men had rushed to rescue was actually out there to the east, as Pancha had declared, "held up" among some little sand dunes, but it bore neither passengers nor treasure, and why on earth the robbers should have detained him for nearly 20 miles east of Gila Bend, held him in the hot sun from 9 in the morning until late in the afternoon, then sent him on again, only to be once more "rounded to" with a furious chorus of yells and volleyings of pistols when within only two miles of Sancho's, that bewildered Jehu could not imagine. The marvel of it was that though the old sage was "riddled like a sieve," as he said, "and bullets flew round me like a swarm of buzzin bees, not one of 'em more'n just nipped me or raised a blister in the skin." Indeed even those abrasions were indistinguishable, though Jake solemnly believed in their existence. Then another queer thing! Long before the lieutenant and "his fellers" reached the imperiled vehicle all but two or three of the dozen assailants went scurrying off in the darkness, and when the cavalry came charging furiously through the gloom there was no one to oppose them. Jehu Jake couldn't even tell which way the bandits had gone—every way, he reckoned—and after careering blindly about for half an hour or so Blake's most energetic men came drifting back and said it was useless to attempt pursuit until dawn, even though that would give the renegades six hours' start. Slowly and disgustedly Blake ordered his men to form ranks and march back to camp, when suddenly an idea struck him—Loring, Loring, with his precious saddlebags, had been left alone—and calling for a set of fours to follow him Blake clapped his spurless heels to his indignant horse's flanks and galloped for home, only to find Sancho and Pete lamenting over the prostrate, senseless and bleeding form of the engineer, whose arm was still thrown protectingly over the ravished saddlebags.

The pocket containing that precious envelope was slashed open. The envelope and watch were gone. The record of the court in the other bag was undisturbed.

And then as he bathed his comrade's head and stanched the blood and strove to call him back to consciousness Blake saw it all or thought he did and gnashed his teeth in impotent wrath. He was tricked, betrayed—yes, possibly ruined—all by a gang of miserable "greasers," through the medium of a pretty Mexican girl and his own wretched imbecility. There was no name Blake didn't call himself. There was nothing disreputable he did not think of Sancho. But what could he prove? Sancho was a heavy loser. Sancho's best mules and all his fine horses, including the famous roan, had been spirited away. The gang had made a wreck of the bar and a puddle of his famous liquor.

Manuel, his brother, with his beloved wife and child, had fled in terror, said Sancho, else would they now be here, nursing the heroic officer who had striven to defend them against such a rush of wretches. Blake drove him away with imprecations, vowing that he, Sancho, was in collusion with the gang, against which unmerited slur Sancho protested in sonorous Spanish, and to prove his innocence pointed to his bespattered barroom, and as this failed to move the obdurate heart of the raging cavalryman went sorrowfully back to the dark ranch, whence there suddenly arose a sheet of flame and the cry that the villains had set fire to the corral before they left. For half an hour the straw and hay made a fierce blaze, and the troopers turned to and saved the ranch, as Sancho knew they would, and the actual damage was but slight.

Some day Sancho would present a claim against the government for 20 times the amount and get such portion of it as was not required by the local agent and lobbying aids who rushed it through congress. Against Sancho there was no proof whatever, and when Blake rode away at dawn to take up trail of the robber band he had to invoke Sancho's assistance in looking after his stricken friend. There were hours that day when Blake could almost have blown his brains out. He who prided himself on the field record he was making had been outwitted, tricked, utterly and ridiculously fooled. By Heaven, if horses could hold out, those rascals should not go unwhipped of justice! Bitter as was his cup the previous year, this was bitterer still.

Not for ten days, after a long and fruitless chase through the Dragoon mountains and almost into Mexico, did Blake return to the Bend, and by that time Loring was just gone, borne in the ambulance, to Yuma. He had regained consciousness under the doctor's care, said old Feeney, but was sorely weak and shaken, and the doctor had gone on with him.

So ended, for the time being at least, the survey of the Gila valley, for the surgeon at Fort Yuma coincided in the opinion of his brother from Cooke that Lieutenant Loring could perform no duty for weeks; that he should have care, rest and a sea voyage. The record of the court had been sent only by mail stage to San Francisco, and after a fortnight of total quiet at Yuma Loring was conveyed down the Colorado to the gulf and shipped aboard the coasting steamer for the two weeks' run around old California and up the Pacific to Yerba Buena. The very day they sailed old Turnbull came to join him on the voyage. Not a trace had been discovered of the fugitive. Captain Nevins and such suspicious characters as Blake had overhauled were long since released for lack of evidence. Sancho held the fort as imperturbably as ever. The "family of my brother" were reported gone to Hermosillo.

Those were years in which the steamer plying about once a month between the Colorado and the bay of San Francisco carried heavy burdens of freight, stores and supplies into the far territory, but took little out. Gold being the monetary standard of California at the time, it cost a captain a month's pay to take that two weeks' voyage. The government paid the way into the territory in the case of officers going under orders, and, once landed there, a man speedily found himself too poor to think of returning. Therefore was the stout mariner who commanded the Idaho more than surprised to find two army officers on his scanty passenger list. Turnbull he had met before. Loring was a stranger.

He bathed his comrade's head.

"Make yourselves comfortable, gentlemen," said he. "You practically own the ship till we get to Guaymas. There we pick up some Mexican families going to Frisco and two mighty pretty girls."

"Who are they?" asked Turnbull languidly as he sat on the upper deck, heels lifted on the taffrail, gazing out over an apparently limitless plain, half dim vista of far spreading sand, half of star dotted, flawless salt water, the smoke of his cigar curling lazily aloft as the black bull rode at anchor.

"Daughters of old Roman de la Cruz, for two that I know of, and some cousin of theirs, I believe. They came aboard on our up trip. The old man likes our tap of champagne and doesn't care what it costs. He has more ready cash than any Mexican I know. You're a married man, colonel, but how about the lieutenant here?"

Loring, still pallid and listless, smiled feebly and shook his head.

"Well, here's your chance, young man," said the bluff salt, unconscious of giving offense. "No time like a voyage for lovemaking, once the girl gets her sea legs on. You ought to capture one of 'em before we're half way to the Golden Gate. They rate 'em at $200,000 apiece. Don't know how long it takes a soldier to win a prize like that, but give a sailor such a show and she'd strike her colors before we sight St. Lucas. If you don't care for ducats and only want beauty, there's that little cousin. She can sing and play your soul away, give her half a chance and a good guitar."

"Who's she?" queried Turnbull, balancing his half smoked cigar between the fingers, as he blew a fragrant cloud to the cloudless vault above.

"Didn't get the family name—Pancha they called her, a slip of a 16-year-old, going to school perhaps," and the captain turned away to answer a question from his steward, leaving the two soldiers looking intently at each other, with new interest in their eyes.

"Blake's destroyer was a 16-year-old Pancha, wasn't she?" asked the colonel in a low tone. He had had no mercy whatever on Blake and was outspoken in condemnation of what he called his idiocy.

Loring was silent a moment; then he drew a letter from an inner pocket. It had come with Turnbull—the last news from Arizona. "Read that when you've time, colonel," said he. "Perhaps had you been in Blake's place at his age you'd have forgotten everything but the stage and the fight, as he did. I think I should."

And, as this was the longest speech Turnbull had ever heard from Loring's lips, except his arraignment of Nevins before the court, the colonel pondered over it not a little. He took the letter and read it when an hour later the Idaho was plowing her lazy way southward through a dull and leaden sea:

I'm not the first man to be fooled by a slip of a girl, Loring—wrote Blake—it isn't the first time that a woman has got the better of me, and it may not be the last. But the chagrin and misery I feel is not because I have suffered so much, but because you have, and all through my fault. I suppose you know the general has ordered me relieved and sent back to my company as no longer worthy to be called a cavalryman. All the same, one of these days I mean to get a transfer. My legs are too long for the doughboys anyhow. Meantime with all meekness I'll bear my burden. I deserve it. But you'll believe me when I say it isn't the punishment, the humiliation, this has cost me that so weighs upon me now; it is the thought of your loss and your prostration. One of these days I may find means to show you how much I feel it. Just now I have only a hint. Last year at this time my most cherished possession was my new spring style $10 Amidon. A silk hat is as out of place in Arizona as a sunshade in Sitka, yet my striker has just unpacked it and asked, with a grin on his confounded mug, "What'll I be doin wid this, sor?" I know! Sole leather hatbox and all, it goes, by buckboard, to your address at division headquarters. Our heads are about of the same caliber. The main difference is that yours seems loaded. The Alta says silk hats are now worn on sunny mornings. Sport mine for me, though it be of the vintage of a bygone year. I shall not show my face in civilization till I have lived down my shame. So now for two years at least of Yuma and the consolation to be derived from the solitary study of philosophy and Shakespeare. Yours in meekness of spirit, GERALD BLAKE.

P. S.—They say that Sancho's brother's real name is Escalante. If ever you come across one of that race, keep your eyes peeled.

Another day and the billows of the gulf were breaking under the Idaho's counter and hissing sternward in snowy foam, answering the rush of a strong southwest wind. It was late at evening when the black bull went reeling in toward the lights of Guaymas and the massive anchor, with prodigious splash, dived for the sandy bottom, but late as it was the shore boats and lighters came pulling to the gangway stairs, and merchants, clerks and customs officers nimbly scrambled up the side, and then followed a number of passengers, cigarette smoking and cackling about the swarming deck, and Turnbull and the engineer hung over the rail and watched for the promised boatload of beauty, and presently it came. Two or three small boats were rowed alongside, and there were glimpses of shrouded forms and there were sounds of joyous laughter and murmured gallantries and dark eyed, dark skinned caballeros, and the growling injunctions of presumably paterfamilias. And presently the ladderlike stairs were cleared and, one after another, woman after woman was assisted up the narrow way and came sailing into the zone of light from the polished reflectors, elder women first, then slender, sparkling eyed damsels, whose white teeth gleamed as they chatted with their escorts. Two undeniably attractive, Spanish looking girls were objects of most assiduous care. Then came a third, younger, a mere slip of a maid, with but a single cavalier, a grim, grizzled, stern looking Mexican, who glanced sharply about as he set foot on the solid deck, and then, without a word, Loring's hand was placed on the colonel's arm, and the lieutenant's eyes said, "Look!" for as the girl's face was turned for an instant toward them there stood revealed the dusky little maid of the Gila, Blake's siren—Pancha.

Keyhole in the Knob.

Who ever heard of a lock inside a door knob? I never did until I took possession of a flat the other day. No one had informed me of this peculiarity of my door lock, and before leaving home for the evening it never occurred to me to investigate. I simply pocketed my key and marched forth.

When I arrived home that night I pulled out the key and began a hunt for the keyhole. I worked away at the bronze plate beneath the knob, then above it and then on every piece of bronze ornament I could find anywhere about that door, but not a crevice could I find. I rattled the dooor; it was locked fast. I could not move the knob.

I had no match and the hall light was out. I hated to ring up my wife, and I spent the better part of an hour hunting for that keyhole before I decided to ring up the janitor, who poked his head out of the basement window and asked surlily what was wanted.

"I want the keyhole," I shouted. It's in the knob," he answered in a disgusted tone, and slammed down the window.

And there it was, as slick as you please, directly in the centre of the dooer knob. You could not miss it if you tried—that is if you knew it was there. It is the finest idea extant. Nobody could help finding the knob, it sticks right out prominently. It is just the thing for some men I know.

Bankrupt (sadly)—"I? I am afraid you have made a mistake. I am of no use to anybody. I have just failed for 20,000 pounds, with no assets."

"So I heard."

"You know it and yet you say I can be of service to you?"

"Yes, sir. I beg you will not refuse."

"But what can a miserable bankrupt like me do for anyone?"

"I want you to tell me, sir, how you got so much credit."—Tid-Bits.

WALTER LONG WON LAST INDOOR EVENT.

Closing Gymnastic Contest at Y. M. C. A.

ONLY FIVE COMPETITORS.

CONTEST INCLUDED BAR AND DUMB-BELL DRILLS.

Finish Between Long and Morraller Was Very Close—Morraller Broke in One Move With Bar-Bell and Lost His Chances Thereby—Drill Led by Physical Director C. E. Heywood—The Scores.

The series of indoor contests in the Y M. C. A. gymnasium ended Saturday evening with the open competitions with bar-bells and dumb-bells. The season has been the most active and the most successful of any since the opening of the gymnasium. The events of Saturday night were new to competition in the local association. Consequently, there were only a few members who entered. They showed, however, an evident healthy activity in standard gymnastics that promises well for the future.

The exercises with bar-bells and dumb-bells were combined in one contest instead of holding seperate events as was first planned. The contest was confined entirely to the drill and the contestants were not asked to give any original exercises.

The bar-bell drill opened the contest. There were only five entered, Walter L. Long, Eric Moraller, Herbert Brokaw, Walter Sampson and George Creverling. A number of the other members of the evening class lined up with them, however, and went through the drill for the exercise involved.

The drill was led by C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director. There were twelve moves with the bar-drill. Long and Moraller were both in good form. Moraller lost his chance for first place by a break. He lost the count in one of the moves and stopped for a moment before he could recover the swing. There were ten points possible to score in the drill.

Then followed the dumb-bell drill with ten moves, also under the direction of Mr. Heywood. The scoring was the same. Long and Moraller kept together in great shape and there was no evident superiority for either.

The judges were Robert A. Meeker and Louis I. VanAlstyne. At the conclusion of the events, they announced that Walter L. Long had won the contest with a score of 19 out of a possible 20 points. The others finished in the following order: Moraller, 18½; Brokaw, 17½, Sampson, 15½; Creverling, 15. But for Moraller's break he would have tied Long. Long was in fine form, however, and went through the moves easily and gracefully. He never lost the time or the move, his loss of the one point being due to a slight carelessness in his form.

RULES OF THE BOYS' CLUB

Those Who are on the Waiting List Will Have Limited Privileges.

The Boys' Club has been very popular with the boys lately, and often the waiting boys outnumber the members, even now when they are more than thirty.

Friday night Mr. Sangstad, the superintendent, called a meeting of the members and asked for suggestions as to restrictions to be placed on visitors. After many suggestions had been considered the following was agreed to be a fair restriction to non-members.

Friends of members who want to look through the club are always welcome.

Boys whose names are on the waiting list may come on Tuesdays and Fridays, and may use the gymnasium while the members are at work.

Boys whose names are not on the waiting list may come only on Friday, and may use the gymnasium the same as those who are on the waiting list, on that night.

This does not apply to adults. They are always welcome.

SOCIETY WAS AWHEEL.

INDOOR CYCLING AT THE CRESCENT RINK.

The Popular Exercise Enjoyed With Accessories Not to be Seen in the Usual Routine of Life—Tea Was Served.

Society awheel was indeed a pretty sight at the Crescent Rink Saturday evening. This novel idea of preparing for a riding season, while the roads are in a condition that prevents outdoor wheeling, originated with Miss VanBoskerck and Miss Mary Whiton and their many friends, who are enthusiastic cyclists, unanimously agreed that it would be just the thing and then the affair could take on a few social features that would give added pleasure. To carry out the plans successfully F. L. C. Martin, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, heartily agreed to assist the fair ones in their efforts. There were about sixty people present and the majority of them took advantage of the opportunity to spend an evening on the wheel.

To make the event still more pleasurable Nathan Guttman's band was present and discoursed appropriate music which gave the riders the proper "swing" as they circled the smooth surface.

Miss VanBoskerck and Harry D. West set the pace and they planned many very pretty figures, which, to an eye witness, in the gallery, presented an attractive scene.

Mr. Martin furnished, as a happy diversion, a game of polo for the amusement of the spectators. P. J. Sheehan and E. P. Brady, of the New York and Cleveland Polo team, played two fifteen-minute halfs, and Mr. Brady won by a score of 7 to 5. The play was very exciting, and being new was thoroughly enjoyed.

During the evening dainty refreshments were served on the platform and a social chat was indulged in by all. Those who presided were Mrs. Samuel Hutington, Mrs J. M. Whiton and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart. Among those present include the Misses Reinhart, Holly, Waring, Andrews, Schoonmaker, VanBoskerck, Whiton, Rider, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Streuli, Newton Goddard, L. H. VanBuren, John Dumont, Morris Dumont, Joseph Myers, Edward J. A meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association was held at the North Plainfield school building Saturday.

Miss Shattuck, of Plainfield, gave a thoughtful talk on "The Use and Abuse of Methods," in which she urged the importance of the teacher's individuality in her work.

The afternoon session opened with an interesting paper on "Written Composition," by Mr. Crum, of North Branch. ENTERTAINMENT PROVIDED.

EMPLOYES OF POTTER'S AND POND'S WERE PRESENT.

First Entertained With Music and Speeches—Phonograph Followed—Free Work in Gymnasium Was Shown—The Social Hour Closed With Refreshments and Sociability—Reception Committee.

Several score of employes of the Pond Tool Works and the Potter Press Works had a glimpse of the workings of the local Young Men's Christian Association Saturday evening and were incidentally entertained in divers manners. It was termed "A Social Hour" for the men from Pond's and Potter's.

Owing to the unpropitiousness of the evening the attendance was not as large as it might otherwise have been It was, however, a very enjoyable occasion. The men were received by a delegation of the social committee, of which A. B. Meredith was acting chairman. He was assisted by R. A. Meeker, John M. Lewis, F. C. Harder, O. W. Dunham, J. M MacNaughton, Clarence Brouard and others.

The guests first assembled in the main hall. Here they were first entained by Prof. Charles Wold, of Brooklyn, on his musical glasses. Then Stephen Cahoone, president of the association, addressed a few words of welcome. He was followed by D. E. Titsworth, superintendent at the Potter Press Works, who made a short and interesting address. He dwelt on the many opportunities open to men at the present day, and pointed out the advantages that the Y. M. C A gave to those who were anxious to advance themselves. Another solo on the musical glasses by Prof. Wold closed the short entertainment.

The guests were then invited to the small hall on the second floor, where Charles Mowen gave a number of selections on his phonograph. A trip to the gymnasium followed. There Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood and some of the members of the evening class entertained with a short exhibition of free work.

The "Social Hour" closed with the serving of refreshments in the small hall. The parlor was opened to the guests who found it a cheery place with its open fireplace on which a log fire burned brightly. The guests expressed their pleasure and were invited to come again.

NEEDED A MEGAPHONE

JUDGE HAD HARD WORK MAKING DEAF PRISONER HEAR.

Theodore Martino Borrowed Coal From Coal Yard at Midnight and Was Locked up Till He Explained to the City Cadi.

If there are many like Theodore Martino to be arraigned before City Judge William N. Runyon, the city would do well to purchase a megaphone for the use of the local magistrate. Martino is a little lad, but is deaf as a post. The introductory remarks flew by him unheeded. Then the Judge raised his voice but the youth was oblivious to it all. At last the Judge had to call the lad inside the rail and up to his desk where he shouted in the boy's ear. Then Martino heard and understood.

While Patrolman Vanderweg was patrolling his beat on Park avenue, last night at midnight, he heard someone shovelling coal in Boice, Runyon & Company's coal yard. He investigated and found Martino there with a coal scuttle and a scoop. He locked him up.

This morning the circumstances of of Martino's visit were satisfactorily explained. He was spending the night in Claassen's barber shop, where he is employed. It grew cold and he borrowed enough coal to last through the night. He did it once before, paying for it in the morning when the men came.

The Judge delivered a lecture and shouted to the lad that he mustn't do it again. The lad smiled, nodded, and departed with the remark:

"Good bye," said the Judge and the Court smiled.

CAPTAIN KAY RESIGNS.

Commandant of Company D, Third Regiment, Yields to Demand for Retirement.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 27—There was no surprise in National Guard circles in New Brunswick when it was announced that the long delayed resignation of Captain Kay, from the Third regiment, had been forwarded to Lieutenant-Colonel Holmes at Elizabeth, where the headquarters of the regiment are located.

Captain Kay served as captain of Company D, Third regiment, for about fifteen years. Prior to the departure of the regiment to Sea Girt for enlistment in the volunteer army he was popular with his men. While at camp he gained their enmity, because, they allege, of his severity in the treatment of them. There was a general demand that he should resign upon the return of the company to New Brunswick. The feeling was so bitter that Kay did not attend the reception which the citizens gave to the soldiers in honor of their return.

SELLING WHISKEY WITHOUT A LICENSE.

John Kavanagh Arrested and Arraigned in City Court.

LONG BEEN SUSPECTED.

PUT UNDER $200 BONDS FOR APPEARANCE AT EXAMINATION.

Two Specific Charges Against Him—Accused of Selling Two Glasses of Whiskey to Edward P. Hoppock on Two Different Dates—Councilman Hetfield Will Defend the Offender.

The campaign of the Plainfield police against the alleged illegal liquor sellers has opened for the year. This morning John Kavanagh was arrested at his restaurant on the corner of Grant avenue and South Second street by Roundsman Fredericksen on a warrant and arraigned before City Judge Runyon.

Kavanagh has been in the City Court before. He has long been suspected by the police, but evidence has been very hard to find. The police now claim that they have sufficient evidence to convict him. There are two specific charges against him. He is accused of selling Edward P. Hoppock two glasses of whiskey on Friday, March 10th, and two more on the Tuesday following. As Kavanagh's place is not licensed, he has no right to sell.

Kavanagh was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning shortly after 9 o'clock. It was the most important case that has come before the present City Judge during his term of office. Kavanagh entered a plea of not guilty. Councilman Walter L. Hetfield appeared for him. Kavanagh was held under $200 bonds for his appearance at trial. George O. Stevens acted as bondsman. The trial was set down for Thursday but will probably be adjourned at that time to a date mutually agreed upon by the lawyers. The city will be represented in the case by the Corporation Counsel.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THEY RIDICULE IT

Many People Ridicule the Idea of an Absolute Cure for Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Ridicule, However, is Not Argument, and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure, that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not carthartic, neither do they act powerfully on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is about it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address F. A. Staurt Co., Marshall, Mich., for little book on stomach diseases, sent free.

MADE ROOSEVELT SICK

Canned Roast Beef Was Too Rank for the Rough Rider.

COULD HAVE EATEN HIS HAT

The Governor of New York Testifies Before the Board of Inquiry as to the Badness of Roast Beef and the Goodness of Refrigerated Beef—Heard Nothing of Chemicals Until He Came Home.

New York, March 27.—The scene of the army beef investigation shifted from Chicago to New York Saturday. Gov. Roosevelt bustled in energetically at 5 minutes after 11 o'clock, and was sworn immediately by Lieut.-Col. Davis, who is the Recorder.

"Please state your name and residence," began the Recorder, perfunctorily.

"Theodore Roosevelt, Executive Mansion, Albany."

Having established the Governor's connection with the Rough Riders and the fact that he commanded as Lieutenant-Colonel two battalions of the regiment en route from San Antonio to Tampa, the Recorder asked him to state what was the meat component of the travel ration.

"Corned beef only, and 'twas good," replied the Governor.

"What was it on the voyage from Tampa to Cuba?"

"The so-called canned roast beef."

"What complaints, if any, did you hear about it?" he was asked.

"The first I knew of any trouble with the canned roast beef," said the Governor, leaning forward and addressing himself with great directness to the Recorder, "was while we were on the transport and still lying in Tampa Bay. I saw one man—I think it was Ash of Kentucky, a big, red-headed fellow—throwing away his portion of the canned roast beef. I asked him what he meant by that and he told me he couldn't eat it; said it was not good. Then I said to him: 'If you're a baby you'd better not go to war.' The man then started to eat the beef and vomited. 'Are you seasick?' I asked him. 'No,' he said, 'but I can't eat that stuff.'

"In consequence of this, I made inquiries and found that there was a general complaint among the men that the canned roast beef was not good. At that time I didn't know whether my men were just grumbling or whether some of the cans were bad or what the trouble was, so I made more inquiries. I was told that this was the regular ration, and that only the volunteers, and not the regulars, were grumbling about it. I told my men that they were getting what the regulars were getting, and I paid no more heed to the matter. I ate a mouthful myself, but, while I did not think it was good, it had no putrid smell and there was nothing about it to make me take positive action. I believe I did speak to Col. Wood, but the transports were about to start and nothing else was done."

"What meat was furnished you in Cuba during the siege operations?"

"Mostly pork, but sometimes canned roast beef. I tried to get pork as often as possible. I found that the regulars objected to canned roast beef quite as much as my men did. I tried to eat some of it myself, but I couldn't do it."

"Describe its appearance?"

"The cans when opened showed on top what looked like a layer of slime, which was very disagreeable. Inside the beef was stringy and coarse like a bundle of fibres. If it was stewed with potatoes and onions you could eat it, but I believe I could have eaten my hat at that time I used to get so hungry. We tried stewing it with mangoes. My observation showed me that some of the men could eat a little of it when it was cooked up, others could eat it even cold and others couldn't eat it at all. In the great majority of cases, however, those who ate it would become sick and suffer from indigestion. Hardly any of them would touch it, even if hungry, after the first two or three days. At that time I had never heard any one question the fact that the canned roast beef was a bad ration. I was surprised to find when I got back that it was a subject of controversy. From generals to privates I never heard any one express any opinion other than that it was a bad ration. Some said it was bad for the men, others said it was utterly unhealthy, and there were all grades of opinion in between, but there was no one who said it was good."

"When did you begin receiving the refrigerated beef?" asked the Recorder.

"About July 22. It usd to reach camp about noon, somtimes not until the afternoon. As a rule its condition was good. The rind was sometimes a little black or bad, but it seemed awful good."

"About what proportion was thrown away?"

"I doubt if in more than one or two issues the proportion thrown away was such as to be serious. Taken as a whole, it was pretty satisfactory."

"Had you reason to suspect that it had been treated with chemicals?"

"I never thought about that matter at all until we came home. We ate the beef and enjoyed it. Undoubtedly it did give most of the men diarrhoea, but I noticed on hunting trips, where men have been without meat for a time and we killed a bull elk, and ate the meat, we all had diarrhoea. I attributed the soldier's diarrhoea to that cause alone. Afterward I heard that the men believed that there was something the matter with the beef, that it had been 'physicked,' as they expressed it."

"What was the condition of your command physically?"

"Like every other regiment, it was pretty sick. Toward the end of our stay in Cuba I did not regard 20 per cent. of the men as fit for duty."

"What was your meat ration on your voyage home?"

"Canned roast beef."

"And what was its condition?"

"Utterly and hopelessly bad. I should say roughly that not one-fifth of it was used. When I found that the men could not eat it, I bought everything I could from the ship's stores, and the sick were supplied in so far as possible from the officers' mess, which had been bought at Santiago."

In answer to another question from the Recorder about the report of the use of chemicals in the refrigerated beef, the Governor said:

"Before our transport left Tampa a couple of quarters of beef which were said to have been specially treated for preservation in the tropics were put on board. The meat lasted one day. It then became so offensive that I reported it. The next day a court of inquiry condemned it, and it was thrown overboard. I have been informed since that this ration was only an experiment."

The Recorder having finished with the Governor, Major Lee took up his examination. He asked the witness if he had a copy of the reports concerning which he had testified. The Governor said that he had not, and explained that the Government had omitted to publish them through an oversight. Major Lee asked that they both be submitted to the court as evidence, and his request was granted. Major Lee then asked the Governor for his opinion of canned roast beef as an army ration. This was the Governor's reply:

"I regard it as utterly unfit and utterly unwholesome ration for troops. I want to make that statement without qualification. I have seen that cans have been tested here and found to be wholesome. I want to say that the experience I had in th Santiago camp proved unpalatable and at worst unwholesome and unfit to eat. It was sufficiently unwholesome to tend to make men sick at a time when well men were needed."

This closed Gov. Roosevelt's testimony and the court adjourned to Governors Island. While the officers were shaking hands all round with him in the most cordial way, Major Lee stepped up to him, shaking his hand, thanked him for his testimony.

"It is the best we've had," he said.

CANNED ROAST BEEF FOR DEWEY.

Nothwithstanding the Bad Odor of This Ration the Government Asks for Bids.

Washington, March 27.—Proposals for food supplies to be shipped to Admiral Dewey have been invited by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy Department. The supplies are to be delivered at the New York Navy Yard and will probably leave for Manila on the supply ship Glacier, now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The supplies are for the joint use of both the army and naval forces stationed in the Philippines, an arrangement having been made by which Gen. Otis can draw for the troops under his command whatever supplies he may need and have the cost charged against the Commissary Department at Washington.

The bids will be opened at the Navy Department at noon, March 28. The blank proposals of the department show that the charges against canned meats in the army have not affected their use, as it has been determined to invite proposals for 60,000 pounds of canned corned beef and 50,000 pounds of tinned roast beef. The bidder is to furnish at the New York Navy Yard two sample cans of each kind of beef, and the specifications require the contractor to guarantee that both the corned beef and roast beef shall keep good in any climate for one year from the date of delivery. The samples are to be furnished in advance of the bids, and will be thoroughly examined and tested at the New York Navy Yard by a board of inspection. Awards will be made to the lowest bidders whose sample in the opinion of the Board of Inspection meets the requirements of the department.

In addition to the canned beef, it is proposed to ship to Manila 12,000 gallons of beans, 100,000 pounds of salt beef, 25,000 pounds of ham, 100,000 pounds of salt pork, 50,000 pounds of rice, 3,000 gallons of syrup, 100,000 pounds of sugar, 25,000 pounds of canned tomatoes, 12,000 pounds of tinned peas, 6,000 pounds of tinned string beans, 9,000 pounds of tined lima beans, and 9,000 pounds of tinned corn. The specifications require that all tinned vegetables shall be of the newest crops and that the cans shall be marked with the date of packing.

Proposals have also been asked for 2,500 gallons of vinegar and 300,000 of wheat flour. With each delivery of wheat flour, salt beef and salt pork the contractor is required to furnish a certificate from the New York Produce Exchange that the character and quality of the food are up to the standard of the specifications.

Death of Gov. Thomas C. Fletcher.

Washington, D. C., March 27.—Former Governor Thomas C. Fletcher, of Missouri, died here Saturday.

Mr. Fletcher had been a notable figure in the political life of the Southwest, having been the first abolition Governor of a former slave State. He was born 72 years ago in Herculaneum, Jefferson county, Mo. His father was a merchant, with several slaves, but young Fletcher became a stanch abolitionist.

It is told of him that as a youth he had the audacity to appear at meetings where every one was a supporter of slave doctrines and make abolition speeches. This boldness make him friends, and he was first appointed clerk of Jefferson county and afterward elected for six years. Before his term expired he removed to St. Louis and began the practice of law.

At the outbreak of the war Mr. Fletcher enlisted with the Union forces, and served through the war. His army service and his personal popularity combined to secure for him the honor of being the first Governor of Missouri following the war. He was inaugurated in 1865, and served until 1868, covering an eventful period of reconstruction. Intense animosities existed, and at times Governor Fletcher's friends feared for his life, but he went unguarded, and his courage carried him through unharmed.

Bones of Soldiers from Cuba.

Washington, March 27.—Assistant Quartermaster-General James L. Moore has given directions for the preparation of a suitable plot of ground in Arlington National Cemetery for the interment of the remains of a number of dead soldiers now being brought to the United States on the transport Rounmanian, that left Santiago on Thursday. The plot selected is one of the prettiest in the cemetery. It is on a high bluff overlooking the Potomac River and already over a hundred graves have been dug. By Monday evening it is expected that this number will be increased to two hundred.

LABOR MEN IN CONTROL

To Seize the Management of the Jefferson Dollar Dinner.

BRYAN MAY NOT ACQUIESCE

Silver in Background—Plan is to Make Monopoly and Anti-Trust Ideas at the Front—Miss Helen M. Gould and Miss E. P. Stedman the Two Woman to be Invited—New Leader a Stereotyper.

New York, March 27.—Labor men have taken complete possession of the arrangements that are being made for the silver dollar dinner. A. J. Boulton, of the Stereotypers' Union, has taken the place of Eugene V. Brewster at the head of the movement which is designed to defeat the leadership of Mr. Richard Croker.

Incidental to this radical change, there is doubt as to whether Mr. Bryan will attend the feast now that the silver idea has been buried under the load of labor sentiment, but there still exists hope that the silver candidate of 1896 will not only be present, but that he will give voice to the tenets of a new democracy in denunciation of trusts, monopolies and the conduct of the war, making silver an insistent but at the same time a subordinate issue.

Eugene V. Brewster, by declaration of the labor dinners, ceased to be the main promoter of the feast, and the announcement of that fact was accompanied by the statement that Mr. Boulton was the originator of the idea of a revolution against Croker and that Mr. Brewster stepped in before action could be taken through Mr. Boulton. In consequence of the turning of things against him, Mr. Boulton issued this statement:

"I deem it proper to say upon behalf of the Democratic Ways and Means Committee of Kings county, of which I am chairman, that the elimination of politics from the movement in no way signifies that the Chicago platform has been forsaken by its adherents, even though it does not figure in the dinner party.

"Without doubting the wisdom of the committee in making it a labor demonstration, and while it is true that this characterization may be the means of crystallizing public sentiment where partisanship might not, I only regret that this one great opportunity of eliminating from an old Jeffersonian party irrelevant men and corrupt leaders shall perhaps be neglected in order to accomplish another and possibly more important object.

Mr. Brewster later consented to talk in reference to the work he has done, which involves the reception of 8,000 requests for 2,000 seats.

"I can't sleep," he said; "I can't eat, they keep me so busy," and that was all.

George Warner, of No. 91 Centre street, takes Mr. Brewster's place in giving out news, and in future he will tell everything that is to be made public about the dinner.

Especial effort will be made to induce Miss Helen Miller Gould to be present. The other woman on the invitation list, whose name the committee would not make public Friday, is Miss Elizabeth Perkins Stedman. The request of the labor men that these two should be guests will be accompanied by a statement that, in the opinion of those who are arranging the dinner, they are the grandest types of American womanhood. For them a special box will be prepared, with a table spread, with more of elegance than will be noticeable among the diners on the floor of the Grand Central Palace. They will have the privilege of inviting guests.

CUBAN ARMY ROLLS WITHHELD.

Assembly Wants to be Asked for Them, and Americans Will Not.

Havana, Cuba, March 27.—Muster rolls of the Cuban army are still locked up in the desk of Senor Rafael Portuondo, chairman of the Executive Committee of the military Assembly, and the $3,000,000 sent by the United States to pay the Cuban troops remains in unbroken packages on board the transport Burnside, the military administration being unable to partition the cash among the ragged battalions who are awaiting the division until they can obtain the muster rolls.

Thirty generals composing the Assembly crack jokes at the expense of General Gomez and the American authorities, thinking, for the moment that they have the best of the game. Governor General Brooke only defers adopting forcible measures to gain possession of the rolls because he wishes to consult regarding the matter with Secretary of War Alger.

The Assembly wants to use these rolls as a lever to obtain some kind of official recognition from the military authorities, which the authorities will not give.

Senor Despaigno, who framed the motion providing for disbanding the army and the dissolution of the Assembly, which was introduced on Tuesday, said to-day:

"The Assembly will give the rolls to the military authorities as soon as they are asked to do so, but emphatically decline to hand them to Gen. Gomez. This cannot be done honorably in view of Gomez's recent deposition. The Assembly is an administrative, authoritative body of the present Cuban army, and the rolls are in our possession, where they should be.

"We understand that Governor General Brooke does not wish officially to recognize us. Well and good! Asking us to deliver the rolls would not carry recognition of the Assembly as the body representing the Cuban people, but only recognition as the elected head of the Cuban people in arms, which undoubtedly we are."

Western Union Comes Out Ahead.

Washington, D. C., March 27.—Attorney-General Griggs has advised the War Department against granting permission to the Commercial Cable Company to run a submarine cable from the United States to Cuba and Porto Rico. He does not hold that the Secretary of War has no power to grant such permission, but he takes the ground that it would be inexpedient under all the circumstances." The Western Union Telegraph Company controls the only cable to the West Indies.

A janitor's wife in New York City, a Swedish woman, very much interested a lady who talked with her recently by the recital of woes caused by certain spells of ill health which had assailed her since she was a child, but which had been almost banished by the use of Ripans Tabules. While at her home in Sweden, when young, she had worked in the fields, as is the custom there. She sometimes had to leave her work in great distress with a misery at the pit of her stomach. Her mother often stirred up some Swedish drops for her that afforded a temporary relief. As she grew older other symptoms developed, among them shortness of breath. This, she said, occasioned intense suffering. One night while sweeping one of the offices she found a portion of a small packet of Ripans Tabules in a waste basket, and knowing what they were, because she had seen them advertised, she sampled them and found that "they carried off all her difficulties right away." It is only once in a great while now that she takes one, but if she gets over-tired when her work is extra hard and feels the slightest twinge of bad feeling, she says a Ripans Tabule always cuts it short. She buys them at the drug store now, but does not use ten cents' worth in a month.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

THE PRESIDENT'S VACATION END'S

Will be in Washington Tuesday—The Philippine Policy.

Thomasville, Ga., March 27.—President McKinley has decided definitely not to make the trip to Tampa, though he has promised to visit there sometime during his Presidential term, and consequently he will be in Washington on Tuesday next. He is looking well and improving in health steadily. This morning a reporter found him taking an after breakfast stroll on the sidewalks around the Havana home. The President said he was feeling first rate and added:

"I never felt better in my life. This is a fine place and I always enjoy it. It is good for one who, like me, needs to get away where he can have rest and quiet."

The Administration will not decide upon its permanent policy respecting the Philippines until the Schurman Commission reports. It feels that its present knowledge of the islands is too indefinite as a basis of fixed policy. Moreover, an immediate decision is felt to be needless, since for the present the only problem is the restoration of law and order and the establishment of stable peaceful conditions.

This and the appointment of a diplomatic representatives at Madrid are two of the most important matters remaining open. The Madrid mission probably will be raised to an embassy soon after the payment of the $20,000,000 indemnity, and a man of the highest qualifications and attainments chosen for this delicate and important post. Gen. Woodford may not be the new envoy owing to the fact that New York already has such a large proportion of diplomatic appointments.

MAY OWN STREET RAILWAYS.

Under a Law Just Passed the City May Operate All Lines.

Detroit, Mich., March 27.—Detroit is confronted with a condition which will permit it to own and operate the street car lines of the city. This condition primarily had its inception during Gov. Pingree's term as Mayor of the city, when he advocated municipal ownership of the lines and began his long fight against the companies. The present condition was, however, directly brought about by the passage of the so-called McLeod bill, which passed the Legislature Thursday night, and was signed by the Governor Saturday.

The city, by a tremendous majority, voted for municipal ownership some time ago, but the proposition for municipal operation has not been submitted for a vote. By the terms of the bill the Council may appoint three commissioners to negotiate with the owners of the railway for the purchase of the road. The commissioners are not empowered to pay out any of the city money, but they may acquire title to the road for the people and give the present owners—really Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland and Detroit, and H. T. Wilson, of New York—a mortgage on the road with some agreed amount of interest.

Gunboat Hurries to Aid Americans.

Washington, D. C., March 27.—Besides immediately dispathing a gunboat to make an investigation Secretary Hay has cabled to the American Charge d'Affaires at Guatemala City and the American Consul at Tegucigalpa, directing them to make protests to the Guatemalan and Honduran governments against the execution of six Americans who were arrested a few days ago and sentenced to be shot.

The action of the Administration was taken upon the representation of Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, who had received a telegram from former Governor Stone, setting forth the peril of the men as told him by their friends in Missouri, and on other advices in the possession of the State Department. Governor Stone's telegram to Senator Cockrell simply stated that the six men had been arrested, one of them being C. W. Guthrey, and had been sentenced to be shot. When the Senator presented the dispatch to Secretary Hay he urged that official to take all steps possible to protect the Americans.

The men under arrest and sentenced to be executed have been engaged in business, and the Hondurians or Guatemalans, thinking they were an advance guard of the filibustering expedition, immediately conceived and put into execution the plan of arresting and shooting them before their companions could arrive. There was danger of the entire plan being carried out, especially as the first part was performed successfully. In view of the machinery which has been set in motion, there is no danger that the men will be shot.

Death List Twenty-Seven.

New York, March 27.—A number of fragments of charred human bones were found in the ruins of the Windsor Hotel near the corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-seventh street. They were a knee cap, some ribs, and a few sections of the spine, enough to show that the fragments were not parts of any other body that had already been numbered. The Building Department numbered the body as No. 16 of the unidentified dead

The proposal to raise a fund for the relief of the family of Warren Guion the elevator man at the Hotel Windsor, who was killed in the fire, is likely to be carried out separately from the raising of a general fund for the hotel employes. Guion made several trips after the danger of doing so was very apparent, and started for "one more" in the face of warning of a policeman that he was risking his life. He said he would stick to it, and he did so until he died. The elevator was descending when its support at the top burned away, and the pulley and ropes came rattling down the shaft. The safety clutches acted promptly and the elevator stuck between two floors, where it was impossible for any one to leave it.

Guion was 28 years old, and had been employed at the hotel over seventy years. He supported his mother and two sisters, and it is for their benefit that it has been proposed to raise a fund of $10,000.

Berlin, March 27.—The Emperor has caused the issuance of an ordinance forbidding petitioners to throw their petitions into the imperial carriage. Bombarding the imperial carriage with requests for pardon, etc., has been a feature of Berlin life for the last ten years.

HOT AFTER FILIPINOS

The Present Campaign Will Continue Until They Surrender.

THEY ARE HARD FIGHTERS

Saturday and Sunday Fighting Was the Fircest Experienced Slowly but surely the Enemy Was Driven Before the American Army—All Regiments Engaged—Gen. Egbert Killed.

Manila, March 27.—The battle between the insurgents and the United States troops which was begun early Saturday was resumed Sunday morning with renewed vigor. This has been the greatest contest of the war in the Philippines.

The American loss is heavy and will reach not less than 200, perhaps double that number. At least twenty Americans have been slain.

The insurgent loss in killed alone is over 200, while the number of wounded cannot even be estimated.

Sunday the Americans captured the town of Malinta after a short, gallant charge. Malinta is within a few miles of Polo, the insurgent stronghold.

Col. Egbert of the Twenty-second was among the killed.

When the fighting ceased last night the insurgents had been driven at the point of the bayonet from their intrenchments and forced to flee to Malinta. The natives had made a desperate resistance and withstood the rain of fire behind the trenches on the Tuliaha River banks for hours.

The advance was led by Gen. MacArthur's division, composed of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis's brigade, made up of the Third Artillery and the Twentieth Kansas and First Montana regiments, and Gen. Hale's brigade, the First South Dakota, Tenth Pennsylvania and First Nebraska regiments.

The Second Oregon and the Twenty-second regiments and Third Infantry, under Gen. Wheaton, and the Fourth Infantry, two battalions of the Seventeenth Infantry, and the Thirteenth Minnesota and First Wyoming regiments, under Gen. Hall, composed the reserve force which occupied the trenches deserted by the insurgents.

The Filipinos directed a heavy fire against Gen. MacArthur's division, which was advancing in an easterly direction.

Gen. Hale's command came up and the artillery turned the tide. The village of Masamitong was shelled and American troops rushed forward occupying the trenches and driving the demoralized Filipinos in every direction.

Balinatanac, Baeza and Cathuhan, all fortified towns, were quickly occupied by the Americans, the enemy rushing pell mell towards Novaliches.

The Twenty-second regulars made a daring attempt to form a connection between Col. Egbert's command on the right and the artillery with no success.

The Oregon regiment in their charge lost thirty-one men, eight of whom were killed, but the Westerners drove the natives from the trenches just outside of Malabon.

When the Third Infantry reinforced the Second Oregon the rebels were chased right into the streets of the town. The number of natives killed is large.

It is expected that before to-day ends Polo will be occupied by the Americans.

The insurgents are strongly intrenched in this town, and the battle will be a long and bloody one.

Colonel Egbert is a hero of the Santiago campaign. He was wounded at El Caney during the charge of the Sixth Infantry and was for several days in Bellevue Hospital. As soon as he recovered sufficiently he was assigned to the Philippines. Col. Egbert served during the Civil War with distinction.

Saturday's Battle.

Manila, March 26.—The greatest battle between the United States forces and the insurgents that has taken place since February was that which began Saturday morning.

From dawn until evening the fighting went on. The insurgents were steadily driven back, but they offered unexpectedly strong resistance, and in many instances they were only forced from the intrenchments at the bayonet. At other times this was not possible, and the artillery was brought to bear. For hours they stood their ground under a deadly rain of shells on the banks of the Tuliaha River, where they fought from behind a barricade erected along the line of the railroad. At last they were forced to yield here, too, and they retired into the town of Malinta.

The loss in killed and wounded upon the American side will be fully 200. The enemy's loss will greatly exceed this. The Oregon regiment advanced almost to the confines of the town of Malabon, thus receiving the heaviest fire of any of the United States troops who were engaged. The natives fought like demons, at times actually leaving their trenches and with reckless bravery charging the Oregon regiment. It was only by the most magnificent fighting on the part of the latter and their utter disregard of the incessant volleying of Aguinaldo's followers that they were enabled to hold their ground. In this engagement they lost eight killed and twenty-three wounded.

The position of the Oregon men was still a most trying one when they were reinforced by a battalion of the Third Infantry in comand of Capt. Cook. With the arrival of reinforcements the assault was renewed with spirit and the enemy was soon compelled to yield. The Filipinos retreated upon Malabon after skelter, the Americans pursuing them clear into the streets of the town and inflicting great loss. A mile beyond Caloocan Gen. Wheaton encountered the insurgents strongly intrenched upon the north bank of the Tuliaha River. They had erected a barricade along the line of the railway and were prepared, apparently, to make a stubborn stand at this point. But a battery of artillery was brought into action and a shower of shells was dropped into the lines for two hours, when they were dislodged and retired to Malinta.

The News in Washington.

Washington, March 27.—Officials here are inclined to believe the American forces are having a harder time than was anticipated in defeating the rebels.

The dispatches received indicate that the fighting is very severe and that the rebels are not retreating without making a stubborn resistance. Owing to the length of time the American forces have been engaged fighting steadily, Gen. Corbin stated that he believed Gen. Otis would withdraw to permit his men to rest and obtain sleep. The advices indicate that the fighting has been continuous for two days.

The officials here are surprised at the amount of ammunition of the rebels. It was generally believed that they were short of this, but the length of time the fighting has been going on contradicts this theory.

Gen. Corbin stated that Otis would as soon as possible make an effort to reach the base of the supplies of the rebels and destroy their ammunition factories.

The regular regiments are poorly officered. There are six troops of cavalry in Manila having only seven officers. Officers have been assigned to the regiments in the Philippines, but few of them have reached their destination. Much regard is felt here at the death of Col. Egbert.

He was an experienced, brave and fearless officer.

THE HORRORS OF SNAKE HILL

Robbery and Rottenness Characterize the Management of This Institution.

Jersey City, March 27.—The Hudson County, N. J., Grand Jury have made a presentment to the Over and Terminer Court in relation to the condition of the almshouse. The presentment says:

"Our investigation of the almshouse, limited as to time thought we were, brought to light conditions which appalled us. Children in rags and without proper covering for their feet, sanitary conditions primitive, utterly insufficient and in some cases disgustingly unclean, healthy children and those impregnated with loathsome disease compelled to bathe in the same vessels and after thus 'cleansing' themselves drying on towels used in common; the men vermin infested, and compelled to so continue because the responsible body had, through delays and bickerings among themselves and with the contractors, failed to provide necessary garments or material therefor, and because the management, even though no change of clothing could be secured, seemed to be unable to devise a plan whereby these inmates could be first scoured and then kept in bed until their clothing had received attention. And the shoeless children in their rags and the helpless old men with their vermin had been thus continued for a period of quite two months, and would, in all probability, have had to so continue for an indefinite period had this investigation not been made.

"The children are seemingly permitted to roam at will. They intermingle with the older inmates, and oftentimes acquire deplorable vices. The almshouse as it exists to-day is but a fester, and while in the solution of this social problem many differences of opinion will be found, we believe that the majority of those who have given thought to the question will agree with us that these children should be separated elsewhere than at Snake Hill."

The prevailing contract system as carried on is a fraud, pure and simply. The Board of Freeholders reserves the right to award by item if it chooses, but in exceptional cases it does not so choose, and award of contract is made on the basis of aggregate bid. Thus the contractor who has the ability to secure inside information, with a call for goods largely in excess of the requirements and oftentimes for goods that will not be called for at all, proceeds to "compete." Knowing that certain articles will never be called for he quotes for them a nominal price while for the goods actually required he submits figures largely in excess of market prices. His aggregate is naturally lower than that of a bidder who submits bona fide prices for each item, and the board making the award to him on the aggregate basis, he proceeds with his legalized robbery.

Some peculiarities of the contract system are worth noting. Red and blue awning stripes were advertised for to be bid on separately. They both cost the same in open market, but the contractor bid 10 cents for red and 24 cents for blue per yard, and the records show that he actually furnished 5,655 yards of blue while 645 yards of red were found to be sufficient.

The presentment condemns the requisition system as being worse than the contract system. It continues:

"Fully realizing that the character of public bodies should not be lightly assailed, this grand inquest would give expression to the belief that the refusal or neglect to disestablish the existing rotten system is due to a desire on the part of certain Freeholders to participate in the proceeds of the robberies which they have thus helped to legalize. Stories have come to the ears of this Grand Jury clearly indicating guilty participation, some of which stories have been investigated, and, while we have no reasonable doubt that guilt exists, we have found ourselves unable to find sufficient evidence to indict."

The presentment closes with a recommendation that the board be reduced to five members with a governing officer or director possessing veto power which cannot be overridden.

MR. BRYAN AT HOT SPRINGS.

Has a Conference With Mr. Sheehan of New York and Others.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 27.—William Jennings Bryan left the city today for Little Rock. During his stay here he had a conference with John C. Sheehan, formerly Mr. Croker's right hand man, and in 1897, head of Tammany Hall. Mr. Sheehan met Mr. Bryan at the hotel entrance, and was one of the first among the many to greet him. Saturday, on his arrival Mr. Bryan delivered a lecture for the benefit of the proposed National Presbyterian Sanitarium. Saturday evening Mr. Sheehan was asked what he thought of Mr. Bryan's declination of Mr. Belmont's invitation to the Croker banquet.

"I think Bryan did perfectly right in declining the invitation," said Mr. Sheehan. "He could not have done anything else under the circumstances."

Works and Pays Well.

A Legislative Evil.

One of the fortunate things for corporations in killing legislation that they do not like in the State Legislature, is the custom of allowing committees to strangle such measures as the majority of the members think best—that is, from their point of view; and that is decidedly bad at times. In parleying with Senator McDermott a few days before the Legislature adjourned, when the Hudson county man wanted to get his riparian rights bill out of the committee's hands, President Reed cited the action of former President Robert Adrain, a Democrat, in declaring out of order motions to relieve committees of the bills referred to them. In commenting on this incident the Newark News tersely says:

The slaughter of bills in committee has become a palable evil an abuse of committee functions. It was never contemplated that these subordinate bodies should assume the powers given by the constitution to the Legislature as a whole. Their province is to examine the bills and inform the whole House whether in their opinion the measures referred to them are good or bad. They may report favorably, adversely, without recommendation, by substitute, or with amendment, but in all cases it is their duty to report every bill referred to them in some way, and leave the responsibility for its passage or defeat with the Legislature.

The new law in Kansas which provides that uncollectible judgments obtained against firms, corporations or individuals on behalf of the State shall be sold at public aution has not proved very successful in its operation. In Cowley county the other day such a sale brought $200 and the bill for advertising was $1,450, leaving the taxpayers out of pocket just $1,250. "When a Pop takes his hand from the plow," observes one of the State papers, "and puts it to the statute book the weeds of folly are almost sure to choke out the seeds of justice and common sense."

According to the Philadelphia Record, which is a close observer of New Jersey affairs, "The State Legislature which Governor Voorhees, of New Jersey, has finally got off his hands will be marked in the annals of that State as the cheapest body of men ever brought together at Trenton to do the bidding of corporation magnates. Votes of members were dog cheap; but the lobbyists raised their rates, and so the balance of corporate outlay was substantially maintained."

No one pretends to say that because a man kisses a copy of the Bible before giving testimony in court he will stick to the truth with greater tenacity. In fact, the smacking of the Bible by the witness' lips is an anomalous practice in most instances. Therefore the new State law which abolishes the compulsory kissing of the Bible is one framed in a practical, consistent view of the frailities of human nature.

If the people of New Jersey raised by direct taxes the $3,000,000 that the Legislature appropriated before adjourning, it is probable that we would have heard more calls for economy than has been the case in view of the State's enrichment by corporation fees. It is an exemplification of the axiom "easily earned easily spent."

The Record says that the combined tickets at the first charter election in Summit under their new form government will comprise a total of 100 candidates for office. The voter who cannot find a satisfactory choice among such a number of candidates will never be satisfied till the millineum arrives.

The Newark Advertiser truthfully says: "The languor that characterized the first eight weeks of the legislative session had its contrast in the feverish haste with which bills were rushed through during the week of adjournment. It is unnecessary to say that such a system of law-making is as senseless as it is baneful."

It is late in the winter to mention it, but perhaps the street railway magnates will see to it that the Legislature passes a law at the next session to heat the streets. Then passengers wouldn't complain of cold cars.

Elizabeth liverymen have entered a combine to raise the price for the use of coaches at funerals from $3 to $4 If this thing keeps on it will be cheaper to keep alive.

One of the hard lines of highwaymen is that though they are constantly holding up people they generally are charged in court with knocking them down.

The next thing we know will be that grocers will be selling pink tea instead of green and black. It would be a great hit among the society people.

One of the hard things of the fighting in the Phillipines is that the poets cannot find an English word that will rhyme with Aguinaldo.

A jewelry trust has been formed with a capital of $25 000 000. This is one combination that the poor man will not worry about.

A man may think his wife quite dear without loving her, especially when Easter millinery is taken into consideration.

This Legislature did not put a straw in the way of the Coal Trust or any other old trust, says the Newark News.

The value of a political office lies in the fact that so many other fellowe are after it.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Governor Voorhees comes through his first legislative session with an increased respect. He has developed a firmness and a courage not generally conceded to him, and he has sat very firmly on some very bad legislation. The weak point of his record is his condonation of the trusts, and his pandering to the greed of those who have absorbed the money paid by the trusts for their corporate franchises.—Trenton True American.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Governor Voorhees has his law office in Elizabeth just over that of Senator Cross, and they swap stories two or three times a day as a rule. There is no oppressive formality in the Governor's office, and he finds that he is almost too convenient. But he can stand a lot of boredom without grumbling, and he has no family cares to divert him. What a pity this is, says the Newark Call. How some nice girl would enjoy being Her Excellency.

General J. Madison Drake, commander of Elizabeth's Veteran Zouaves, was sixty two years old Saturday, and celebrated the event by a reception to the Veteran Zouaves and his friends at the Zouave Armory. General Drake for years wore long, wavy red hair, but last year he had the locks cut off in honor of the capture by Admiral Dewey of Manila. The souvenirs which the General presented to each of his veteran followers was a lock of the hair, which will be tied with a red, white and blue ribbon, and inclosed in neat little box.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet-banker, who has been "written up" in several papers of late, and who now lives on a ninety-acre estate in the upper part of New York fitted up in magnificent style, is a native of Plainfield. He was born in the house now occupied by James E. Martine on "Cedar Brook" farm and lived there till he was eight years of age. Some eight months ago he visited Mr. Martine's home and took great delight in going over the old house—the home of his boyhood. The poet-banker was especially pleased in going into the dark closet, in which he was often locked as a punishment for boyish pranks. The house is over 100 years old.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

The Sawtelle Dramatic Co. have made quite a hit Between the acts there are very clever specialties. The bad weather did not prevent a fair attendance at the opening play, "Dangers of a Great City." Jessie Sawtelle looked and acted charmingly the part of Ruth Fielding while Al Sawtelle, as Edward Vaughan, the panther, proved himself a clever character actor. Arthur Evans, as the banker, was good; Belle Stevenson, as Mabel, his daughter, was satisfactory; Frederick Watson, as Arthur Melton, the villain, did well, as did also Clarence Bennett as Doc Kunchelby. C. Willard Mack was strong on the part of George Fielding, a bank clerk, who was falsely accused of murdering Mark Lanyards, the latter character being ably assumed by Manuel Crawther. Fred C. House looked and acted the tough to perfection, while George H Summers, who by the way is one of the best comedians seen here, kept the audience in the best of humor throughout the entire play. The rest of the cast were satisfactory.—Elizabeth Journal. Tonight, at Music Hall, opening in "Dangers of a Great City." Popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents. Seats now on sale.

The stage hands employed at Music Hall will be the recipients of a benefit Thursday night, April 6th, Easter week. The benefit is tendered by Manager Maze Edwards in recognition of their services, and he has secured for his "men behind the scenes" a gala attraction, Donnelly & Girard's greatest farce comedy success, "Natural Gas," in which Eddie Girard appears in his original character, supported by a star cast of artists. Prices for this event will be regular house prices and reserved seats may be secured forthwith.

The play by Jerome K Jerome which is to follow "Americans at Home" at the Lyceum Theatre, is entitled "John Ingerfield." It will be played for the first time Wednesday evening. In the cast will be Edward Morgan, Wm. Courtleigh, Charles Walcot, Henry Woodruff, John Findlay, C. W. Butler, Miss Mary Mannering, Mrs. Whiffen, Mrs. Walcot and Miss Ethel Hornick. The season of the Lyceum company will close April 8th, and the stage will be occupied the following Monday by J. K. Hackett and his company in "Rupert, of Hhnizau."

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Reliable Dress Linings.

We have always contended that to pay a dressmaker for using cheap and inferior Linings displays bad judgment. We turn away customers every day who demand cheap linings. But for every customer whom we disappoint we serve twenty others who ask for and receive reliable goods. The people of this city are fast learning that we have one of the best Lining Departments to be found anywhere.

LADIES' TAILOR-MADE SUITS.

We of course make no pretense of showing a large line of Ladies' Suits. We do, however, pick out the choicest things from here and there—the result, Quality, not Quantity. For instance, we have Suits at 9.98 made of Venitian Suiting with Satin-lined Jacket in a variety of shades that sells for 12.00 in some places. Another in Black Cheviot, just as desirable—same price. Better and more elaborately finished suits to $22.00. All are equal to the best custom work.

Great Rug Sale.

Another large shipment of those Wilton Nubia Rugs with bound ends, made to sell at $1.25, with great range of colorings and designs, all this week 98c each.

Carpets.

We are extremely busy in this department and would ask those who contemplate buying their carpets of us and want them laid to kindly give us a week's time.

Furniture.

Department Stores are to be the Furniture Stores of the future. The output of such stores is larger, the purchasing power correspondingly greater, and the goods can be handled for smaller profits. We sell Furniture cheaper than any house in the business. We shall be glad to furnish estimates on Furniture, Carpets, Shades, Oil Cloths, Mattings, etc.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 27.—Interesting union Sunday-school exercises of the Methodist, Episcopal and Baptist schools were held in in the auditorium of the latter church yesterday afternoon. Addresses were made by Mr. Robison, superintendent of the Episcopal school, Mr Krausse, of Roselle, secretary of the Union County Association, and Rev. Mr. Shott. Mr. Krausse congratulated the schools of the village for the high standard they had attained and said that they were the banner township in the county, both in work and contributions. The exercises were well attended, and since their inauguration several years ago they have been a benefit to all the schools and a great help to officers and teachers.

WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 27—But for the prompt action of a servant employed at the residence of Frederick Brush on First street there would no doubt have been a serious fire Saturday night or early Sunday morning. The servant, who roomed on the third floor in an attic room, was awakened about 1 o'clock by the smell of smoke. She got up and found that the bedclothes were all ablaze. She threw them out of the window and prevented them from setting fire to other things in the room. It is thought that the fire caught from the girl's dress. About 11 o'clock she lighted a lamp with a piece of paper from the stove and it is thought that some of the fire got into a flannel waist that she wore and smouldered until later, when it set fire to the bedclothes as it lay on the bed. The loss is about $20 and fully insured.

A committee, consisting of James T. Pierson, A. L. Russell, J. W. Cory, S. W. Reese, W. S. Welch and C. F. Conant, is working in connection with the Board of Education in trying to solve the question of more school facilities for Westfield. The primary school building on Prospect street is now crowded to its limit and with the new pupils which are expected next year the Board are in doubt as to what they will do.

A poster sociable will be the attraction, arranged by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society at the Presbyterian chapel tomorrow night. Each person who attends will be expected to dress to represent the title of some well known book.

BRAVE KATE FIELD.

STORY OF HER LAST JOURNEY TOLD BY ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

How the Dauntless Woman Journalist Undertook a Task While Near Her End—"Giving Up Is Not on My Programme," She Said.

[Copyright, 1899, by American Press Association.]

Wherever she went, brilliant, lamented Kate Field made an impression that remained. The gifted mind, the powerful will, the witty, sarcastic tongue, and above all the warm, appreciative heart, made a personality not to be forgotten.

"She was the most grateful person for any small favor that I ever saw," said Miss Paris, the friend who put her on board ship for her last earthly journey.

I think Miss Field is more vividly remembered than any other American who has visited the Hawaiian Islands in recent years. At each point in my recent wanderings through Hawaii I was asked, "Did you know Kate Field?" I was glad I had known her living and in health.

Her strength must have been failing before she attempted the Hawaiian trip. At the volcano of Kilauea she was too weak to endure the horseback and foot journey into and around the crater. She asked if some kind of a sedan chair could not be provided in which she might be carried a part of the way by natives. Just so indomitable was her determination to do her duty by the journal that had employed her. The churlish reply was made to her by a white man that the natives were not slaves and should not do what she asked.

If she had applied to the natives herself, undoubtedly these kindly and polite people would gladly have carried the brilliant woman journalist anywhere she wanted to go. She did not think to do this, however, and so missed one of the great features of her trip. It must have been a sore disappointment to her. As to the white man who thus snubbed her, he will have the remembrance to carry in his breast to his grave that he was ugly and ill mannered to Kate Field in her dying days, and that he was the only person in the islands who was so.

Miss Field went next to a coast village on the island of Hawaii in the Kona coffee district. Her instructions were to investigate thoroughly and report the prospects for profit in the culture of the coffee berry in the islands.

In the coast village she staid with Miss Paris. Her vitality was then nearly exhausted, though. Upborne by her own royal will, she knew it not. The stomach seemed to fail altogether, an inerring indication that the life is worn out. She took such liquid nourishment as she could and went on.

The journey through the coffee district was to be made on horseback. Seeing how weak she was, Miss Paris consented to accompany her. It was a triumphal procession that marched out of the little village of Kailua the morning they left. A guard of honor of handsome brown mounted native policemen accompanied the two ladies a little way on upon their road. A Hawaiian band, with mandolin and guitar, escorted them, too, singing the sweet, wild melodies of their race. Miss Field was so laden with leis, or flower wreaths, that she was in despair. Weak as she was, each one seemed to weigh a ton.

"What can I do with them?" she asked Miss Paris mournfully and yet half laughing, for she was pleased in spite of the incumbrance.

"Put them on your horse's neck and let him carry them," suggested Miss Paris.

This she did, and thus enwreathed and emblossomed Kate Field went out over the road she was never to retrace in this life.

It was her ardent wish to see the natives in their own homes and taste life as they knew it. Miss Paris is the daughter of the first missionary in western Hawaii and knew her people well and had friends among them all. They stopped that first night at the house of a native, intending to go on next morning. But now Miss Field's increasing weakness began to make Miss Paris seriously uneasy.

"Let us give up this trip for the present," she said, "and wait till you get stronger."

But Kate Field, the indomitable, answered, "Giving up is not on my programme."

She had never yet undertaken any enterprise she was unable to carry through; she saw no reason why she should give up this; she knew not that a stronger power than her own will was dominating her at last—even death.

Next morning it was plain she could go no farther. She was failing rapidly. Her will had begun to weaken, and Miss Paris was able to persuade her to abandon the trip temporarily. They were 12 miles from Napapoopoo, the coast village where the island steamers made their landing. By easy stages they rode to the village. It was Monday—steamer day. Here Miss Paris thought to leave her patient, remembering the long horseback ride before she could reach her own home. Miss Field laid her hands upon her shoulders and looked into her eyes.

"If you leave me before I get on board that steamer, I think I shall die," she said.

"Very well," replied the kind friend, "then I won't leave you. I will go with you in the boat to the steamer."

She was as good as her word and stopped not till she had placed the stricken journalist in her own bed upon the ship. Miss Field looked about her and smiled a faint, sweet smile.

"I am so comfortable," she said softly, "and—and—how shall I ever repay you?"

"Don't think of it," answered Miss Paris.

She was obliged to leave then, but an American doctor was on board, and to him and the ladies in his party she commended the sick woman. The physician saw the patient, gave some directions, and then he and his friends went ashore and remained till time for the steamer to leave.

It required some 24 hours to reach Honolulu. Of these last earthly hours of Kate Field there is no record. Whether she suffered greatly or whether she went out of life with any great death longing unfulfilled, who knows? There was no one with her but strangers, mostly the Japanese servants of the steamer, and on these lines there is not even a woman steward or attendant. Miss Field was carried from the steamer unconscious and in a dying condition to the residence of Dr. McGrew in Honolulu. Of her last thoughts there remains to us only this:

"Giving up is not on my programme."

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Some Unique and Interesting Activities of the Unquiet Sex.

A vigorous campaign against the use of birds for the adornment of ladies' headgear has lately been inaugurated in New York city and vicinity by Mrs. Adella Octavia Coulston, a novelist of note, whose suburban home is at Rochelle Park, near Hackensack, N. J.

In one of her recent stories, "Some of New York's Four Hundred," Mrs. Coulston takes the upper tendom of the metropolis sternly to task for some of its conspicuous follies and inhumanities. The story refers with special severity to the cruel treatment of the horses of the Four Hundred by "docking" and high checking.

The slaughter of birds for the decoration of hats also receives the novelist's condemnation. In the story is recorded the successful endeavor of a New York society girl who, under an assumed name, established an extensive milinery store to discountenance the decorating of hats with birds by refusing to use them in making her patrons' headwear.

Putting into practice the sentiments expressed in her novel, Mrs. Coulston, who has an especial fondness for birds, has organized and is president of a society for the protection of the feathered tribes against the ravages of fashionable society.

MRS. ADELLA OCTAVIA COULSTON.

Mrs. Coulston's commendable efforts are seconded by a number of prominent women of New York and vicinity, who have pledged themselves not to wear birds on their hats and to continuously urge their friends to discountenance this pernicious decree of fashion.

Among the members of the society formed by Mrs. Coulston are Mrs. Hellen M. Easton, Mrs. Mary A. Jeffries, Mrs. Garret R. Oldis and Mrs. Cornelia Cunningham. Believing it to be barbarous to kill birds for the sole purpose of decorating hats, these women will use every reasonable endeavor to make the wearing of birds unfashionable and odious and thus save from prospective annihilation the feathered creatures whose song and plumage are among nature's choicest gifts.

Miss Lucile M. Dent of Leavenworth, Kan., 15 years of age, has kept a scrapbook since the beginning of the war with Spain, having accumulated a collection of clippings for which she has been offered and refused $1,000.

Mary Antin, a 15-year-old Boston girl, is the latest literary prodigy. She was discovered by Zangwill and writes stories and poetry, for which he stands sponsor.

The marriage ceremony in Tibet is simple. The girl's father ties a rope about his daughter's neck and drags her to her future husband's abode. The latter pays what he considers a fair price, and she is henceforth his wife.

Mrs. Walter Vrooman, formerly of St. Louis, has organized a social settlement at Oxford, England, which is supplemental to her husband's Social Science school, recently established there.

THE VOLCANO BATH.

People in California Plunge in Ice Cold Mud.

Volcano baths are the proper thing nowadays in certain parts of California and Mexico. Down in Mendocino county, California such baths have become most frequent.

The volcano bath is not a water bath, says the San Francisco Bulletin nor is it a bath of lava, as lava might be obtained. It is a mud bath and no bath at all either. Ice cold mud of a consistency and of the consistency to be easily moved and stir is the element in which the bather's plunge splashing and swimming. The way they manage it is unique. A sapling is felled in the forest near the volcanic craters, stripped of its limbs, carried to the crater and placed across it, so that each end of the pole rests on firm ground. Fancy yourself sliding out on one of these saplings stretched across a crater's mouth, then slipping gently off into the middle of a gurgling, bubbling, ice cold mass of mud and swinging yourself there, suspended by your hands, until fatigued! Then, with just life enough left to crawl back along the log, you reach unyielding ground again.

Once plunged into one of the craters of mud, with all ties to the sapling above severed, a person would be lost forever, being swallowed up in the murky depths in an instant, for vastly quicker in action and surer of its victim than quicksand is the mud of Mendocino's mysterious volcanoes.

Cleanliness has nothing to do with it. It is not that for which people face the dangers of the volcano bath. The mud which is belched forth from the earth's interior is supposed to contain important medicinal properties.

There are about twenty-five of these singular mud belching volcanoes in Mendocino county, and they are among California's many wonders. They are situated high on a mountain side, seven miles from Cahto. At this time of the year they are unusually active. Their gurgling roar may be heard for a distance of several miles when they are most violent. The mud frequently shoots over the rim of the crater, flows down the mountain like a lava stream and enters one of the Eel river's tributaries called Mud creek. It fills the craters, which are about five feet above the earth's surface and bounded with a circular base or miniature crater from four to seven feet in diameter at the base and two to three feet at the top. Prospecting parties have hewn down saplings fifty feet in length and pushed them into the mouth of a crater. Some of these have disappeared altogether. Others remain near the surface, playthings of the muddy element, which tosses them about like fishermen's bobbins in a rough sea. A significant coincidence is the fact that when the ocean, twenty miles away, is unusually heavy and rough the volcanoes become intensely active, belching forth not only their burden of ice cold mud, but volumes of warm vapor. In some mysterious way the ocean seems to control their action.

For Bridesmaids.

At one of the Easter weddings all the bridesmaids are to wear white—white mousseline de soie gowns, made with plaited ruffles; and waists trimmed with embroidered chiffon and made with lace sleeves. They are to carry bouquets of yellow daffodils and wear white hats trimmed with yellow flowers. A good many of the bridesmaids' gowns will be trimmed with flowers this year, while all are to carry bouquets, and the idea of spring flowers being used for decoration is to be carried to a great extreme. Already the florists are trying to force the peach and apple blossoms to have them ready in time.

A truly magnificent creature will be the Easter bride, for her train can be longer than ever, the material of her gown more gorgeous and the lace of her veil more costly.

The princess gown will be the one of all others to be chosen, and one of the most superb is made to open over an underskirt which is a mass of real orange blossoms fastened on to white net. Not all real blossoms, however. A great many of them are made of artificial flowers, although the original design calls for the real flowers, but the perfume would be too overpowering. The front part of the waist of this gown is made of point lace, draped across the soft folds, and on the left shoulder is a large bundle of orange blossoms with long trailing ends, that go into the folds of the lace and hang down in the front of the skirt.

Wanted: Brains.

Dr. Burt G. Wilder, professor of Physiology on the Cornell staff of instruction at Ithica, has recently issued a circular asking prominent men in the United States to bequeath their brains to the university. He says that while it is easy to procure the brains of criminals and of insane or ignorant persons, it has hitherto been extremely difficult to obtain those of persons in whom the cerebral development is beyond the average. He adds that it is highly desirable for the advancement of science that a considerable number of brains of this character should be secured. This request, which has been circulated principally among the students and graduates of Cornell, is accompanied by a blank form of bequest, which, however, contains a clause by which the legacy becomes void if serious objection is made by the relatives of the deceased.

CHAPTER X.

Not for many moons did that voyage of the Idaho lose first place in the memory of the bevy of passengers who watched the lights of Guaymas fading away astern that April night. All had been bustle and gayety aboard during her hour of sheltered anchorage. Senor de la Cruz had verified the captain's verdict and opened a case of Sillery and besought all hands to drink to a joyous and prosperous voyage for his beloved daughters, their duenna and his little niece, their cousin from Hermosillo. "All hands" would have included the ship's company had the captain permitted, so hospitable was the Mexican, and indeed was intended to include every soul on the passenger list, most of them boarding the boat at Guaymas. The Senor Colonel Turnbull was formally presented to the Senor de la Cruz and by him to his charming family and their many friends, but the junior officer, on the score of recent and severe illness, had begged to be excused.

Loring stood alone at the taffrail listening in thoughtful silence to the sound of revelry within the brightly lighted cabin, while the hoarse screeching of the 'scape pipe drowned all other voices and proclaimed the impatient haste of the skipper to be off. Straight, but often storm swept, was the southerly run to La Paz, over on the desolate shore of the long, arid peninsula, and the green surges were rolling higher every moment and bursting in thunder into clouds of wind driven, hissing spray on the rocks beyond the point. Wind and wave were both against their good ship, and every officer and man was at his station awaiting the order to weigh anchor. The mail sacks were aboard, the consul had gone down over the side, and still Don Ramon seemed unable to part from his loved ones and the Idaho's champagne. It was the captain who had finally to put abrupt stop to the lingering leave takings.

"You have no home, nor has your father."

"I must be off at once," he said. "Come, Don Ramon; we'll take the best of care of these ladies and land them all at Frisco within the fortnight. Kiss 'em all around now and jump for your boat. Come, Senor—I didn't catch the name—ah, yes, Escalante—the father of the Senorita Pancha, I suppose? No—only her uncle? Well, I'll be her uncle now," and so saying he led the way to the deck.

Loring saw the lively party come surging forth from the companionway, senoras, senoritas, gray haired men and gay young gallants. There was a moment of clasping, clinging embraces, of straining arms and lingering kisses, of crowdings and murmurings here and there, some little sobbing and many tear wet eyes as the father was finally hurried down the ladder, and then there was further delay and shouts for Escalante, and not until then did Loring, silently watching the animated throng on the port side, become aware of two dark forms in the shadow of the deckhouse on the opposite quarter. One was that of a slender girl, and she was sobbing, she was praying in eager words not to be sent away, she was imploring pitifully to be taken back to the shore. Loring had studied Spanish long enough to understand almost every word, and even before he realized that he was an unwilling listener he had heard both her sobbing pleas and the abrupt, almost cruel answer:

"You have no home, nor has your father. You may thank heaven for the chance to get away."

The second officer came bustling round in search of them, and leaving the girl shrinking and sobbing on the narrow bench in the shadow the Mexican was hurried off. Before the little boats had fairly cast adrift and the swinging steps were raised the throb of the screw was felt churning the waters of the bay, and as the steamer slowly gathered way and her bow swung gradually seaward women and girls, kerchief waving, came drifting back along the rail, leaning far over and throwing kisses to the tossing shallops on the dark waves beneath; then, gathering about the stunted flagstaff at the stern, calling loudly their parting words, all unconscious of Loring, who had stepped aside to give them room, and so found himself close to little Pancha, lost to everybody in the desolation of a loneliness and grief that Loring could not see unmoved, yet could not reconcile with what he had believed of her.

Up to this moment he had heard of her only as an artful girl, the confederate of thieves and ruffians; up to this moment he had seen her only once, the afternoon she threw herself on Blake, as Blake and he had both come to believe, to prevent his drawing a revolver on the two rascals at the ranch. Yet never had Loring heard such pathetic pleading; never had he seen child or woman in such utter abandonment of woe; never had he thought it possible that Pancha—the siren of Sancho's ranch, cold, crafty, luring, designing, treacherous as any Carmen ever since portrayed upon the stage—could be capable of such intensity of feeling.

Drawing his uniform cape snugly about him—for now the sharp sea wind was whistling through the cordage and chilling his fever weakened frame—Loring leaned against the rail, gazing back at the receding shores, trying not to hear the girl's sobbing. The chatter of the flock of women was incessant. Turnbull and two Guaymas merchants had joined the group, but all were intent on those harbor lights now fast glimmering to mere sparks upon the sea, and the lonely girl sat there forgotten. Not once was voice uplifted in question as to what had become of her. Every moment now the stern was lifted higher in air and then dropped deeper into the roaring, hissing waters, and women tightened their hold upon the taffrail and gave shrill little shrieks and huddled closer together, and presently one of the elders fell back and begged to be led below, and then another, and by the time the last glimmer of the town had been hid from view and only the steady gleam of the lighthouse shone forth upon their foaming wake the hardiest of the gay little party of the earlier evening had been carefully assisted down the brass bound stairway, and when five bells tinkled windily somewhere forward there, with little hands clasped about the stanchion, a shawl thrown over her head, that head pillowed in her arms—there alone in the darkness and the rush of the wind and sea—there, the very picture of heartbroken girlhood—still sat Pancha, and Loring could bear it no longer.

He was thinking over his Spanish to be sure of his words when the starboard doors of the companionway were suddenly thrown open, and in the bright light from within two burly forms stepped unsteadily forth, then lurched for the nearest support, and Loring heard the jovial tones of Turnbull.

"He must be up here or overboard. He's nowhere below!" Then glancing sternward, "Oh, Loring!" he shouted, and at the name Pancha's little dark head was suddenly uplifted, and a pair of black eyes, red rimmed and swollen with weeping, gazed, startled, toward the dark figures. For the life of him Loring could not answer the hail. Turnbull's voice and words alone had been sufficient to rouse her from a depth of woe and to give rise to new and violent distress. She was trembling, and he could plainly see it. To answer would only announce to the frightened girl that the man whose name was sufficient to cause such evident dismay was standing there just beyond her seat—within a few paces of her—and had probably been there for some time. Quickly, watching his chance, as the Idaho careened to port, Loring shot round the deckhouse and made his way forward until he reached the companion stairs on that side, and in another moment was clinging to the outer knob of the doorway on the other and answering the eager questions as to where he'd been and whether he better not turn in.

"Have a brandy and water, sir," urged the colonel's new companion. "Nothing like it to head off mal de mer. We're in for a lively night. Half the women are sick already, and the colonel here was turning white about the gills."

"The air in the cabin was close after all that champagne. It's fresh in the staterooms, though," answered Turnbull. "Come on, Loring. It's time for you to be abed." Then in low tone he queried: "What's become of the child? Did she see you? Has she got back to shore?"

For answer Loring pointed to the dark figure shrinking from view half a dozen yards away toward the heaving stern. Their jovial fellow passenger again interposed.

"Come, gentlemen, brandy and water's what we need, ain't it?" The Idaho's champagne had evidently taken effect.

"Right," said Turnbull. "Run down and order for us, quick, or it'll be too late. We'll join you in a minute." The burly merchant dived for the doorway on the next stomach wrecking lurch and collided with the white capped stewardess, hastening up, with anxiety in her eyes. The two officers clung to the mizzen shrouds opposite the companionway as she emerged from the broad light into the darkness of the wind swept deck. It was a moment before she could distinguish objects at all. Then with practiced step she went swiftly to the crouching figure at the distant end of the long seat.

"I have learned something of her," murmured Turnbull. "That was her father's brother, Escalante, who came aboard with her. That woman at Sancho's was not her mother. She has been dead for many a year. She was own sister to De la Cruz. There is something back of their sending this girl to San Francisco. Hush! Here she comes."

With her arm thrown about the drooping girl.

With her arm thrown about the drooping girl, the stewardess came slowly leading her to the doorway. The swinging portals had slammed shut in the last plunge of the Idaho, and as the buoyant craft rose high on the next billow Turnbull and Loring both turned to open them. The light shown full on their calm, soldierly faces as the stewardess thanked them, and the shrinking child lifted up her frightened eyes for one brief moment, glanced quickly from one to the other, then, with a low cry, slipped, limp and senseless, through the woman's arms and fell in a dark heap upon the deck.

IVORY SOAP PASTE.

In fifteen minutes, with only a cake of Ivory Soap and water, you can make a better cleansing paste than you can buy.

Ivory Soap Paste will take spots from clothing; and will clean carpets, rugs, kid gloves, slippers, patent, enamel, russet leather and canvas shoes, leather belts, painted wood-work and furniture. The special value of Ivory Soap in this form arises from the fact that it can be used with a damp sponge or cloth to cleanse many articles that cannot be washed because they will not stand the free application of water.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces (one-quarter of the small size cake) of Ivory Soap cut into shavings, boil five minutes after the soap is thoroughly dissolved. Remove from the fire and cool in convenient dishes (not tin). It will keep well in an air-tight glass jar.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

The basket ball season in Plainfield is rapidly nearing its end. The game in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, this evening, between the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team and the team from the School of Mines, Columbia College, will be one of the last to be seen here this spring. The Columbia boys have the reputation of being gentlemanly fellows, who know the game and will give the local team a lively hustle to win. It is some time since the Plainfield boys have played a match game, but they have not forgotten how, as will be evident this evening. The game is called for 8:15 o'clock, but as the seating capacity of the visitors' gallery is limited, those who want to be sure of seats are advised to go early. The admission will be 15 cents as usual.

Why This Distinction?

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I would like to ask through your valuable paper a few questions in regard to the so-called jealous-minded police force in raiding peanut parties (poker games). Why do colored men fare so much worse than white men when caught at the game? Why do the police allow two games of poker to run on East Front street without interruption? These games are running continually. At one they play for money and at the other they play for cigars, and the proprietor buys them when you want to cash in. I would like to have the City Judge and the head of the police force state openly why they make a distinction between white and colored men in poker games (peanut parties)? A Colored Citizen.

REVIEW OF THE WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Partisan Legislation Seemed to be Severely Tabooed.

TRUSTS HAD A GRIP THOUGH

NOTHING INIMICAL TO CORPORATION INTERESTS WAS PASSED.

Appropriation Grew to Three Millions and the Democrats are Pleased With the Record Their Opponents Made—It is Alleged That There was Plenty of Cash to Help Grease the Wheels of Legislation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 28—The Legislature, which adjourned sine die last Friday, was in many respects a most remarkable body. It made a record for conservatism. No really important acts were passed. Nearly all attempts at partisan legislation were frowned upon, and as a consequence only two acts, relating to ward district lines in Trenton and New Brunswick, these being political, were placed on the statute book. Senator Hutchinson's bill, giving the control of the State Prison offices to the Republican party, never saw daylight. It was smothered in a committee of which the stalwart Senator Pitney was chairman. The importunities made by Colonel Dickinson, of Jersey City, and Major Lentz, of Newark, for legislation to give them control of the police and fire departments of those cities were brushed aside, which is because the policy of the Republican leaders was averse to interference in local affairs. The Republicans regard this as a great record for non-partisanship and are confident that it has strengthened the party before the people.

As to other legislation, perhaps the record that has been made is not so satisfactory. Anyhow, the Democrats make that allegation. It is charged that the Legislature from beginning to end has been entirely under the control of trusts and corporations. Not even one bill inimical to those interests has become a law. Several anti-trust measures were introduced, but because they had a Democratic sponsorship they were never permitted to come up for discussion. As to whether they were right or wrong was a question which should have been settled in open session and not strangled by the committees having them in charge. The Republican majority undoubtedly was guilty of cowardice in the method in it pursued with regard to that class of bills.

By a ruling of the President of the Senate it was declared that no Senator had a right to move for the discharge of a committee from the further consideration of any bill. This was regarded as autocratic in the extreme, and President Reed fortified himself by saying that his ruling was only following precedent from time immemorial in the New Jersey Senate. In the House motions were always permitted to force committees to report bills, but there motions were quickly defeated by a strictly partisan vote. That the committees of the Legislature should have such drastic power over bills is regarded as beyond all reason.

A "three million dollar Legislature" is the name given to it by the Democrats. This has reference to the large appropriations that have been made—the largest in the history of the State. Of course there were some good excuses for this disbursement of the public money. Nearly a half million of dollars has been appropriated for the Rahway Reformatory and for compensation for the soldiers of the American-Spanish war. Then the Morris Plains State Hospital was given a pretty big slice, while, of course, hundreds of thousands of dollars had to be provided for the support and maintenance of the various State departments and institutions. The Republicans assert that there has been no extravagance at all, because every dollar appropriated was absolutely necessary for the running of the State Government. Of course the Democrats believe otherwise. They say that the pruning knife should have been used in many items of the bill, and that this "three million dollar" Legislature has in many cases wasted the public funds.

During the session 540 bills were introduced, 231 in the Senate and 318 in the House. Of these, 231 have become laws, and the Governor has 35 yet to act upon. The Governor has made a remarkable record in the manner in which he has disposed of the legislation of the session.

Senator Charles A. Reed is detained at home slightly indisposed.

SUNDAY WORKERS MET.

ANNUAL MEETING OF FIRST M. E. SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Reports Showed a Good Record for the Past Year—Election of Officers Held—Missionary Society Met as Well

The progress that has marked the last year at the Sunday-school of the First M. E church was made evident at the annual meeting of the school held in Vincent chapel last evening. It was well attended by both teachers and scholars.

The reports of the officers and committees were made, and told of the work done during the year. The treasurer, A. E Crane, gave notice that there still remained a substantial balance in the bank. The report of the secretary, James A. Stafford, showed a total membership of 307, greater than last year. The average attendance was very satisfactory, despite the fact there were so many rainy Sundays during the past year

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: Superintendent, J. W. Jackson; assistant superintendents, James R. Joy and Harry Gee; secretary, James A. Stafford; treasurer, Arthur E Crone; librarian, L. M. Dunavan. Library committee, J. R. Joy, J. A. Stafford, L. M. Dunavan, Miss Angleman, and Miss Elsie Horne.

The annual meeting of the missionary society of the Sunday school followed the other meeting. The report showed that $250 had been given to the cause of home and foreign missions during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Clifford W. McGee; vice-president, Samuel Bingamin; secretary and treasurer, Arthur E. Crone.

Y. M. C. A. LITERARY SOCIETY.

Oscar S. Rogers Delivered an Oration on Evils of Immigration.

The first real meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Literary Society was held last night, and an interesting programme of literary productions was presented. Oscar S. Rogers delivered an original oration, which dealt with the evils of foreign immigration, and there was a talk in which C. M. Dolliver, Mr. Drake and Mrs. Dranges took part.

An original composition by C. M. Dolliver, entitled "A Visit to the Globe Theatre in Shakespeare's Time," was read, and Harvey Linbarger read something upon the policy of expansion. The next meeting will be held April 10th, when there will be a debate and a musical and literary programme.

LOCAL CADETS TO DRILL.

Exhibition Drill to be Held in Crescent Rink Tomorrow Night.

The proposed joint exhibition drill of the cadet corps of the Plainfield High School and Leals' School will not be held. Instead, the High School cadets will hold the drill alone to morrow evening in the Crescent Rink. The cadets will be drilled by Captain George F. Edwards, commandant of the company, and will be reviewed by Lieut. T. N. Horn, of the First United States Artillery.

The drill will begin at 7:45 o'clock. Admission will be by invitation. There will be seats to accommodate all who come to watch the local cadets drill.

Cocking Main at Graceland.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, March 28—Sports from Westfield and Garwood met a party of similar tastes from Plainfield Saturday night and they held a cock fight at Graceland. The Westfield officials had been given a tip that the fight was to be held, but it was not held where the "tip" stated, so the fight was not molested. Thirty birds were fought, and the Plainfield birds were victorious. Their owners went home with plenty of Westfield and Garwood money.

Election at Grace Church.

$10,000 WANTED FOR SOLDIERS' MONUMENT

Joint Committee Meets and Commences Its Plans.

TO APPEAL TO ALL CLASSES

PROBABLE LOCATION WILL BE THE CRESCENT AVENUE TRIANGLE.

Intention of the Committee to Interest Every Organization in the City in Raising Funds to Purchase and Erect the Shaft—Subscriptions for any Amount Will be Received—Blanks to be Distributed

Further progress was made last evening regarding the proposed erection of the soldiers' monument in Plainfield, when the committee, consisting of President W. C. O'Donnell; Treasurer J. F. Buckle; Secretary Frank Smith; George P. Mellick, H C. McVoy and Walter C Dobbins, met to discuss plans, means, etc., for the erection of the monument.

In the first place Mr. Smith was chosen secretary in place of Mr. McVoy, who stated that he found it impossible to attend to the duties of the office. This change was agreed to and then the business of the evening was taken up. Mr. O'Donnell presented a number of photographs and plans of monuments that stand in various parts of the country, and gave approximate figures concerning the cost of each.

In this way the committee was able to determine as to the amount thought advisable to raise. It was finally agreed that at least $10,000 should be secured to erect a suitable monument that would be a credit to the city. Every member of the committee evidenced enthusiasm regarding the project and the scheme is now well under way.

Regarding location there was some talk and it seemed to be the sense of the meeting that the proper place for the monument would be in the triangle in front of the Crescent Avenue church, and if arrangements can be made there is a probability that it will be placed there.

It is the intention of the committee to interest organizations, churches, the schools, and in fact everybody, if possible, in the cause, and owing to the fact that Plainfield is without a work of art of this nature there does not seem to be any good reason why it should not be successful.

The following announcement is made by the committee as a result of last night's meeting:

Headquarters Plainfield Soldiers' Monument Committee.

To the Patriotic, Public Spirited and Peace Loving People of Plainfield:

The undersigned committee, composed of representatives from the Common Council of our city and from the John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, beg your co-operation in their efforts to secure a soldiers' monument, the idea being to erect a monument which will be an adornment to the city, thereby aiding to the artistic beauty of our surroundings.

The following plan is submitted:

1—It is deemed advisable to raise the amount of ten thousand dollars to carry out the plans of the committee.

2—Subscriptions of any amount will be received from individuals, societies, schools, churches or other organizations.

3—All money should be sent as soon as convenient to J. F. Buckle, treasurer, 145 North avenue, and the same will be deposited with the Dime Savings Institution.

4.—It is intended to have prepared at an early date circulars, subscription blanks and forward same to every resident of Plainfield. All sums received will be acknowledged by the treasurer of the fund.

The committee desires the confidence and prompt assistance of every person interested in the good name of our city and desiring to honor those who have brought honor upon us.

W. C. O'Donnell,
J. F. Buckle,
George P. Mellick,
Frank Smith,
H. C. McVoy.

New Trolley Schedule.

The Plainfield trolley cars are again running under twelve minutes headway during the evening. This change will be welcomed by a whole lot of people, who hitherto could walk faster than ride.

DR. FRENCH'S MEMORIAL.

TO HONOR THE MEMORY OF THE LATE LAMENTED ENDEAVORER.

Movement in Which Plainfield is Interested Proposed to Establish and Endow an Industrial Home in Newark

A movement, headed by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Presbyterian church, of Newark, has been started to raise a fund for the building and endowment of an industrial home in that city in memory of the late Rev. Dr. J. C. French. At a meeting of the society last Sunday evening William Russell, Miss Lottie Taylor, Miss Emily Cooper and Miss Emma Baldwin were appointed a committee to forward the movement. The session of the church has approved the plan, and the directors of the Newark Industrial Home, which was founded by Dr. French, and of which he was president at the time of his death, will be invited to lend their aid.

Contributions have already been received from the Plainfield Local Christian Endeavor Union, and Dr. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, president of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, has promised his support. The plan is to raise $50,000 and build a model industrial home in Newark. The thirty one directors of the Newark Industrial Home were hearty supporters of Dr. French, and it is thought that they will give the scheme their earnest support.

WORK OF THE HOSPITAL.

Board of Governors Met Last Night and Discussed Plans.

The board or governors of Muhlenberg Hospital met last night in the Public Library and spent two hours transacting routine business. It is probable that a good part of the time was taken up in discussing the plans for the new building, for the plans were there, but the board refused to give out anything for publication.

The carriage belonging to George VanBoskerck, of 542 West Seventh street, lost one of its rear wheels this morning on Park avenue. The horse was caught before it had run any distance.

BASKET BALL SEASON ENDED IN A VICTORY.

Local Y. M. C. A. Team Badly Defeated a New York Team.

VISITORS ON THE DEFENCE.

AGGRESSIVE TACTICS OF THE LOCAL PLAYERS OVERWHELMING.

The Team From the School of Mines, Columbia College, Were Utterly Unable to Keep Up With the Pace Set By the Association Players—Big Audience There—Score Was 41 to 4.

If the basket ball players of the class of 1900, School of Mines, Columbia College, had a high opinion of their ability in the game, they were grievously disappointed, last evening. The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. ended its season last night by simply overwhelming their collegiate opponents from the School of Mines, throwing goals until they tired of the sport. Plainfield won by a score of 41 to 4. The game was played on the local gymnasium.

For the first three minutes of play it looked like a very exciting game. Long scored for Plainfield, then Smith, of Columbia, who was left unguarded, neatly dropped the ball inside the goal. Another goal for Plainfield followed. Then another, and another, until the spectators wearied of counting them.

The clever little move that the college boys showed to score their first goal seemed to wake up the local players. They play with a snap and vigor that was simply irresistable. The Columbia team played hard and fast but based too much dependence on blocking tactics than on passing.

It was a defensive game that the visitors played or were compelled to play almost from the start. In the first half they had but few chances to try for goals, and in the second none at all. Plainfield played hard for the first half and rolled up a score of 34 to 4. In the second half the local team seemed contented with 9 points and with preventing their opponents from scoring.

There was a large audience present that overflowed the visitors' gallery and crowded all the extra space on the gymnasium floor. Much enthusiasm was shown for the playing of both teams. During the interval between the halves, several of the college boys gave an exhibition of free work on the high bar.

The detail score was as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		COLUMBIA SCHOOL OF MINES.
Long	right forward	Smith, L. B.
F. Moralier	left forward	Smith, B. W.
Egan	centre	Sales
M. Moralier	right guard	Burns

Score—Plainfield, 41; Columbia, 4. Goals from the field—Long (5), E. Moralier (3), Egan (5), Smith (7), B. W. Smith (2). Goals on fouls—Long. Fouls—Plainfield, 2; Columbia, 1. Referee C. E. A. Heywood, of Plainfield. Umpires—A. C. Actor, of New York; L. I. Van Alstyne, of Plainfield. Timekeeper—J. H. Doane. Scorer—F. N. Marcley.

SHOT THE THIEF.

L. M. Hillman Trapped and Killed a Huge 'Possum That Stole Chickens.

For some time the chicken coups on Sherman avenue and West Eighth street, west of Grant avenue, have been suffering from the depredations of some unknown marauder. Judging from the remains it was evident that the thief was a four-footed one, either an opposum or a skunk.

Among the chief sufferers were L. M. Hillman and F. E. Kinsman, both of Sherman avenue. Last week Mr. Hillman set a trap out in the woods behind his home. Saturday night he visited the place and found a huge opposum fast. The animal was shot. It weighed twelve pounds. Now the chickens live in peace one more.

M'CARTHY GETS THE COW

CELEBRATED CASE ENDED BY JUDGE ATWATER'S DECISION.

The Heifer Safely Housed in McCarthy's Barn Last Night—The Litigation Over the Animal Has Been Going on for Months.

After six months of litigation in the courts, the famous calf case, in which James McCarthy and Edward Coughlan were the parties, has come to an end, the true owner having been given possession of the property.

As was told in yesterday's Press Councilman Hetfield, McCarthy's counsel, appeared before Judge Atwater in the District Court at Elizabeth yesterday and made a motion to have the calf returned into his client's possession. W. S. Angleman, Coughlan's lawyer, made a motion for a new trial, but this the court denied, and signed an order for restitution. McCarthy went after the calf last night and now the animal is safely housed in McCarthy's barn

Six month's have passed since McCarthy lost the calf, and during the interval the little calf has grown into a heifer.

BABY IS DRAGGED TO JAIL WITH MOTHER.

A Truly Pitiable Sight Witnessed in City Court.

THE JUDGE WAS UNBENDING

MRS ANNIE HOLMES SENT TO JAIL FOR FORTY DAYS.

The Prisoner Had Been Drinking Heavily and Was Thrown Out of a Wagon Yesterday Afternoon—Mother and Baby Were Both Cut and Bruised—Later They Were Found Wandering About.

They led Mrs. Annie Holmes from her cell in the city jail this morning into the presence of City Judge William N Runyon. Her little child, still a baby in arms, clung to her. Great tears coursed down her grimy cheeks and left their path marked.

"Oh Judge," she sobbed, "Don't send me down today. Think of my little baby" The mite of a child lifted her head, looked at the Judge and then buried her face on her mother's shoulders. Only two weeks ago the mother was before the Judge on the same charge, drunk and disorderly. She then promised to give up drink and to reform so the Judge was lenient. This time she knew what to expect but still she begged for mercy.

"How do you plead?" demanded the Judge.

"Guilty," almost whispered the young woman as she hung her head. "But Judge, think of the child," she cried.

"Forty days in the county jail," and the Judge was stern. "Why didn't you think of the child yourself? You knew what would happen if you came back here again."

The only answer was the sobs of the woman as they led her away, and soon the wails of the infant were blended with them.

Then John Philmore, the grey haired father of the prisoner, stepped to the rail and asked the Judge to make it a fine, saying that they would try to raise it. But the Judge was firm. Annie Holmes was an old offender and needed a salutary lesson.

When Annie Holmes appeared in the court room her head and shoulder were cut and her clothing blood-stained. A horrid gash was to be seen on the child's forehead. Yesterday afternoon, mother and child left the home of Henry Staats, on Johnston avenue, where Mrs. Holmes is employed as house keeper. Mrs. Holmes had been drinking deeply and could hardly sit on the wagon seat.

When they reached Watchung avenue and East Second street, the horse shied at a trolley car and started to run away. Mother and babe were pitched from the wagon. Both were cut and bruished but none of the wounds were serious

Just before 6 o'clock, last evening, Patrolman McCue found Annie Holmes wandering aimlessly about Park avenue. She could not even care for herself, much less the babe. So he locked them up. As the child is too young to be parted from her mother, she will go to jail with her.

NO SOUTH JERSEY PEACH CROP.

Report of Prof. John B. Smith of the State Experiment Station.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 28—Prof. John B. Smith, entomologist of Rutgers College and of the New Jersey State Experiment Station, reports that the south Jersey peach crop is practically destroyed.

"The fruits in all parts of the State at the present time," he says, "are in good condition, except peaches. Plums are first rate. In South Jersey the peaches, especially in young orchards, are all gone. Only in sheltered localities are any left at all. All the early varieties are completely gone. Of the varieties that flower late, there can be found some buds; and in the old orchards where there is plenty of wood, there will probably be found a fair share of blossoms.

"The frost has wiped out all the early vegetation, and will put back vegetables, like peas and other garden truck, fully two and perhaps three weeks in this State."

Church Workers Coming to This City.

Mr. Graff is connected with the Christian church and has preached in many parts of the United States and Canada successfully.

SHALL WE DISPUTE

The Opinions of Scores of Our Fellow Citizens.

Residents of Plainfield, like other American citizens, in making an investment want to be sure of getting the worth of their money. They want to know all the whys and wherefores, and in a direct ratio to the value of the investment they borrow and ponder until satisfied with the collateral. Take an instance in the realm of proprietary articles. If we know of a friend who has been cured, we have some faith in the preparation; if we know of two or three our faith increases. If the cures reach scores, all well-known citizens, and anyone who still maintains that there is nothing beyond ordinary merit in the said preparation can safely be left to the care of his fellow taxpayers. If he wishes to pick a quarrel with them on the question of their judgment or veracity, he has ample opportunity in Plainfield to do so. Begin with this case:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, of No. 86 Summit avenue, says: "I suffered times with a severe pain across the small of my back and in my hips. If I did any lifting or stooping my back became lame and sore, and though I used plasters they only helped me for the time being. I was feeling very badly when I had my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills. They were so highly recommended for troubles like mine that I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. I felt their good effects in a few days, and when I had finished the treatment my back was better and stronger, and I had much more energy to attend household duties. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement, and I am always pleased to recommend them."

REBELS ON THE RUN

Their Rear Guard Puts Up a Hard Fight at Marilao.

AGUINALDO LED HIS FORCES

His Forces Routed However With Heavy Loss—War Department Advices Indicate That Our Total Casualties Were: Killed Twenty-eight and Wounded 212.

Manila, March 28.—A thousand Filipinos, composing the rearguard of the rebel army which is retreating on Malolos, Aguinaldo's headquarters, made a stand yesterday in some strong entrenchments about Marilao, across the Marilao River.

In the engagement six Americans were killed, including three officers, and forty were wounded.

The American forces advanced from Maycauyan, the brigade commanded by Gen. H. G. Otis being on the left of the railroad and Gen. Hale's on the right. They eventually discerned white roofs and steeples among the green trees beyond the river, looking not unlike a Massachusetts village.

The rebels had an unfordable river in front of them and they poured in a fire so effective that it showed they were veterans, probably members of the native militia which the Spaniards organized.

The American artillery, however, put a dramatic end to the battle. Approaching under cover of the bushes, to about sixty yards from the trenches, they emerged upon an open space commanding the town. When the Americans appeared they gave a great yell, and the Filipinos were panic stricken, about a hundred seeking safety in flight, while a white flag was raised by those who were in the trenches, who also shouted "Amigos" (Friends"). Col. Funston, with twenty men of the Kansas regiment, swam across the river to the left of the railroad bridge and captured eighty prisoners with all their arms. The Pennsylvania regiment captured forty prisoners. By this time the right of the Filipinos was demoralized.

The Americans refrained from burning the town and rested there last night.

The United States Philippine Commission proposes to issue a proclamation immediately after the rebel government at Malolos is dispersed, believing that the most effective moment to secure the allegiance of the natives will be after they have received an object lesson of the American power.

Hard Fighting All Day.

Washington, March 28.—The following dispatch was received from Gen. Otis:

"Manila, March 27.

"Adjutant General, Washington—MacArthur holds Maloloa. Severe fighting to-day and our casualties about forty. Insurgents have destroyed bridges, which impeded progress of train and artillery.

"Our troops met the concentrated insurgent forces on northern line, commanded by Aguinaldo in person, and drove them back with considerable slaughter. They left nearly a hundred dead on the field, and many prisoners and small arms were captured. The column will press on in the morning.

"OTIS."

Later advices received by the War Department show that the number of casualties in yesterday's and to-day's fighting was, killed, three officers and twenty-five enlisted men; wounded, nine officers and 203 enlisted men.

STEADY PROGRESS OF OUR MEN.

Clever Work of the Filipinos in the Construction of Trenches.

Manila, March 28.—The Americans have advanced along the line of the Dagupan Railroad, driving the Filipinos from Malinta and Gycanyan, where there were three thousand inhabitants. Last night the brigades of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis and Gen. Hale encamped in the enemy's trenches at Maycauyan and that of Gen. Wheaton at Malinta.

Gen. Wheaton's brigade formed a junction with the remainder of Gen. MacArthur's division at Malinta, and the two marched along the railroad to Maycauyan. This place was fortified, and for three hundred yards from it there were trenches on each side of the track. These were taken possession of by the American troops. The movement of the Americans will be pushed in this direction.

The Filipinos, realizing that the railroad is the crucial line, have constructed row after row of trenches, running diagonally, on both sides of the track at a distance of a few hundred yards apart. This work was designed most intelligently, and has evidently been done under the direction of experts. It represents an enormous amount of labor. Most of the rebel positions are protected by thick earthworks, a majority of them topped with stones and provided with loopholes. Some have sheet-iron roofs.

The day's work of the United States troops consisted of storming the successive trenches. The Filipinos occupying them were completely hidden. The enemy poured a strong fire from every trench until they were disturbed by a flanking volley, when they would disappear into the woods and jungle, only to make a stand at the next line.

The American loss was remarkably small, seven being killed and twenty-five wounded. It is known that the Filipinos were so protected that they suffered little. No dead insurgents were taken by the Americans, and it is estimatedy that the rebel casualties numbered twenty.

The insurgents broke their guns when compelled to abandon them.

The Helena and the army gunboats shelled Malabon and the country beyond, while the Monadnock focused all its batteries upon Paranque for two hours, for the purpose of destroying the military stores there. A great smoke was caused, but as the insurgents are in possession of the town the results of the shelling are not obtainable.

The evacuation of Malabon was a picturesque rout; thousands of men, women and children, loaded with household goods, some with their dearest treasures—fighting cocks—under their arms, poured across the swamps in the early morning.

An exploded caisson at the railroad bridge proved a bar to the Americans.

Ten soldiers of the Oregon regiment while searching for two of those killed earlier in the fighting, walked into the city in the morning and found the place in a condition of chaos. The inhabitants, seeing them, fled in a panic, thinking the American forces were in possession. The Oregonians shot several armed natives and then returned to camp.

The American forces did not occupy Malabon, but are concentrating their strength at Malolos. Malabon is a city of desolation. The American soldiers have been forbidden to enter the place, for fear that natives may be lurking there.

Position of Dewey's Ships.

Washington, March 28.—Admiral Dewey has cabled the Navy Department the situation and positions of the vessels of his fleets as follows:

"Secretary of the Navy, Washington:

"The Olympia and the Oregon, the Monadnock and Monterey, Callao, Manila and the Helena occupying strategic position at Manila Bay. The Boston and Charleston, the Concord and Petrel cruising in the islands to the south. The Baltimore and the Yorktown cruising off Luzon. Have sent Bennington to Hong Kong to dock. The Princeton is at Singapore repairing; propeller is broken. The Nanshan has gone to Guam. Iris will sail shortly for Iloilo with coal. Will dispatch Solace as early as possible.

"DEWEY."

War Department Pleased.

Washington, March 28.—While our army in the Philippines was unable to at once accomplish all that was hoped for when the plan was formed to pen in the insurgents and put a speedy end to the fighting, the War Department is very well pleased with what has been done. The news to-day was gratifying, in that it showed a decrease in the losses to our troops in action and announced an engagement with the Filipinos under the direct command of Aguinaldo.

The object of the operations now in progress is to destroy the army organization of the enemy, and it is hoped that this may be so effectually done as to leave little opportunity for the formation of separate bands to keep up an outlaw warfare. The Department is satisfied that Aguinaldo's army will be destroyed soon, but the difficulties encountered in carrying out the plan of campaign may result in the escape of small bands that may be able to keep up a sort of Indian border warfare for an indefinite time.

GEN. ALGER IN CUBA.

Activity in Pinar del Rio—A Contemplated Uprising.

Havana, March 28.—The bandits near Guanajay, province of Pinar del Rio, are still active, and Gen. Diaz, the Cuban commander in that district, has published a proclamation to the Sixth Army Corps asking the troops to make every effort to effect a speedy termination of the disorder in that province, and, it is said, the bandits will be energetically pursued. The bandit leader was formerly, during the war, the guide of Col. Pedro Delgado of the Cuban army.

It is said that the bandit of Guanajay are probably connected with larger bodies in the provinces of Pinar del Rio and Havana, who have been contemplating an uprising. The uprising in Havana province, it is said, was prevented by the recent sudden death at Havana of their leader.

The bandits across the border of the two provinces, yesterday, stole some horses and cows from the Lago Bernadora estate, near Artemisa and the Cubans, following the trails, found the robbers had gone in the direction of the town of Guanajay, where all trace of them was lost. It is not known whether the bandits are Cubans or Spaniards.

The members of the Seventh Army Corps who belong to the legal profession have formed an association with the object of perpetuating the memory of the friendly associations formed during the war. There were about forty members present when the constitution was adopted.

Gen. Russell B. Alger, the Secretary of War, had a conference with the American Generals at Gov.-Gen. Brooke's headquarters this morning.

Gen. Otis to be Promoted.

Washington, March 28.—Major General Marcus P. Miller, who captured Iloilo and is now in command there, retired yesterday under the age limit. He is 64 years old.

His compulsory retirement leaves a vacancy in the regular army which will probably be filled by the promotion of Gen. Elwell S. Otis, who is now in command at Manila.

Gen. Otis, although a Major General of Volunteers, is only a Brigadier General in the regular army.

Gen. Flagler Dying.

Washington, March 28.—Word was received at the War Department last night that Brig.-Gen. Daniel W. Flagler, Chief of Ordnance, was lying at the point of death in the Hygenia Hotel, Fort Monroe, and was not expected to survive the day. His family is at his bedside, including Mrs. Flagler, Miss Flagler and Capt. C. A. Flagler, corps of engineers. Gen. Flagler was stricken with a severe attack of the grip early last fall and suffered also from rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Col. Egbert's Son Made a Lieutenant.

Washington, March 28.—General Otis cabled Adjutant General Corbin that a son of Col. Egbert, who was killed in the battle at Polo, was a private in his father's regiment.

Gen. Corbin telegraphed this information to President McKinley at Thomasville, and the President ordered that young Egbert be appointed a second lieutenant in his father's regiment.

There May be Two Admirals.

Washington, March 28.—It is learned that Congress unintentionally empowered the President to appoint two Admirals of the Navy.

Besides the act under which Dewey was appointed to that position, Congress passed the Navy Appropriation bill, containing a provision for the appointment of an officer to be an Admiral "by selection and promotion."

This would enable the President to name Sampson for the place, should he desire to do so.

FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE

Remarkable Scheme for Nations Association.

H. L. BOYLE THE FOUNDER.

The Plan Submitted to the Government Provides that Nations to Join an Association, Pay an Assessment and All Disputes to be Settled by the Board of Managers.

Washington, March 28.—Secretaries Long and Alger have received from Mr. Homer L. Boyle, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a proposition to reduce the future chances of international wars to a minimum. Mr. Boyle proposes to form the "International Insurance Association to Prevent Wars." The object is to prevent wars between nations which join it by paying in cash the disputed claims for loss to life or property, as well as a portion of losses incurred by nations in war who are members. The association is to be governed by a board of managers, to consist of one representative from each nation that joins it. The membership fee is not to exceed 4 cents per capita of the population and estimated wealth of the nation. Mr. Boyle has figured out that it would cost the United States $3,000,000 to come into the association. China, which has a much larger population, but a far less per capita wealth, would pay $4,000,000, and it is quite possible that that unhappy country would pay cheerfully this amount to join an institution that would insure it against the rapacity of European governments.

The Board of Managers is to act as a court of claims, and pays its own rewards. Should nations have a dispute over a claim for loss of life or other injury, the Board of Managers would take charge and have four months to adjudicate. At the end of that time a decision could be reached by a majority vote, the board paying over the amount decided upon. If the Association should fail to render a decision and the disputing nations go to war, then the Association would pay each nation 20 per cent. of expenses incurred in fighting.

If a nation should insult another one, the Association would investigate the nature of the affront and call on the insulter to apologize to the insultee. If the insulter refused, then it would formally expel it from the Association, and it would forfeit all moneys paid, with a fine of 1 per cent. of its wealth. If the expelled nation should scoff at being expelled, and peeringly refuse to pay the fine, all the other nations would levy a surtax on all goods imported by them from the offending country.

It is evident Mr. Boyle believes that all questions of international dispute could be settled on a cash basis. His ingenious project has called forth letters of approval from Gov. Pingree, of Michigan, and from Mr. Caleb Perry, the Mayor of Grand Rapids, Mich.

CORNELL CREW CAPTAIN RESIGNS.

Fisher Has a Misunderstanding With Coach Courtney and Will Resign.

Ithaca, N. Y., March 28.—Capt. Schuyler L. Fisher of the Cornell 'varsity crew resigned his place on account of differences between him and Coach Courtney. The captain says that Courtney accused him of showing favoritism in the make-up of the crews now in training.

The trouble arose when Coach Courtney gave positive instructions to the captain to make up a crew of 1901 men, but to leave out Thomas and put Tryon in his place. The coach went into the boat house and a little later came out on the float and, it is said, found Tryon standing there, while Thomas was in the boat. He asked for an explanation, but there was not a reasonable one forthcoming, and he then told Tryon that he would send him out in the pair-oared gig with ex-Capt. Colson, who is assisting in the coaching. Coach Courtney declared, it is said, that Tryon had been practically frozen out of the crew last year, and that he did not propose to have the circumstance repeated this year; that he used every endeavor to prevent favoritism and proposed to stamp upon it wherever he found it.

Inasmuch as Fisher and Thomas are close friends and came to Cornell from the same preparatory school, Capt. Fisher took the coach's words to himself personally. Coach Courtney thought the matter settled, but a little later, was dumfounded to find Tryon in the 1901 boat instead of in the gig with Colson and was informed that it was by the order of the captain. It is an unwritten rule at Cornell that Coach Courtney's word is law in all matters pertaining to the crews.

The Peace Conference.

The Hague, March 28.—The invitations to the peace conference which is to open here on May 18 are still held in the Foreign Office, the Czar not having as yet given the word to issue them. The delay is ascribed to Italy's objection to the Vatican's participation in the conference. The Papal Nuncio here is making frequent visits to the Foreign Office in connection with the matter, but it is not believed that he has had any success.

Queen Wilhelmina is delighted at the prospect of receiving the delegates to the conference and is personally supervising the arangements to give them a most cordial reception. This is regarded as a most welcome auguary of her reign, departing as it does from the historic reserve of the house of Orange.

Ocean Lines' Pigeon Service.

Paris, March 28.—The Figaro says that a carrier pigeon released from a transatlantic steamship on her way to New York has reached its destination. This is the first dispatch of the new carrier pigeon service. The message was addressed to M. Paoli, Commissary of Police, who is now at Nice. The paper adds that the success of the service is assured.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I am thirty-five years of age, by profession a traveling salesman, and being continually on the road, am compelled to eat my meals at all hours and times of the day. The result of these irregular hours for eating was that I had indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation. After eating a meal I would feel all bloated, was constantly belching, had a sour taste in my mouth, and at times, while I was eating, the food would be forcibly ejected from my mouth, placing me in a very embarrassing position when eating with any one. I had violent headaches, was very restless at night, unable to sleep, became yellow as a colored person, the result of being constipated; in fact, my health became such that I was compelled to give up my position. After suffering five years I became discouraged with life until about three months ago, while stopping at Rockland Lake, N. Y., where I had gone for my health, I became acquainted with a professor of medicine of the Yale University, who was stopping at the hotel and who was struck by my miserable appearance and asked me what the trouble was, and I told him. He said to me: "How much have you spent for doctors and medicine?" I said I guess about $500. "Well," he said, "what would you think if I should tell you I can relieve you instantly and cure you in a month?" I told him I would be in the seventh heaven of delight and under lasting obligations to him; but I was afraid that his bill would be more than I could pay. He smiled and said: "Never mind. If you think my bill is too large then you are not under any obligations to pay me." So I said all right, and placed myself under his care. He then went upstairs to his room and came down with a little vial full of brown tablets (Ripans Tabules) and said: "Take one of these after each meal and also one whenever you feel that bloated feeling." After dinner I followed his advice, and for ten minutes after eating felt that bloated feeling; also the desire to vomit, sour belching, etc., when suddenly the feeling began to leave me, and in about a half hour I felt better than I had for six months, and by supper time the relief I had obtained from the tablet was so great that I sat down and ate my first hearty meal for nearly three years. I continued using them for three weeks, my health and color improving every day, and have since had no indigestion; bowels are regular every day. The third week I asked the professor for his bill, which he presented me, and on opening it I was surprised to find that the entire amount was 25 cents. I asked him what he meant and thought he had made a mistake. He said: "No; you owe me 25 cents. In three weeks you have consumed five 5-cent cartons of Ripans Tabules, the greatest and grandest cure that has ever been known for dyspepsia, indigestion and constipation, and you see the result."

ORIGIN OF THE WINDSOR FIRE.

The Unidentified Victims Will Rest in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery.

New York, March 28.—All of the unidentified dead of the Windsor Hotel fire are to rest in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, in a plot 100 feet from the tomb of Washington Irving.

The plot was given free by the president of the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery Association, Samuel Regua, who has instructed Charles Vanderbilt, the undertaker of the Goulds at Tarrytown, to take charge of the remains.

It is expected that the funerals of the unidentified bodies will be held on Wednesday at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue. There will also be services at the cemetery. The New York Central Railroad will transport the bodies free to Tarrytown.

Warren F. Leland asks that subscriptions be started for a monument for the unidentified dead of the fire.

Another name was added to the list of missing to-day, making the total thirty-six. The name was that of Charles Desch, City Solicitor of Seabright, N. J. He had come to New York to meet William A. Heisley, District-Attorney of Monmouth county, N. J., at the Windsor.

The Fire Marshal declined to-day to give any information; but from a man who has aided in the inquiry it was ascertained that a conclusion as to the cause of the fire is about to be reached. Fifteen witnesses, employes and guests chiefly, have testified, and their evidence, it is said, discredits the theory of incendiarism.

The fire, according to the evidence, appears to have started on the second floor of the building, on the Forty-sixth street side, in the Turkish parlor. There were no lace curtains there, but there were some tapestry hangings, and these were set on fire by a lighted match, thrown away by a careless smoker. The report that the fire started in several places simultaneously is not supported by the evidence; rather, it appears that the flames spread in the direction of Fifth avenue, and, reaching the elevator shaft, communicated to the floors above and below. Their appearance on the fourth floor is accounted for by the fact that a window there had been left open (thus creating a draught), while all the windows on the third floor were closed.

It has been shown to the satisfaction of the Marshal that the protection against fire was all that could have been required of the proprietor. There was a complete equipment of new hose, in addition to buckets on every floor and landing; the latter, it was testified, were always kept filled. Hands grenades were on each floor also, and certain other means were provided for extinguishing a fire. That all were not made use of effectively, the witnesses said, was owing to the fact that nearly every one in the hotel was either at the front windows or on the sidewalks, looking at a parade. Also, the alarm came with great suddenness, and practically everybody was panic-stricken.

A Blow for Tammany.

New York, March 28.—A number of officeholders who were discharged by Tammany heads of departments when that party came into control of municipal affairs with Mayor Van Wyck obtained from Justice Scott, in the Supreme Court, a writ of peremptory mandamus commanding the Commissioners who discharged them to reinstate them.

Not only are the men who were discharged to make vacancies for Tammany men to be reinstated, but Justice Scott has also issued in each case writs of mandamus which command the various heads of departments to make provision for paying to the men who were wrongfully discharged their salaries from the date of such discharge.

The men who obtained the writs of peremptory mandamus asserted that they had been discharged in violation of the Civil Service law. Justice Scott has sustained this contention, for he has granted the writs, but has not as yet filed an opinion reciting his reasons for so doing.

Fayne Moore Released.

New York, March 28.—Fayne Strahan Moore, who was accused with her husband, William A. E. Moore, of having worked the badger game on Martin Mahon in their rooms at the Hotel Grenoble on Nov. 4, 1898, was discharged yesterday on her own recognizance by Justice Fursman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. The Moore woman is not yet at liberty, however, as there is still pending against her a charge of grand larceny in the second degree. But the bail for that offence has been fixed at only $1,000, and her lawyers said this morning that they would have surety for that amount before to-night.

Venezuelan Revolt Put Down.

New York, March 28.—The Venezuelan consul in his city received the following cable dispatch from Caracas:

"The Government troops, under Garcia, Gomez and Guevara, have met and completed destroyed Guerra. The disturbance is practically ended."

The dispatch contains no information as to the time or place at which the action which resulted in Guerra's defeat took place. From previous information which Consul-General Delfino had received, however, it was said at his office that the battle probably occurred on March 23, somewhere along the banks of the Orinoco River in the State of Ciudad Bolivar.

ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

Addicks Leader in Delaware Legislature Arrested.

RESULT OF THE DEADLOCK

Allegation is Made That Legislator Davis Promised to Raise a Mortgage for Another Representative If He Would Vote for Addicks for Senator—Warrants for Other Legislators.

Wilmington, Del., March 28.—Mark L. Davis, a Union Republican leader of Sussex county, who represented his district in the lower House of the State Legislature, has been arrested at Dover on the charge of attempted bribery. He came up from his Milton home to meet State Detectives McVey and Witsil, who served the warrant on him at the depot, and then took him to the office of Magistrate Hutton where Davis waived a hearing for a preliminary examination at 11 o'clock to-day. State Senator Abbott furnished bail in the sum of $1,000.

Davis's arrest followed charges lodged wih Attorney-General White on Friday of last week to the effect that several weeks before the Legislature's session came to a close Davis approached Representative Lattomus and offered to raise a $7,000 mortgage against his (Lattomus's) farm if he would vote for John Edward Addicks for United States Senator.

Mr. Lattomus, it is said, replied that he could not even consider such a proposition. He said he would not vote for Addicks under any consideration and it was no use to try to get his vote by any such means. Then he alleges Davis proposed that the money would be given to his (Lattomus's) wife and she could lift the mortgage. All he would have to do would be to vote for Addicks. Mr. Lattomus still refused, and said he would not have anything to do with Addicks, and could not vote for him under any circumstances.

The information was the most positive regarding the alleged attempted bribery that the State authorities had received and the warrant was accordingly issued. Attorney-General White this morning announced that several more warrants were in the possession of the State detectives, but said that they would not be served until the case of Mr. Davis was disposed of in some way.

The withholding of the warrants is construed by the Addicks men as being an indication that the Attorney General's evidence is not sufficiently positive to convict Mr. Davis, and that the arrest of other men under suspicion would be useless from a legal point of view.

The leaders of both Republican factions of the State are discussing the arrest of Mr. Davis with some degree of surprise. He was the leader in the House and was therefore at the head of every political movement.

Some persons have declared their belief in Davis's innocence. They believe that the friends of Mr. Addicks offered monetary inducements to members of the Legislature to vote for him in his Senatorial fight, but they do not think that Mr. Davis was the agent who was to distribute the money.

DESPERATE GANG OF BURGLARS.

Rob a Power House at Mayfield, Pa.—One of Them Killed and Two Wounded.

Scranton, Pa., March 28.—The power house of the Carbondale Traction Company at Mayfield was entered at midnight Monday by five masked men, who sandbagged the engineer and fireman and shot the watchman, William Brokenshire, in the foot. They then secured the men with ropes and ransacked the office, taking the box containing the day's receipts. Brokenshire managed to free himself, and fired several shots at the thieves, without effect.

Patrick Dempsey, the engineer, and Frank Coggins, the fireman, were beaten till insensible. The box which the robbers carried away is estimated to have contained between $500 and $1,000.

After the burglars had completed their work at the car barn they fled to Carbondale, where they boarded a freight train on the Jefferson branch of the Erie, intending evidently to escape into Southern New York. At Ararat Summit the trainmen discovered them and put them off after some trouble. The robbers fired on the trainmen, but without effect.

The shots and shouts aroused Frank Leeks, the keeper of a hotel at that point, and he came out to investigate.

The thieves saw him and fired upon him. He returned to his hotel, and securing a double-barrelled shotgun and a revolver, came out again. He came upon the desperadoes, and, opening fire, killed one of the men and seriously wounded two others. Both the wounded were captured.

Leeks escaped injury, although the burglars unloaded their revolvers at him. They are supposed to be of the same gang which held up and robbed the night men at the Sayre car barn two weeks ago.

One of the wounded men said he was James Kelly of Ashley, Pa., and the other said he was John Cummings of Logansport, Ind. They were removed to Carbondale Hospital. Their condition is critical.

Students May Strike.

Harvard, Conn., March 28.—Students of Trinity College have presented a petition asking the faculty to abolish the rule that requires a student to testify against his fellows or be suspended.

Rejection of the petition will result in a refusal to recite.

The freshmen outwitted the sophomores and held their supper uninterrupted, and twenty sophomores got them out of bed later and made them recite speeches. The faculty got the names of three hazers and is trying to force them to incriminate the others.

Los Angeles, March 28.—Robert J. Burdette, the humorist, and Mrs. Clara B. Baker were married at Pasadena, where they will live. Mr. Burdette is pastor of a Presbyterian church.

SWIFT CONTRADICTS EAGAN.

Vice-President of Swift & Co. Testifies Before Beef Inquiry Board.

Washington, March 28.—The Army Board of Inquiry met in this city yesterday to hear further testimony regarding army beef.

Edwin C. Swift, vice-president of Swift & Co. of Chicago, was a witness. Replying to Col. Davis, the Recorder, he said he represented Swift & Co. in the making of contracts for the refrigerated beef to be provided the troops in Cuba and Porto Rico. He came to Washington at the time the contract was to be made, because he was informed that Gen. Eagan wanted to see some officer of the company.

"All our discussion," he remarked, "was that we were to furnish beef to the seaport cities and towns. Our conversation was based on our having refrigerators built at these points on shore. It was agreed that the refrigerators should be sufficient for a seventy-two hours' supply. That was, however, to be the maximum time for which we were to be responsible for the good condition of the beef in the refrigerator and twenty-four hours outside of the refrigerator, with proper care. I told him that we could not undertake to deliver beef away from the coast. This was because of the character of the country. The General said he would expect the beef rations to be delivered to the agents of the Government daily."

"Does the clause in the contract express your understanding of it?" asked Col. Davis.

"My understanding was that it was to be good seventy-two hours after delivery from the ship."

The witness was next examined by Major Lee, counsel for Gen. Miles.

"Was any reference made to any process by which the meat was to be kept in good condition?" he asked.

"There was only the slightest reference to the subject; he mentioned no name of any process."

"Did he ask you if you had any process by which you could keep the beef in good condition?"

"He did not."

Major Lee questioned the witness about the specifications of the contract with the War Department, particularly as to whether it specified that the beef should keep for twenty-four hours after delivery to the troops or seventy-two hours after delivery from the ships.

"At the time I thought Gen. Eagan understood the contract as I did, but in view of his testimony I should say Gen. Eagan is now mistaken," Mr. Swift explained.

"He says the part about twenty-four hours crept in as a clerical error," continued Major Lee.

"That can't be so," emphatically responded Mr. Swift. "That clause was put in there because of my objection to what preceded it."

ADMIRAL SCHLEY'S PROMOTION.

Board Considers His Record and Ask for Further Papers in the Case.

Washington, March 28.—The professional record of Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley was considered yesterday by a Board of Rear Admirals appointed to determine whether the officers promoted to that grade through the operation of the naval organization law were mentally, morally and professionally fitted to perform the duties of such high rank. The Board consists of Rear Admirals McNair, Howell and Howison, the senor officers of the grade.

As a rule the examinations of Commodores for advancement are perfunctory affairs, but in Schley's case the board could not very well overlook the numerous references in the official files of the Navy Department to his conduct off Santiago. Some papers concerning his command of the flying squadron were read at the meeting of the Board, and this was followed by a discussion which resulted in a practical agreement that, in view of the recommendation of Secretary Long to President McKinley that Schley be advanced six numbers for his services in the war, and the subsequent indorsement by the President in sending to the Senate Schley's nomination for advancement, the Board could not well decline to certify that Schley was mentally, morally and professionally fitted to perform the duties of a Rear Admiral.

MAY ARRAIGN GEN. EAGAN.

Talk in Washington of Again Courtmartialing Gen. Eagan.

Washington, D. C., March 28.—The beef court of inquiry is again in Washington. tI is believed the investigation has nearly come to a close, and that in a few days the court will announce it will hear no more witnesses, and will devote itself to a discussion of the testimony, preliminary to preparing a report.

It is generally believed here, that, as the result of the findings, late Commissary General Eagan will again be court-martialed. Until the report is made public, however, it would be premature for Gen. Eagan to demand a trial. There are various points as to the manner in which he issued certain orders, which, to the uninitiated public, would seem to require explanation, and it is not impossible that the court may accede to a desire of Gen. Eagan to make a statement. It is not known that he has made such a request.

Negro Strikers in Arms

Birmingham, Ala., March 27.—Two hundred and fifty negro miners have armed themselves at the Dolomite mines and are threatening riot because three of their number were arrested on Saturday night for creating a disturbance.

Will Calvin, a negro, was shot fatally by infuriated blacks because he allowed himself to be arrested without resistance.

Sheriff O'Brien and a dozen deputies have gone to the scene to disperse the negroes, who have gathered in great crowds. Force will be used if the negroes refuse to disperse.

All mine work has been suspended, and the whites are locked in their houses, heavily armed.

Ambassador from Mexico Arrives.

Washington, March 28.—Dr. Manuel Azpiroz, the Mexican Ambassador to the United States, has arrived here. He is accompanied by his two daughters, the eldest a widow 22 years old, and the other 13 years old, whose name is Belen de Azpiroz. Both are pretty. Senor Barron, the secretary, also accompanies the Ambassador.

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

The Philadelphia Record gives the following very clear definition of trusts as amenable to the law: "It is not because of combinations under State charters that trusts become amenable to the law, but because of the monopoly which they are designed to establish. It makes no difference what corporate form the monopoly may assume—whether acting under a State franchise, or in pursuance of a secret agreement, or without disguise as an unopposed agency in production and trade—it is in all cases under the ban of the law as being in restraint of trade. The thing to be protected from invasion is the absolute liberty of all citizens to produce and distribute commodities under conditions of unrestricted competition. Where this liberty is interfered with, the Courts invariably denounce the interfering agency as a public menace, against which public policy and the common law design protection."

One of the deplorable results of the beef scandal is an article in a daily newspaper printed at Caracas, Venezuela, which calls attention to the poisonous food that is given to the American Army. "The Yankee provisions," it says, "are replete with poisonous adulterations and are digging a grave for every consumer. The butter, lard, codfish, cheese, ham and everything imported from the United States is a menace to health."

Though a pronounced Republican, Hon. Frank Bergen means to strike an average on the dinner question. He says he shall take in both the Croker $10 and the Bryan $1 dinner He considers that that will be just $5.50 each. Considering the good he will derive from communion with the interrified he thinks this cheap.

An excited New York paper declares that the trolley cars of the metropolis are run so recklessly that it makes one think that an Indian is at the motor. The scalping of a negro by a trolley car the other day lends substance and truth to the statements.

When we get through with Filipinos in this little unpleasantness that is now on the Hon. Tom Reed will have turn his mind to mathematics again. Unless there is a change very soon we expect that each and every Filipion will cost us at least $2 11.

Our esteemed friend, Mr. James E Martine, will be among the Jerseymen who will hie themselves to New York on the night of the dollarites' banquet to attend that great event and absorb some of the wisdom that will be expounded there.

Alger has reached Havana on his tour of inspection and has been welcomed by a salute of fifteen guns.

VANDERBILT-FAIR.

Not for a long time has society been so much interested in any event as in the marriage of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Miss Virginia Fair, on April 4. As the daughter of the late Senator Fair, of California, the bride will have about $5,000,000 when the estate is settled. Mr. Vanderbilt has no fortune of his own, but will, it is said, inherit about $50,000,000.

But we must remember it is the duty of a soldier to obey commands no matter how disagreeable they may be

Assemblyman Squire, of Union, was one of the most useful members of the last House. The people need him in the Assembly of 1900.—New York Press.

The Press should be more explicit in its appliance of the word "useful." Surely, not useful to the people.

With its present and prospective trolley facilities Elizabeth is in a fair way to thrive in a prosperous manner for several years to come until she ranks among the very first cities of the metropolitan district.

While the eloquent preacher, Dwight L. Moody, was exhorting a San Francisco audience on Saturday to show charity to criminals a thief stole his overcoat. The thief must have had confidence in Mr. Moody.

Instead of twisting the British lion's tail and making him roar our new Ambassador, Mr. Choate, tickles him under the chin and makes him laugh. Either result keeps the Americans in good humor.

The cent a-word advertising column of The Daily Press is booming as it never boomed before. It is one of the many indexes that prove this paper the most popular in Plainfield.

The New York Tribune refers to our own Roger Franklin Murray as "Murphy." Certainly it cannot be because he was so green to Legislative ways.

Hereafter when we refer to a person as coming from colonial stock, who knows but what he may be a Porto Rician, a Cuban or even a Filipino?

Bulwer says that when a person is down in the world an ounce of help is better than a pound of preaching And nothing was ever truer.

The last Congress passed 1,473 new laws. But there were over 18,000 measures introduced during the session.

If all that we hear is really so, public office in the New Jersey Legislature is a trust that pays big dividends.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Perhaps Roger Franklin Murray has killed himself politically because of his defiance of overpowering corporate interests in the legislature. Well, if such proves to be the case, it is a political demise that is no discredit to the Plainfield statesman.—Plainfield Daily Press.

Perhaps it means that Roger Franklin Murray will be sent back to Trenton for a third term to perfect and carry through his bill for the regulation of telephone companies—a measure admirable in its general purposes, but which failed because of defects in detail which it will take time and careful study to remedy.—New York Tribune.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Though this is recognized as the worst week in the year for patronage of theatres, it being Holy Week, the opening performance of the Sawtelle Dramatic Company in Music Hall last night was attended by a large audience. This was due to a great extent to the excellent impression that the company made on the local amusement world when they were here last season. Then they had a company that gave satisfaction at every performance; this season the company is even better than it was last. The opening bill was "Dangers of a Great City." It is a melo-drama typical of the metropolis, and contains all the dramatic artifices and devices that appeal to the amusement and pleasure of the audience. In the character of "Ruth Fielding" Miss Jessie Sawtelle assumed the leading feminine role and impersonated it in a pleasant, capable manner. In the role of 'Edmund Vaughn" J. Al. Sawtelle gives the character a quiet, sympathetic impersonation, though it can scarcely be said that it allows Mr Sawtelle's dramatic abilities sufficient scope. Miss Belle Sawtelle portrayed the part of the heiress whose hand was sought by the villian—first for money and then for love—but who was desperately in love with the here who had to stand all manner of persecution and punishment until at last he was vindicated. The rest of the cast was capable. The performance is supplemented with a number of clever specialities. First of all comes "Little Queen Mab." She is quite the cleverest little actresses that has ever appeared in this city. She sings her songs and dances her fancy steps with true dramatic instinct and carries herself in a saucy, piquant manner that makes her a favorite from the start. In the singing of the illustrated song "The Moth and the Flame," there was a local interest in it by reason of the authorship. The song, which is very pretty in both words and music, was written by George Taggart, formerly of Plainfield, but now connected wirh the staff of The Dramatic Mirror. George Summers was funny in both his parts in the piece and in his specialties. Whenever he is on the stage there was a laugh coming. Matinees will be given every afternoon. The attraction tonight is "On the Hudson."

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

It is a peculiar fact that there is hardly a cakewalk held in this section that is not termed the State championship cakewalk. According to the notices that are to be seen, there have been at least a dozen State championships in cakewalking decided in Plainfield since the first of the year.

* * * * *

The numerous rains of the past month have caused quite a serious state of affairs in South Plainfield. The heavy rainfall has caused a decided rise in the level of the ground water at that place, and, as a result, the cellars of most of the houses there are flooded with water from a depth of from one to six inches. In a few cases, the water is reported to be eight inches deep. There is no apparent way to get rid of the present difficulty except to wait for the water to abate.

* * * * *

An amusing incident occurred at one of the local churches in the course of the sermon last Sunday morning. In one part of the sermon the clergyman gave an illustration in which he remarked, "I have a good boy and I have a bad boy." Now in one of the front seats of the church were the two little sons of the pastor. When they heard the remark, they turned to each other and shook their little fingers, whispering under their breath, "It's you, it's you." There was a subdued smile in the congregation, and the full force of the preacher's remark was somewhat lost.

But for every customer whom we disappoint we serve twenty others who ask for and receive reliable goods. The people of this city are fast learning that we have one of the best Lining Departments to be found anywhere.

LADIES' TAILOR-MADE SUITS.

We of course make no pretense of showing a large line of Ladies' Suits. We do, however, pick out the choicest things from here and there—the result, Quality, not Quantity. For instance, we have Suits at 9.98 made of Venitian Suiting with Satin-lined Jacket in a variety of shades that sells for 12.00 in some places. Another in Black Cheviot, just as desirable—same price. Better and more elaborately finished suits to $22.00. All are equal to the best custom work.

Both cases broke out last week. The houses have been quarantined and every effort made to stop the spread of the disease. Sandford Staple's child was taken first, and now it has got into George Huff's family.

Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, gives one of the councils popular entertainments in the Hall tomorrow night. No doubt the council and their friends will spend a very pleasant evening. The entertainment will be followed by a dance given by the council to its friends.

BRAVE AS ANY MAN.

WHAT AN AMERICAN WOMAN DID UNDER THE FLAG IN PERU.

With the Stars and Stripes and Her Courage She Kept Back the Peruvian Troops Who were Seeking Persons Protected by the Consul.

Mrs. Lucinda B. Trevitt, widow of Dr. William Trevitt, died recently, at the Home for the Aged, where she had lived for the past four years.

She was a remarkable woman, being distinguished by a high intellectual and Christian character. In 1858 when Dr. Trevitt was American Consul at Callao, Peru, an incident happened which showed her bravery in most trying circumstances.

At that time, as there had frequently been before and since, a revolution was in progress, and some Americans who had participated in the uprising sought an asylum at the American Consulate.

For three days they were concealed in the attic of the Consul's residence, when the Government authorities learned of their whereabouts, and troops were sent to take them.

The captain of the troops went to the rear door and met Dr. Trevitt, who was unarmed, at the head of the stair. The doctor grappled with the captain, and in attempting to secure his sword four of his fingers were almost completely severed from his hand.

He secured the sword, or rather, cavalry sabre, and is yet in the possession of the family. The captain retired from the house after making due apology to him.

While this incident was being enacted in the rear of the house a still more extraordinary one was in progress in the front, where the troops were trying to force their way into the house.

Dr. Trevitt's secretary, Mr. Rand, of New York, now dead, attempted to stop them, and one of them struck him in the mouth with the butt end of his gun, knocking in his teeth. He fell back into the arms of Mrs. Trevitt, who had secured an American flag and was trying to spread it over the steps.

While supporting the wounded secretary she managed to spread the flag over the steps, and then she dared the soldiers to cross it. Appalled by the woman's determination and bravery, the troops retired and made no further effort to molest the prisoners, who were subsequently hurried on board an American ship and brought to America.

The United States sustained the action of Dr. Trevitt when the Peruvian Government complained of his action.—Ohio State Journal.

HEARD HIS OWN FUNERAL SERVICE.

Passed Quietly Away After His Strange Request Was Granted.

The Nebraska State Journal says that on Saturday preceding his death, Prof. George McKinnon sent for the Rev. C. M. Sheppherd. As the minister entered the house he saw that Mr. McKinnon was very low, but desiring to cheer him up, he spoke in a hearty way. They talked together for some time. Finally Professor McKinnon said:

"I have sent for you to hold my funeral services."

The minister was somewhat shaken by the words, but he said:

"Why, you are not going to die, my friend."

"Yes, I am, and I prefer listening to the reading of the Word, before my death, and to the prayers, as I think they will do me more good," was the response.

He would not accept a negative answer, and the minister took the Bible, and in the presence of the relatives read a chapter and prayed. The service was frequently broken by the exclamations of contentment which were uttered by the sick man. Having suffered so long he seemed glad to give up trying to bear his pain longer. There was a smile of supreme peace on his face when the prayer of the minister ended.

It was one of the most impressive services ever conducted, and Mr. McKinnon said he was ready to die when it was over.

He lived for five days after the services, dying peacefully Wednesday morning.

Digestion Defies Hypnotism.

Several Ann Arbor medical students challenged Santanelli, the hypnotist, to a peculiar experiment. In his week's stay here he has constantly claimed to be able to control the digestive organs of his subjects while they are under his hypnotic influence.

This the medics doubted, and to this final trial they challenged him. He accepted. One of his men was taken to a restaurant and given a full meal, after which he was hypnotized, with directions not to digest the food given him.

Twenty-four hours were allowed to elapse, and that evening a doctor was called and he was awakened. The attendants attempted to empty his stomach with a stomach pump, but was unable to do so. Then the patient was given strong emetics, but nothing could be brought from his stomach, indicating clearly that the food had been duly digested. The young medics are jubilant over the apparent success of their scheme.—Detroit Tribune.

A Great Cathedral.

Canterbury Cathedral is the largest one in England. Its extreme length is 545 feet, and that of St. Paul's, London, 512 feet. Salisbury has the highest spire in England, its altitude being 404 feet.

Wallace—Do you think electricity will be much in use in the next war?

Ferry—In the next war? Why, the Spaniards are winning most of their battles with it right now.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Naturally.

"Mamma," said the little girl at the flower show, who had absorbed during the evening a glass of lemonade, a quantity of cider and some grape juice, "I wish you would buy me a drink of water. I want something to unthirst me."

Cradles Are Out Of Date.

And already the old time cradle is a curio—a thing of the past. Babies are as plentiful as ever, to be sure, but the baby of to-day does not go swinging in his cradle. His tiny majesty, without being consulted as to his preference in the matter, is put into a stationary crib of brass or enameled iron, a glittering and high-priced affair, but it does not rock. Rocking a baby is tabooed by the wise mothers of to-day. Physicians have told them that the motion stimulates the nerve centres and keeps the little one's brain too active, causing it to develop at the expense of the body, and the petted and precocious child later on becomes the dull and stunted man. So much for theory. These grave doctors might go a step further and give Washington, Lincoln and Webster as examples of the pernicious effect of the cradle in history. But they do not: they charitably leave posterity to make the comparison between these pygmies and the present and coming race of intellectual giants whose brains were never rocked.

THE ANCESTRAL CRADLE.

Our great-grandmothes thought it impossible to raise a baby without a cradle, and they kept it rocking most of the day. But they did not lose much time at it, as they sat with one foot on the rocker while their hands were busy with sewing, knitting or some other useful employment. When the mother was obliged to leave an older child was put in the foot of the cradle and rocked and sang to the baby. Children even grew so fond of the cradle that when a child several years old was "phthisicy" or otherwise in poor health the footboard sometimes had to be knocked out and the cradle lengthened in order to accommodate its growing limbs. Even now, when the cradle is consigned to the garret, the baby in its little brass bed loves to see some other person rocked if it cannot be, and cries every time the rocking chair stops, but if mamma or nurse continue the motion baby goes quietly to sleep.

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, when asked what she thought about it, said: "There is a fad against rocking babies, the theory being held by many persons that the brain of a baby, being somewhat soft, is unduly jarred by the rocking of cradle, leaving it, perhaps, permanently injured. My own opinion, however, is in favor of the old-fashioned cradle with wooden rockers. My reason for this is that it gives the baby a certain amount of jarring that is stimulating to the circulation and restful to the muscles. Let an adult for one hour be in the position of a new baby, entirely unable to turn over, held in one position by carefully tucked in bedclothes, and then let him say whether he would not welcome any jar which would relieve the blood stasis. If such discomfort can eventuate from one hour of absolute stillness in one position, think what it must be for the child which, born of a healthy and active mother, is condemned to lie still on its back or on its side for two or three hours. I believe in activity for every part of a little body. Motion means growth. My heart always aches for the child of whom I hear the report: 'He's as good as can be; he never asks to be taken up, but just lies and looks around.' The medical mind discerns in this the tendency to rachitas.

BABY'S CRIB OF TODAY.

"As far back as twenty-seven years ago, when I studied in Boston, there was a crusade preached against rocking cradles, and I took the rockers off the ancestral cradle for one of my own children. But when my grandchildren appeared I commended the cradle. I had learned better."

MANNER IN WHICH YOUNG MEN ARE ASSISTED AT COLUMBIA.

Students Given Employment and Thereby Enabled to Get Through College—A Committee Appointed to Find Employment for Those Who Need it.

Year by year the number of students in the colleges of the country who are self-supporting increases. The many things which a student can do in his spare hours, and the various societies that aid students, make this possible. In former years Yale was called "the rich man's college," and was considered an institution at which no poor student could work his way through. This has been all changed, and the number of self-supporting students is proportionately as large at Yale as at any other university except those in the cities.

It is to these latter that the poor student is most apt to go. They offer many more advantages than do the others. In a town where the college is the great institution of the place there are hundreds of opportunities of tutoring, translating, or acting as amanuensis. So needy students flock to Columbia College in New York city, and the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. In Columbia and the City College there are committees on aid to the students. These committees either directly lend money to impecunious students, taking their notes, payable so many years after graduation, or find suitable employment for them. The student hands in his name and states what employment he is capable of working at, and as soon as a place is heard of the student is notified. Prof. Kemp, who is Chairman of the Committee on Aid at Columbia, was recently asked about the ways and means employed by conscientious but poor students who work their way through Columbia.

"Every year," he said, "about ten per cent. of the students apply for aid. The majority are those who are taking post-graduate courses, but there are many undergraduates. We generally find places for them which pay enough to keep the wolf from the door.

Of course we cannot do much to help the freshmen and sophomores, for they are not capable enough, but we generally find congenial employment for the post-graduates. One of them spent his last vacation in Europe as a companion to some boys. During the last election one of the political organizations hired sixty of the students to watch the polls, at from three to five dollars a day. We obtained employment for others as detectors of illegal registrators.

"Most of the boys make their living by tutoring. We have any number who prepare young men for college in the classics and sciences. Most of these students we never hear of. They apparently studiously avoid us, as do those who obtain work on Saturdays in the retail stores. We can, at a moment's notice, supply students who will translate any letter written in a modern language and many small downtown firms have the students go to their offices on mail days.

"We supply lecturers on scientific subjects from among the students and a few have given such lectures, explaining the magic lantern pictures, which I lend them, before large audiences, for which they receive reasonable rates. Others take classes of boys out on Saturday, explaining the botany and geology of the metropolitan district. A great many act as book agents and some few are draughtsmen. In this way, we obtained between $4,000 and $5,000 worth of employment last year for needy students. We were, however, unable to help thirty-five out of 169 applicants. But these figures, in addition to the students who do not apply to us, show the great number of students working their way through college.

"But this is but one branch of our work. We find cheap, clean rooms, with respectable people for the students, and helped over fifty in that way during this month. Those students, bringing letters from the committee, have free medical advice at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Every year we give scholarships, entitling the winners to free tuition, to 10 per cent. of the class. So, you see, a poor student can go through college, if he is but willing to work, just as well as the opulent one."—New York Sun.

Compressed Air Painting.

Car painting by compressed air is being tried on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railroads, says the Engineering News. The yard is well supplied with air pipes, and the barrel of specially prepared paint is mounted on a hand truck so that it can be moved to any part of the yard. The air line consists of 100 feet of one-inch heavy hose; the paint suction hose of 50 feet of ½-inch heavy hose. The barrel is equipped with a float of pine wood with 4-inch hole in the center. Over the hole is a small hose-bearing tower, used as a support and hose regulator, insuring a uniform feed of paint. This device is light in weight, and can be readily carried to the top of a box car for spraying the roof.

The time for carefully spraying a box car is thirty minutes; to employ a man to follow with a long-handled 8-inch whitewash brush, thirty minutes additional, making labor cost one hour per box car each coat. To coat a coal car of 60,000 pounds capacity takes twenty minutes for each coat including the time of two men. This road is also using a device for spraying on paint for the lettering, which, for covering uniformly, is considered a decided improvement over the stencil brushes, and will lead to a great saving in the wear and tear of stencil plates.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Deidesheim. Großes Aufsehen erregt die plötzliche Suspendirung zweier langjähriger städtischer Beamter, des Stadtschreibers und des Stadteinnehmers, vom Amte, die auf Veranlassung des Untersuchungsrichters am Landgerichte Frankenthal erfolgte. Das Bezirksamt Neustadt und das Rentamt Dürkheim lassen diese Stellen einstweilen verwalten. Wie verlautet, sollen die Vergehen der Beiden wegen der Verwaltung reicher städtischer Stiftungen ausnehmend gut bezahlten Beamten darin bestehen, daß sie mehrere Jahre lang ihre gesetzmäßigen Gemeindeumlagen in der Umlageliste zu niedrig eintrugen.

Landau. Der in glänzenden Vermögensverhältnissen lebende ledige Großkaufmann August Eißenhardt, Mitinhaber der Engrosfirma Nikolaus Eißenhardt, erhängte sich im Taubenschlag.

Neustadt. Bei dem Bahnübergang Biebermühle wurde der Machhändler Scherer aus Höhmühlbach mit seinem Gefährt vom Personenzug erfaßt. Scherer wurde getödtet und der Wagen zertrümmert. Das Pferd blieb unbeschädigt.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Nach einer vom städtischen statistischen Amt aufgestellten Berechnung hat die Bevölkerung Stuttgarts am Ende des Monats Dezember 172,474 Personen betragen, was einer Zunahme von nahezu 9 Prozent gegen die bei der letzten Volkszählung ermittelten Bevölkerung gleichkommen würde.

Bieberach. Von Bubenhand wurde dieser Tage an einem 3000 Liter haltenden Bierfasse der Spund herausgeschlagen, so daß der gesammte Inhalt verloren ging. Des Thäters konnte man nicht habhaft werden.

Bühlingen. Hier ist Nachts die Mechanische Weberei der Firma Held u. Teufel ein Raub der Flammen geworden. Der Schaden ist beträchtlich.

Freudenstadt. Die hiesige Bürgerschaft trifft umfassende Vorbereitungen für das in diesem Jahre stattfindende 300jährige Jubiläum der Stadt, welches seine besondere Weihe durch den Besuch des Königs und der Königin am zweiten Tage der Festlichkeiten (historischer Festzug) bekommt.

Heilbronn. Eine sonderbare Lagerstätte hatte sich ein Mann ausgesucht, welchen man bei Anbruch des Tages neulich auf einem hiesigen Holzlagerplatz zwischen zwei Holzstößen liegend und bis auf das Hemd entkleidet auffand. Derselbe befand sich bereits in halberstarrtem Zustande und war daher nicht vernehmungsfähig. Er wurde in das Krankenhaus überführt. Den Kleidern nach zu schließen, die sich in nächster Nähe vorfanden, gehört der Unbekannte den besseren Ständen an.

Trossingen. Einen kräftigen Appetit entwickelte letzthin ein Bahnarbeiter in einer hiesigen Wirthschaft. Derselbe verzehrte in Folge einer Wette fünf Portionen Schinken und sieben schwarze Pfefferwürste nebst dem nöthigen Brod dazu und hatte dadurch seine Wette glänzend gewonnen, so daß der Verlierende die ganze Zeche bezahlen mußte.

Ulm. Unser heimischer Dichter Adolf Wechßler feierte seinen 70. Geburtstag. Der Jubilar empfing zahlreiche Glückwünsche von Nah und Fern.

Baden.

Baden-Baden. Nachdem das Rennprogramm pro 1899 genehmigt, ist es nicht uninteressant, einige statistische Angaben kennen zu lernen, welche von dem stetigen Wachsen der Geldpreise überzeugen. Im Jahre 1864, also sechs Jahre seit dem Bestehen der internationalen Rennen, wurden 76,500 Francs als Preise verausgabt, welche sich im Jahre 1869 auf 110,500 Francs steigerten. Eine Folge des deutsch-französischen Krieges war es wohl auch, daß sich das Renn-Komite zu einer Reduzirung der Preise veranlaßt fühlte, wahrscheinlich des geringen Fremdenbesuchs wegen. So betrugen zum Beispiel die Rennpreise pro 1875 nur 14,400 Mark. Im Jahre 1880 steigerten sich dieselben wieder zu einer Höhe von 73,500 Mark und im Jahre 1894 waren es 142,000 Mark; 325,000 Mark wurden im Jahre 1895 und 400,000 Mark im Jahre 1897 an Preisen verausgabt. Im vergangenen Jubiläumsjahre waren es nicht weniger als 500,000 Mark. Dieses Jahr werden 450,000 Mark zur Vertheilung gelangen.

Konstanz. Die seit 1799 aufgehobene Benediktiner-Abtei auf der Insel Reichenau soll demnächst wieder erstehen, indem sich der Erzbischof von Freiburg bei der Regierung um Zulassung einer Benediktiner-Kolonie (wahrscheinlich aus der österreichischen Beuroner Kongregation) in die genannte Abtei, deren Kirche das Grab Karls des Dicken enthält, bemüht hat.

Mannheim. In Seckenheim mißhandelten sechs Burschen den Tagelöhner Robert Degen von Rheinsheim in bestialischer Weise, so daß er den Verletzungen erlag; die Thäter wurden verhaftet.

CHAPTER XI.

Another day and the Idaho was battling for her life and that of every soul aboard. Forging her way southward, she took the furious buffets of the gale on the starboard quarter—"the right front," as Turnbull would have put it had he not been too ill to care a fig where she was hit and only wished she might go down if that would keep her still. Sea after sea burst over the dripping decks and tossed her like a cockleshell upon the waters. Time and again the bows would plunge deep in some rushing surge and then, uplifting, send torrents washing aft and pour cataracts from her sides. Long before the dawn of day the red eyed commander had ordered the southward course abandoned and headed his laboring craft for the opposite shores. Harbor there was none north of the deep sheltered bay of La Paz, but there would be relief from the tremendous poundings of the billows when once under the lee of old California. Obedient to her helm, the Idaho now met "dead ahead" both wind and sea. The rolling measurably ceased. The pitching fore and aft continued, but the passenger list by this time cared no longer to discriminate. It was all one to all but one of their number.

Loring of the engineers, thanks to long weeks of illness of another sort, was mercifully exempted from the pangs of seasickness, but the sights and sounds between decks were more than could long be borne, and making his way forward shortly after dawn he had succeeded in borrowing a spare sou'wester and pair of sea boots from the second officer, and equipped in these and a rubber coat, leaving nothing but his nose and mouth in evidence, he was boosted up the narrow stairway to the shelter of the pilothouse on the uppermost deck—the Idaho had no bridge—and there he saw the sun come up to the meridian and the sea go gradually down as the steamer found smoother waters under the lee of San Ildefonso.

Only lightly laden, the stanch little craft had well nigh "jumped out of her boots," as the jovial skipper expressed it, and now, all brine and beaming satisfaction after his long hours of stormy vigil, he clapped Loring on the shoulder, complimented him on his possession of a "sea stomach" and ordered coffee served forthwith. They were steaming slowly along at half speed now, taking a breathing spell before attempting the next round, and the captain waxed confidential.

"What's wrong with that pretty little niece?" he asked. "She was bright enough the day they came aboard on our up trip. Now, the stewardess tells me, she fainted dead away and has been begging to be put ashore all night."

Loring couldn't say.

"But you helped carry her down, you and Turnbull. The stewardess says you were both very kind to her, where her own people neglected her. I didn't fancy that scrub Escalante. Do you know anything about him or her own people?"

"Nothing—to speak of," said Loring.

"Fernandez, one of those young Guaymas swells, says the mother was own sister to De la Cruz—married against his wishes when she was a mere girl—died a few years later, and that Don Ramon offered to adopt and educate her little girl, but only lately would the Escalante give her up. All I know is that she's too dashed miserable about something else to be even seasick like the rest of 'em. You'd 'a' been down there with Turnbull if you hadn't just had more'n your share of illness," added he, with the mariner's slight disapprobation of the landsman who defies the initiations of Neptune.

"Very possibly," said Loring.

"The purser tells me Escalante gave him a little packet belonging to her—very valuable—which he ordered kept in the safe until their agent should call for it at Frisco."

"Indeed!" said Loring, looking up in quick interest.

"Fact," said the skipper. "Now have some more coffee. I'm going to turn in for 40 winks. Let the steward know when you want anything. Nobody else will. We've got to face some more rollers after awhile. I dasn't go inside Carmen island."

But Loring had something more engrossing to think of than breakfast or luncheon. So there was a little packet in the purser's safe, was there? Valuable and not to be delivered except to their agent in Frisco. It was in Pancha's name, yet not subject to Pancha's order. Why that discrimination? And it was given the purser by Escalante—brother of the Escalante—another brother of the accomplished sharper of Sancho's ranch. A precious trinity of blood relations were these! Small wonder Don Ramon had opposed his girl sister's union with one of their number. Now, what on earth could that small packet contain, and was it likely that the valuables were any more valuable than those snatched from his saddlebags the night of the assault at Gila Bend—the watch and diamonds of the late Captain Nevins, now vanished into thin air apparently, for not a trace of him had appeared since the night he rode away from Camp Cooke?

In genuine distress of mind, Loring had written from Yuma as soon as the doctor would permit, to the address penned by Nevins in presence of the court, informing that vagabond officer's wife that the valuables he had been charged to place in her hands had been forcibly taken from him after he himself had been assaulted and stricken senseless; that every effort had been made to recover them, but without success; that he deplored their loss and her many misfortunes and begged to be informed if he could serve her in any other way. The doctors had promised him that he would be restored by a sea voyage. It would be three weeks probably before he could reach San Francisco, and meantime he knew from the captain's admission that she was probably in need.

"No one," wrote Loring, "is dependent upon me, and I beg your acceptance as a loan, as a temporary accommodation or as anything you please, of the inclosed draft." (It covered nearly every dollar he happened to have to his credit in the bank at San Francisco, though he had pay accounts still collectible.) It took nearly ten days for answer to reach him, and Loring bid himself away to read it when the letter came, addressed in a hand he knew too well:

Naomi, my beloved sister, is prostrated by her sorrows and anxieties, and I must be her amanuensis—I, who would die for her, yet who shrink from this task, well knowing, though she does not, how hard it is to write to one whom I have given perhaps such infinite pain. Indeed I should not have had courage to write had she not required it of me, had not your most generous offer and action demanded response. But for your aid my heartbroken sister and I would by this time have had no roof to cover our heads. These people had refused to house us longer. As soon as she is well enough to move and I can obtain the means from eastern friends we shall sail for New Orleans, where she expects to find friends and employment, and she bids me say that within the year you shall be repaid. Meantime the thought that you, too, have been made a sufferer, all on account of that unprincipled scoundrel who has deceived and deserted her, weighs upon her spirits as it does on mine. It is not the loss of the jewels, though we would have been beyond the possibility of want had they reached her, that we mourn. It is that one whom I fear I have sorely angered, perhaps past all forgiveness, should have to suffer so much more on our account, and yet if you only knew—if I could only explain! But this is futile. Despise me if you will, yet believe that my gratitude is beyond words. GERALDINE ALLYN.

P. S.—Should you care to see sister on your arrival we shall probably still be here.

Then there had come, not to him, but to the post surgeon at Yuma, another letter just before Loring started down the Colorado. The doctor was with his patient at the moment, and the superscription caught the latter's eye. The doctor changed color and looked embarrassed as he read. Evidently he did not desire to be questioned, nor was he at the time, for Loring had a way of thinking before he spoke, but as the doctor completed certain injunctions at parting the engineer turned full upon him:

"Any news of Nevins in the letter you got this morning?"

The doctor flushed, looked bothered and confused, then finally fished the letter from an inner pocket. "Read it yourself," said he and turned away. It was from Miss Allyn. It apologized for intruding on a stranger, on his time and patience, but she knew he had been Mr. Loring's medical adviser, and she felt compelled to make certain inquiries, her sister being still unable to write for herself. The doctor was probably aware that Mr. Loring had written apprising them of the loss of certain articles of great value that had been intrusted to his care and intended for them. He had expressed the utmost sorrow and had tendered certain reimbursement (that check was for $200, not a cent less), not a fortieth part of the value of the lost articles probably, but now they were in receipt of a letter from Captain Nevins that must have come by private hand to San Francisco, telling them that he must go forth to seek his fortunes anew; that his wife would never hear from him until he could come with full hands; that he had sent her every penny and possession he had—enough to keep her in comfort—and that if Lieutenant Loring did not promptly deliver the same to take legal steps to compel him so to do, as he, Nevins, was now convinced the officer might appropriate them to his own use if he could find any way to cover his breach of trust, such as swearing they were stolen from him. Captain Nevins had written other things in condemnation of Mr. Loring which neither Mrs. Nevins nor herself could believe, but it did seem strange that an officer could find no safe method of sending valuable jewels when so much depended on his fidelity.

Loring read no further. His blue eyes were blazing already, and his face was white with wrath when he returned the missive to his friend, who, knowing nothing of Loring's past infatuation for the writer, wondered at sight of his emotion.

"Why, Loring," said he, "you take this shallow girl too seriously. It's the way with women all over the world. They can never wholly acquit a man of complicity when they have suffered a loss. If that package were with you on the Idaho and she was to go down in midocean and the jewelry with her, some women would say you had scuttled the ship in order to rob them."

The doctor's name, it must be observed, is unrecorded because of the extremity of his cynicism. He went back to Yuma and his duties and stowed that letter away to be answered later on. What the writer said her sister desired most to know was whether Mr. Loring had sustained any injury that might affect his mind or memory, and the doctor sniffed indignantly at the notion while he read, yet marveled much at the effect that half uttered accusation had on his usually calm, self poised patient. He spoke of it to Turnbull when that veteran came hurrying in by stage and followed Loring down the murky stream, only just in time to catch the steamer, but Turnbull paid faint heed. Loring was still weak, he said, and a man of sensitive honor might well be wrathful at such insinuations.

And now as Loring clung to the rail upon the lofty deck and gazed out over the waste of tumbling waters toward the barren shores he was thinking deeply of that letter, of the strange bent of mind that could dictate such unjustifiable suggestion, if not accusation. He was thinking, too, of Pancha and that little packet in the purser's safe when suddenly that officer himself came popping up the narrow stairway and poked his unprotected head into the whistling wind.

"Lieutenant, come below and have a bite while we're here off Ildefonso. We'll be turning handsprings in half an hour." And Loring followed to the steward's cuddy, where a smoking luncheon awaited them, and the silent soldier fell to with the appetite that follows fever. Purser and steward looked on with admiration.

"I'll prescribe a course of typhoid to the next friend of mine that contemplates a voyage like this," said the former presently. "It made you invulnerable. But was it typhoid?"

"No; some head trouble."

"Sunstruck?" queried the purser. "Hot as it is, that doesn't often happen in Arizona; tod dry."

"Struck, but not by sun; pistol butt perhaps," said Loring; "night attack at Gila Bend—robbers."

"O Lord, yes! I remember. I heard about that," said the genial purser. "Got away with some money, didn't they?"

"No money, but with a valuable package," and the blue eyes were fixed intently on the purser as he spoke, while the steward uncorked another pint of Marguax; "a tin box about 8 by 3, containing a watch and jewels. You sometimes get such for safe keeping, do you not?"

"Got one now," was the prompt reply as the officer smacked his lips and held out his glass for another sip of the red wine of France. "Old Escalante gave it to me at Guaymas. It's the little senorita's."

SOCIETY EDITOR'S DILEMMA.

Cigarette Falls from Her Pocket On An "Owl" Street Car.

"I know now how it feels to 'lose the respect of one's fellow creatures,' as the moralists say," remarked a society editor as she sharpened her pencil.

"Oh, cheer up, it can't be so very bad," said the police court reporter.

"Oh, well, this was only temporary, you know," the society editor hastened to explain. "You know, I always attend opera 'first nights,' because it really is a question whether that comes under the head of music or society. Well, last Monday night as I finished my copy, about 12 o'clock, the musical man came in with his copy. He was lighting a cigarette.

"'Do you smoke?' he said very seriously, throwing me a cigarette. Now, contrary to the popular idea of the gay and dashing newspaper woman, I don't smoke. But I slipped the cigarette into the pocket of my jacket. I am a souvenir crank, and that cigarette had a pretty little gold band around it. The critic and I handed in our copy, and he went over with me to a South Side car. I ran a few steps to catch the car, because the hour was late, and staggered in and took a seat somewhat breathlessly.

"'Fare,' said the conductor.

"I dived nervously into the jacket pocket, in which I keep a medley of change, keys, pencils, etc. Out came several nickels and dimes, while that wicked little cigarette rolled slowly the whole length of my skirt and struck the middle of the car. To add to that, a little corkscrew that I had bought to open a bottle of lavender water rattled down on top of the cigarette. To my horror I noticed an eminently respectable old lady and her eminently respectable daughter across the aisle staring at me with eyes fairly dilated. The conductor grinned as he picked up the cigarette and corkscrew for me, with malicious deliberation. From that time on I can say without egotism that I attracted attention. The nice old lady and the nice yound lady especially seemed fascinated. I believe they thought, 'At last we are brought face to face with these bohemian things we read about!' I am sure they wouldn't be rude under ordinary circumstances, but they kept up a constant whispering about me looking sideways and noting every detail of my make-up. Feel relieved when we reached our street? Well, that is putting it very mildly. I had even had desperate ideas of taking another car."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Mystery of the Two Sleeves.

One must be unusually quick-witted to endure the cross-examination of a skillful lawyer. In an action for payment of a tailor's account, a witness swore that a certain overcoat was badly made, one sleeve being shorter than the other.

"You will," said the lawyer, slowly rising to cross-examine, "swear that one of the sleves was shorter than the other?"

"I will," said the witness.

"Then, sir," thundered the lawyer, quickly, with a flash of indignation, "I am to understand that you positively deny that one of the sleeves was longer than the other?"

Startled, the witness said: "I do deny it."

A storm of laughter ensued. After it had died away, the lawyer said meaningly:

"Thank you, sir; I've no more questions."

GIVES UP HER HOME.

MAGNIFICENT GIFT OF MRS MINNIE L. CUMMINGS.

The Authoress Donates Her Magnificent Home at Elberon, N. J., as a Residence for Worthy Women—An Elaborate Scheme of Beneficence.

Mrs. Minnie L. Cummings, the wealthy widow and authoress, and noted for her many practical schemes of philanthropy, has just made her most notable gift to her less fortunate sisters by giving her palatial residence at Elberon, N. J., The Towers, which was for a long time the summer residence of the late Ambassador Runyon to the Woman's Property Protective League, an association founded by her for the protection of homeless and unfortunate women of gentle birth and education who have lost their homes and station in life through no fault of their own. The Towers will be a place where these women may reside until they are in a position to become self supporting or recover property to which they may have a claim and have been unjustly deprived of. To recover this property will also be one of the aims of the association.

Another purpose of the Protective League will be to found other homes such as The Towers will be. They will be maintained as private residences and will in no sense be known as homes of charity. The Towers is a grand and imposing building, built upon a scale of lavish magnitude in keeping with the great wealth of its owner. It has forty-eight rooms and is surrounded by magnificent lawns.

Into this residence Mrs. Cummings, who is the President of the Woman's Property Protective League, with loving kindness welcomes all those who come within the scope of the objects of her association.

In this home Mrs. Cummings not only proposes to supply the members with a refined home, but also with clothing in keeping with their surroundings. Women of all ages will be admitted. Proper marriages Mrs. Cummings proposes to encourage, and will even provide a trousseaux and pay for the weddings, as well as to insure the welfare of the newly married couples.

The chief object that Mrs. Cummings has in view, however, is to save for the unprotected women her home. If foreclosed upon for non-payment of interest on mortgage, or if the principal of mortgage be due, or the home is seized for debt on fictitious or real claims, the Protective League will pay up such claims and redeem it and deed it back to its owner, take back a mortgage from her, and if the revenue from the property is only sufficient for the support of the owner or of her family, who are dependent upon her, the interest shall be permitted to accumulate until the owner shall be in a position to pay. If necessary, the mortgage shall remain without being foreclosed, during the life of the owner. If the income is not sufficient to provide her with the necessaries of existence she shall become a guest in the league home. Here a member will pay her accommodations. If she has no income at all she will be cared for from the funds of the league, the same as those able to contribute something toward their support.

The league will also endeavor to supply those of its members who can and are willing to work with congenial home employment.

Mrs. Cummings has been led to this step by the reverses which have befallen a great many of her friends. Notably among these is the widow of the late General Custer, who is now reduced to poverty.

Mr. Hanna's Pineapple Patch.

Mark Hanna is growing pineapples. This statement will come as somewhat of a shock to those who think of Mark Hanna only as a political engineer. Although he is a city man, he loves the little pineapple patch that grows green and spiney out of the white sand of Dade county Fla. Twice within the last eighteen months has he turned his footsteps from the North to the South. Several times his Mark Hanna slept in the palmetto-thatched shack that stands shaded by whispering pine trees on the edge of Mark Hanna's pineapple patch.

It was about two years ago that the pineapple fever broke out in Florida and became so virulently epidemic in that pine and flatwoods lands.

The germ of the pineapple contagion entered his blood, and he bought an acre of pine land from Representative Linton of Michigan, who owns a big tract along the Bicayne Bay canal.

Mr. Hanna's acre lies between the Atlantic and the Everglades, 300 miles south of Jacksonville. Uncle Mose Hawkins, a Florida Republican, "tends" it and sends a monthly crop report to Mr. Hanna. Uncle Mose told the writer that he would sooner "grub" an acre of hammock land with the sun at meriden and the mosquitoes in full bloom than to write out "dat 'port ter Marse Hanner."—Washington Star.

DROP A CENT IN THE SLOT.

A Gallon of Boiling Water or All the Gas You Need Follows the Act.

The ingenious individual who invented the penny-in-the-slot machine probably never had any idea that it would come as a boon and a blessing to man; and to tell the truth, it has hitherto distinctly not been regarded in the light of a boon and a blessing by man—at least, not in the United States.

But no matter. A novel penny-in-the slot machine, after a triumphal debut in Paris, is touring through England and earning enthusiastic encomiums wherever it makes its appearance.

The invention in question is a hot water lamp slot machine, that is so practical, so infallible, that ere long the ordinary street lamps now in use will be collected by the antiquary, along with brass candlesticks and flint and tinder boxes. In their place there will be at the street corners big ornamental columns, with improved and magnified lights at the top, the heat from which, instead of being allowed to go to waste in the atmosphere, will be used to boil water. At the base will be placed a machine into the slot of which an eager public will drop a cent and get a gallon of boiling water in exchange at any hour of the day or night.

A Frenchman is credited with having originated the idea of utilizing in this way the heat generated in the street lamps of cities. However this may be, it is certain that these public boilers were first set up in Paris, where their success was instantaneous and unqualified.

The machine has now been tried in London and several other large cities in the United Kingdom, where it has come to be regarded in the light of an indispensable adjunct of civilization without which life would no longer be worth living.

The possibilities of the scheme are, in fact, limitless. Each machine supplies fifteen gallons of boiling water an hour, or a gallon every four minutes.

That it would suply a real want is proved by the fact that there are a considerable number of people who make a snug income in the tenements of London—and possibly in those of New York, for all I know—by selling hot water in the summer, and even in winter, at two cents a kettleful. One woman is said to have made a tidy fortune by starting such a business in an East End tenement district.

One enterprising gas company supplies houses with a slot meter. The occupant of the house drops in an English penny, or two cent piece, when he wants a light, and a certain number of cubic feet of gas is furnished by the meter. When the gas goes out he drops another penny in the slot, and the supply is renewed.

The same system has been put in operation on the railroads. If you are reading and desire a better light you drop a penny in a slot and a little electric reading lamp, just above your head, immediately throws its effulgence upon the eye tiring pages and renders your reading easy and agreeable.

Didn't Know the Ropes.

Gen. Morgan of Illinois, who commanded a brigade in Davis's Division, was one of those men so slouchy in his appearance that a stranger would never have picked him for an officer of high rank, says Harper's Round Table. One day a raw recruit of his brigade, who had lost some books, asked a veteran where he might be likely to find them. The veteran said the only thief in the brigade was Jim Morgan, who occupied a tent near the blue flag. The recruit hastened to Morgan's tent, shoved his head in through the flaps, and asked:

"Does Jim Morgan live here?"

"My name is James Morgan," answered the General.

"Then I want you to hand over those books you stole from me."

"I have none of your books, my dear man."

"That's a lie," cried the soldier. "The boys say you are the only thief in the camp. Turn out them books, or I'll grind your carcass into apple-sass!"

General Morgan appreciated the joke, and laughed heartily, but when the recruit began pulling off his coat to make good his threat, the officer informed him of his relations to the brigade.

"Waal, blast me if I'd take you for a brigadier!" said the man. "Excuse me, General, but I don't thoroughly know the ropes yet."

Windows of Cloth.

Windows of cloth instead of glass sounds like an impossibility, and yet it is a reality, and the employment of such a substitute is an acknowledged success. It is not ordinary cloth, but such as is translucent, through which light comes just as through glass. To all intents and purposes this cloth window is similar to the sheets of glass, and lasts ever so much longer, while still having just as good an appearance.

Now, the remarkable feature of this new fabric is that it never leaks, does not break and is nearly one-third cheaper than glass. A large skylight composed of the new substitute for glass, which has been in constant use long enough to show its worth, remains in perfect condition, not one cent having been spent on it for repairs.

The material has many advantages claimed for it, chief of which is that by its employment in train sheds, freight houses, large auditoriums, and public buildings having skylights of large area, the light weight of the material permits of a simple, inexpensive and light form of skylight construction.

YOUNG WOMEN IN CLUB LIFE.

Miss Grace Dodge Gave Her Experience to Plainfield Girls.

It was with great interest that the members of the Young Women's Club listened to Miss Grace Dodge, of New York, at the clubrooms last evening. Miss Dodge has had many years experience of the life just opening for our young women of Plainfield, and she spoke most earnestly of the mental, moral and physical good that may be gained by their intercourse together in club life. She encourages the idea, not only of self-government, but self-support as well. It is with this end in view that the club will move Thursday to smaller rooms, as it expects to pay all running expenses by its own efforts. The money paid by the sustaining and subscribing members will form an educational fund to help pay the expenses of the different classes.

A large delegation of the club members will attend the annual meeting of the New York Association of Clubs to be held in that city April 17th.

Younger Society Set Gave a Dance.

A number of Plainfield's prominent young people gave a delightful dance and reception in the Camera Club rooms last evening. There were about sixty couples present, including guests from New York, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Summit and Jersey City. Music was furnished by Prof. Garland, of New Brunswick. The affair was given under the direction of a committee of six and every detail was arranged perfectly. About 1 o'clock this morning supper was served, after which dancing was continued until an early hour.

DEAN MURRAY DEAD.

He is the Father of Dr. William A. Murray, of This City.

The Rev. James Ormsby Murray, D. D., LL. D., Holmes professor of belles-lettres and English language and literature, and dean of Princeton University, died yesterday morning at his home on Nassau street, Princeton, from a digestive trouble for which he underwent an operation last January.

He was born in Camden, S. C., in 1827, and was graduated from Brown University in 1850 and from the Andover Thealogical Seminary in 1854. He was pastor of the Congregational church in Peabody, Mass., until 1861, when he went to the Prospect Street Congregational church at Cambridgeport, Mass. He was called to the Brick Presbyterian church in 1865. In 1874 he accepted the Holmes professorship, and in 1885 he was appointed dean of the university. The new chair in English, which is endowed to the extent of $100,000, has been named in his honor. Dr. Murray leaves a widow, a daughter, the wife of Prof. A. C. Armstrong, of Wesleyan University, and four sons, William A., physician in Plainfield, N. J.; Haughton, the assistant treasurer of the Princeton Theological Seminary, and James and George, who are in business in New York. The funeral will be held from Masquand chapel tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

IMPORTANT LINK FOR CROSS-STATE TROLLEY

Monmouth Traction Company's to be Pushed.

GRIDIRONING THE STATE.

FROM JERSEY CITY TO CAMDEN BY TROLLEY IN TWO YEARS.

Connecting Links Necessary to Complete the Scheme are From Camden to Bordentown, From Trenton to Princeton and From the Latter Place to New Brunswick—An Outlet for Philadelphia.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Camden, March 29.—In a few days now it is expected that work will begin in earnest on the Monmouth Traction Company's line from Bordentown to the Camden county line. The company is running cars now from Bordentown to Fieldsborough, and has secured the right of way from the Burlington County Board of Freeholders over the county roads and bridges.

With the annexation of the town of Stockton, Camden City Council is vested authority over the streets of the annexed district, and the Camden and Suburban Railroad Company will probably seek permission to extend its line northeastward to meet the Monmouth Company's tracks at West Palmyra. The Camden Company's line is already built to within about two miles of West Palmyra, near the dividing line between Camden and Burlington counties. The connection will give the Monmouth Company the desired outlet for Philadelphia for its Burlington county traffic.

The completion of this section of road is only part of the general scheme of connecting New York and Philadelphia by trolley, and it may ultimately bring a continuous stretch of trolley track all the way to Cape May and Atlantic City, tapping all the larger cities of South Jersey.

The connecting links necessary to complete the scheme are from Camden to Bordentown, from Trenton to Princeton and from Princeton to New Brunswick. The Monmouth Company embraces the line from Bordentown to Camden, while another company is now securing the right of way from the State capital to Princeton. The latter corporation is meeting some resistance from the trustees of the princeton University, who fear the results to the students of quick transit to Trenton. It is only a question of a couple of years, however, when one may board a trolley car in Camden and ride all the way to New York with but one or two changes.

HURLED TO DEATH BY A TRAIN.

Man Supposed to be From Oregon Instantly Killed Near Roselle.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Roselle, March 29—A man supposed to be Peter or Enoch Erickson, of Hood River, Ore., was struck and instantly killed near Roselle Monday night by the Royal Blue Line Express. The engineer saw the man struck and stopped the train. The train crew and some of the passengers searched both sides of the tracks and the fields adjacent for nearly an hour before the body was found. The man had been hurled clear of the road and over in a field.

In the pocket of the dead man's clothes were found $1.78, together with a number of photographs and letters, and an Odd Fellows' certificate from Idlewile Lodge, Hood River, Ore., made out to Peter Erickson. There were also naturalization papers issued at Hood River to Enoch Erickson. The man was about thirty-six years old. The body was taken to Mitchell's Morgue at Elizabethport.

Old New Brunswicker Dead.

George Greer, one of the oldest citizens of New Brunswick, died at his home in that city Sunday evening. He was seventy-nine years old. Mr. Greer was for years a prominent business man in New Brunswick, and built the first amusement and assembly hall, which still stands. He retired from business fifteen years ago. He leaves a widow, two daughters and a son.

Miss Young, of Central avenue, has secured a position with Miss Smalley, the dressmaker, of East Front street.

CELLARS FULL OF WATER

A BLIND DRAIN TO GREEN BROOK MAY BE LAID.

Mayor Smalley Tells a Press Reporter That it Will Cost the Interested Property Owners About $20 Apiece.

The rain of the past few days has had a disastrous effect on cellars in the upper part of the borough, and a large number are today filled with water. Many of the cellars cannot be used at all, and it is making a great deal of trouble for the residents. Mr. and Mrs. Ward, of Elizabeth, who a few days ago moved into a house on Fairview avenue found that the cellar contained two feet of water.

A Daily Press reporter in conversation with Mayor Smalley, of the borough, this morning, learned that some steps would have to be taken at an early date to drain that portion of the borough to overcome the present difficulty. He advised that a blind drain be located from the upper part of the borough to run toward Plainfield and empty into Greenbrook. He says that this work can be done at a probable expense of about $20 to each property-owner affected. The matter will probably receive the early consideration of property-owners and the drain will be laid.

This water question seems to puzzle a great many boroughites for the reason that the ground in the upper part of the borough is quite high. In a number of places where water is found in abundance the grade is higher than that on Somerset street, where there is less water. There is, however, a natural drainage toward Plainfield and little trouble would be found in laying a drain sewer.

KEAN TO GET FRANCHISE.

HE AGREES TO DEMANDS MADE BY ELIZABETH OFFICIALS.

In Consideration of Being Granted a Franchise He Agrees to Give All of the School Children a Three-Cent-Fare

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 29—At an executive session of the City Council to consider the application of Senator John Kean for a trolley franchise from the Staten Island ferry, in the Port, to Roselle Township line, the fight was over three-cent fares for school children, and the paving of Morris avenue by the company for the privilege of going through the West Arch, beneath the Pennsylvania tracks. The trolley company agreed to allow school children to ride for three cents, to pave Morris avenue with telford blocks, and further the company volunteered to charge only five-cent fares from the Staten Island ferry to Cranford, a distance of ten miles.

The ordinance granting the franchise has now passed the second reading, and will come up for final passage at the next meeting of the Council, and work will be begun as soon as the Mayor signs the ordinance.

Miss Alice Vail Kline Becomes the Wife of a New Yorker.

The wedding of Miss Alice Vail Kline, of this city, and Charles Edward Wheeler, of New York, took place last evening at the bride's home, and was a very quiet affair, only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom being present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Wright, of Jersey City, an intimate friend of the groom. The young couple will reside in New York.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is preparing to use the underground system of wires. Poles have now been placed in position at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fifth street, on Watchung near LaGrande avenue, and at Watchung and Franklin place. They will be used as distributing poles. The underground cables to run to their base and from them, the various circuits will start. Other distributing poles will soon be placed.

It is proposed by the company to start the extension very soon if the weather permits.

MORE LEGAL TROUBLES AMONG BARD CREDITORS.

CASES HEARD BY JUSTICE MOSHER.

Editor Runyon and A. L. C. Marsh Resist Attempt to Throw Costs on Them.

The trial of the Bard Company against Frank W. Runyon and Augustus L. C. Marsh, for the costs in the right of property trial which took place before Justice Moffett a few weeks ago, came off yesterday afternoon in Justice Mosher's court.

Both Mr. Runyon and Mr. Marsh attempted to levy an execution upon the Bard Company to satisfy a judgment they secured against the Bard Cycle Company, when it became necessary to try the right of property. The Bard Company showed conclusively that they owned the goods, throwing the costs upon Runyon and Marsh

At the trial yesterday both defendants brought set offs in court to put up against the Bard Company, but both set offs were against the Bard Cycle Company. Justice Mosher refused to allow Marsh's set off, but reserved his decision in regard to the second party. A decision in the case is expected next Tuesday.

CHARGED WITH STEALING $1,800.

Levig Arrested on the Strength of a Letter From Pennsylvania.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 29—The police have arrested Joseph Levig at his boarding house in Elizabethport on a charge of stealing $1,800 from Martin Lloyd, of Duryea, Luzerne county, Pa.

The arrest was based on information given the police by Joseph Schuster, who has a store on First street, this city, and who received a letter from Lloyd Monday informing him of the robbery and asking him to watch for Levig, who was supposed to have come in this direction. Lloyd and Schuster were old friends, and the latter was also acquainted with Levig, who called on him a couple of days ago and said he had come east looking for a job. He was well treated by Schuster, who secured for him a boarding house.

The prisoner will be held until Lloyd, who has been telegraphed for, reaches this city and makes a formal complaint.

WOULD WED HIM ONCE; NOW CHARGES THEFT

Troubles of Miss Maggie Carpenter Aired in Court.

HOWARD DOTY INVOLVED.

SHE SAYS HE ROBBED HER THE DAY OF INTENDED MARRIAGE.

Doty Claims That She Was Infatuated With Him and Begged Him to Marry Her—Trip to See Clergyman—She Waited While He Recovered His Nerve—When He Came Back, She Was Gone.

Two weeks ago Maggie Carpenter wanted to marry Howard Doty. Yesterday afternoon this same young woman was instrumental in the holding of Howard Doty to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of larceny. The circumstances, which led to this change of heart, form a thrilling little tale that engaged the attention of Justice Nash yesterday afternoon at the hearing.

Miss Carpenter lives at 117 Liberty street. She has been acquainted with Doty for some time. Doty holds the position of assistant to Janitor Boice, of the Elkwood building, and usually looks after the furnace that heats it.

Doty says that Maggie Carpenter has had her eye on him for some time and has thought matrimonial thoughts at the same time. According to him, she has done much of the wooing. However it was, he went to see her Wednesday, March 15th, at her home. There they met and talked it over and he says agreed to get married forthwith. Rev. T. Logan Murphy was the clergyman selected. Maggie says that he then took possession of $10 belonging to her with the remark.

"I just want this for a bluff. I'll give it back."

Doty says that she pressed him to take the money when they reached the corner of Washington avenue and West Front street. At any rate, the money changed hands as both admit.

When they reached Rev. Mr. Murphy's residence, Doty's heart evidently failed him for the moment for he asked the young woman to wait a minute as he would return shortly. When he came back, Doty says, she was gone so they didn't get married. Judging from the tale of Miss Carpenter, he was absent for some time. However that may be, they were not married that day, neither was the money returned.

Two days later, Maggie Carpenter decided that she had been robbed and forthwith proceeded to Justice Nash's court where a warrant was sworn out against Doty. He was subsequently arrested and his hearing was held yesterday afternoon

William G. DeMeza appeared as his lawyer. After hearing the story, the Justice held Doty under $50 bonds for his appearance before the Grand Jury.

WAGON TIPPED OVER ON TOP OF CHAS. WYCKOFF.

THE COLT WAS ACTING FRACTIOUS.

One of the Reins Broke and Caused the Accident—Fortunate Outcome for Driver.

Through the antics of a young colt owned by Charles Wyckoff, of West Front street, the latter nearly lost his life yesterday afternoon. Mr. Wyckoff was in the wagon in his yard and was preparing to drive out when one of the reins broke. The horse was nervous, and the driver tried to handle him with one rein. He pulled on the rein so as to bring the animal about in the right position.

Just as he did so the colt made a sudden turn and threw Mr. Wyckoff out of the wagon and the heavy vehicle went over on top of him. Fortunately, Mr. Wyckoff managed to crawl from under the wagon in time to catch his horse before he broke up the rig. Mr. Wykoff's wife was near the horse at the time and she was powerless to assist her husband. She thought sure he would be killed.

Brunswick's Police on Wheels

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 29—New Brunswick has started a bicycle police force. One wheel has been secured. It will be kept at police headquarters and used for answering hurry calls The police force numbers ten men, of whom only three are able to ride a wheel. The others are expected to qualify at the earliest possible date.

OLD FRIENDS IN COURT OVER A DRESS SKIRT.

SAYS MARY MULFORD STOLE.

Mrs. Jennie Kline Accused the Young Colored Woman of Larceny—Mary Mulford Held for Grand Jury.

An old dress skirt, recently discarded to the ash barrel, came near sending Miss Mary Mulford, colored, to jail. The trouble was that Mrs. Jennie Kline, colored, said that she stole it. Justice Nash was called upon, yesterday afternoon, to listen to the circumstances of the case. He held Mary Mulford under $50 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

At one time Mary Mulford lived at Mrs. Kline's at the latter's home on West Third street Then the young woman went elsewhere. Mrs. Kline says she missed a gown. Information came to her, she claims, that the gown was doing service for her erstwhile companion. Then came the complaint and subsequent arrest.

Mary Mulford had an explanation ready She told how the dress, which she says isn't any good anyhow, having been all worn out, was given to her by another girl. The latter was in New York. She declared that she wore the dress often at Mrs. Kline's home and that the latter never said a word.

TAKEN TO MORRIS PLAINS.

Harry Pennington Removed From Institution for Feeble-Minded Persons.

Harry Pennington, a former resident of this city, was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains this morning by Roundsman Frederickson. Pennington is a young man of eighteen years who has been confined in an institution at Vineland for feeble-minded persons. He has never been able to talk, although capable of understanding what others say to him. He gradually grew violent so it was deemed best to send him to Morris Plains.

Constable Mattox brought him to this city last evening. He was locked up in the city jail for the night as he was too violent to leave at large. This morning he was examined by City Physician Carman and another physician and declared insane. He was taken to Morris Plains later.

HORSE STILL MISSING.

Eight Months Has Passed Since Councilman Hetfield's Mare Disappeared.

Although eight months have elapsed now since Councilman Walter L Hetfield's valuable sorrel mare left the barn one night and disappeared, no one knows where, not a trace has ever been found of her. Search has been kept up at intervals since she ran away, but the searchers have not even been rewarded with a clue.

The mare had just been driven into the barnyard that night in July, when she ran away, and was being unharnessed. In some manner she slipped away from the men and made off down the road towards Scotch Plains. Although search for her was begun at once that was the last ever seen of her, and it is thought that she has been stolen and sold.

Don't Mind Silver on His Farm.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, March 29.—Silver ore has been found by Edgar Sarles, of Rutger's College, on the farm of George Drake, at Newton, a few miles north of New Brunswick. Curator Vailiant, of the Rutger's Geological Museum, found the ore to be triassic sandstone, with chrysocalla, or silicate of copper, cuperate or oxide of copper, or pure metallic silver. Mr Drake does not consider the find as of importance and said the only way he cared to get silver out of the ground was by raising vegetables.

The annual meetings of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society and the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church were held in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon.

FAIR BASKET BALLISTS.

PLAINFIELD TEACHERS WHO HAVE TAKEN UP THE GAME.

Have Two Teams and Meet for Practice Twice a Week at the Whittier Building—Names of Those who Play.

Basket ball seems to have taken a firm hold on some of the young women who teach school in this city. Twice a week a number of them meet in the Whittier building, where, under the coaching of Miss Bessie FitzRandolph, they are fast becoming adepts in the game.

Monday night the young women met again for regular practice. While they find much enjoyment and good exercise in the game, they have not as yet planned to meet any of the outside teams. They prefer more practice first. Some of the young women were entirely new to the game, and it took them several evenings to get acquainted with the principles of play.

The ten young women, who turn out weekly for their basket ball game are the Misses Perry, Manktelow, Muchant, Rocap, Griswold, Filmer, Brown, Wilbur, Randolph and Etta Randolph.

It is their intention to continue practice Monday and Thursday evenings until warm weather compels them to desist. Next fall the young women will resume practice and hope to be able to test their strength with some of their rivals in the sport.

HOBART REFUSES TO TALK NOW.

A Public Statement May be Made in the Near Future.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Washington, D. C., March 29.—The presidential party returned yesterday afternoon from Georgia on time. When Vice-President Hobart was approached last night he would not talk about the possibility that he may not be a candidate for renomination, stating that the matter had not been seriously considered at Thompsonville, and that it was too early to talk about it.

Later on Mr. Hobart will probably make a public statement on the subject. He will remain at his residence here until some time next month, when he will go to his home in Paterson.

The President and his advisers have not considered the name of a possible successor to Mr. Hobart and will not do so until they learn from Mr. Hobart himself that he cannot be a candidate.

DID STRANGE THINGS WITH LIQUIFIED AIR.

Interesting Experiments at the Park Club.

B. C. BALL IN CHARGE.

FROZE RUBBER BALLS, SAUSAGES AND OTHER STRANGE THINGS.

Two Gallons of Liquified Air From Tripler's Laboratory Were Shown—Its Wonderful Properties Illustrated—Park Clubites Entertained by Its Freaks—Extreme Cold Was Noticeable.

The members of the Park Club found something to think about last evening. The strange and rather uncanny performances of liquified air, as exhibited by their fellow member, B. C. Ball, were decidedly interesting, even if rather bewildering to some. The members gathered around and watched until the last drop of the liquid atmosphere had disappeared. Then they talked it over and wondered.

The entertainment at the Park Club was rather an impromptu affair. The house committee had planned to have this exposition of the wonders of liquified air later in the week Yesterday Charles E. Tripler, of New York, the only man who has successfully liquified air in any quantity, notified Mr. Ball that yesterday was the only day this week that the fluid could be obtained. Mr. Ball notified the house committee. The only notification was through the papers and in person. Consequently there was not a large attendance in the club hall.

The entertainment opened with some selections on a phonograph. Then came the lecture by Mr. Ball. It wasn't a lecture really, but rather a series of experiments with liquified air with short explanations by the experimenter.

When Mr. Ball left Tripler's labratory, he had two gallons of the air in a large can, thickly wrapped with felt. By the time he reached Plainfield half a gallon had evaporated. In a few words he explained that air became a liquid when reduced in temperature to 312 degrees below zero. This was first done by Prof. Dewar, but in a very expensive manner. Now Mr. Tripler has greatly reduced the cost of producing it.

The can containing the liquified air looked something like an ice cream freezer. In the process of evaporation the air assumes the appearance of a white cloudy mist which is heavier than the surrounding atmosphere and consequently sinks to the ground. When Mr. Ball brought out a dipper full of the liquid air, these clouds of white mist rolled out and fell to the floor. He first filtered some into a Dewar bulb, a bulb within a bulb and separated by a vacum, which keeps it at the low temperature. In that way it was possible to see just how it looked as it was not hidden by the white mist. It was a transparent fluid slightly blueish in color and looking very much like water.

The funnel, through which the liquid air was poured, was soon coated with frost by the extreme cold of the liquid and Arthur Murphy, who was holding it, had to be relieved as his hands were nearly frozen.

As an evidence of the extremely low temperature of the liquid air Mr. Ball poured a little into a glass of water and a cup of ice formed beneath it immediately, in which the liquid air boiled away.

A common rubber ball was put into the liquified air and soon frozen solid. When thrown on the floor it broke into countless pieces as if it had been glass. The pieces, when they thawed out, assumed the usual appearance and properties of rubber.

A sausage was frozen in similiar fashion and Mr. Ball had to take a hammer which cracked the sausage as if it had been stone. A frozen tin cover became so brittle that it was broken with the fingers. A raw egg was broken into the liquified air and soon assumed the appearance of a stone and had to be broken up to remove it from the plate.

Mr. Ball poured some of the liquid air on the floor and there was an immediate movement among the ladies in favor of drier quarters for their feet. But they didn't have to worry. The instant the liquid touched the floor, it was converted into clouds of the same white mist that rolled out in concentric circles and gradually disappeared. When the finger was immersed in the liquid air it did not feel wet. The only sensation was one of intense cold which soon became unbearable.

During the course of the evening, alcohol, which was once considered

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

THEY RIDICULE IT

Many People Ridicule the Idea of an Absolute Cure for Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Ridicule, However, is Not Argument, and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure, that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is about it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address F. A. Staurt Co., Marshall, Mich., for little book on stomach diseases, sent free.

Consumption Cured.

BROUGHT BACK FROM THE GRAVE.

Last November Mr. Joseph James, painter, of 325 W. Pearl St., Indianapolis, Ind., was at death's door with quick consumption. Wasted to a skeleton; his lungs a mass of ulceration; his death was hourly awaited by his doctor and family. He was kept in a constant stupor with opium. A friend, thinking to relieve his terrible cough, gave him a bottle of Brazilian Balm. Seeing its wonderful effect, the doctor advised its continued use. Mr. James soon after dismissed his doctor, and depended on the Balm alone. His recovery was rapid and complete, and in February he returned to work. His lungs are sound, and his weight greater than at any time in his life. His recovery is regarded as almost a miracle.

COMMA BACILLUS.

In consumption beware of cough mixtures and prescriptions that contain opium. Opium paralizes the nerves, and gives the comma bacillus a good chance to destroy the lungs. It is always fatal. Brazilian Balm does not contain a trace of any opiate, but stimulates the nerves with new life and power, destroys the microbe, and restores all that is left of the diseased lungs to a sound and healthy state which no other remedy has ever been known to accomplish.

Gen. MacArthur Pushes on Two Miles and Halts.

GUNBOATS DO GOOD WORK

The American Troops Suffer Greatly Because of the Intense Heat—A Spanish Steamer Taken by the Yorktown—The Reported Death of Prince Lowenstein Confirmed by Gen. Otis.

Manila, March 29.—Gen. MacArthur's division advanced nearly two miles without encountering opposition yesterday. On approaching Bulacan, a town of 25,000 people, he halted, preparatory to attacking it.

The Americans suffered from the intense heat, which was 90 degrees on the coast and fully 100 degrees in the interior. But, in spite of the heat, every man was eager to proceed toward the enemy.

A detachment of ninety-six Filipino prisoners was escorted into Manila. Their appearance aroused great interest as they were marched from the railroad depot to the prison.

The rebels have unloaded about five hundred men from a train, half a mile in front of Gen. MacArthur's forces, with the object of reinforcing the Filipino garrisons at Bulacan and Guiguinto, on either side of the railroad leading to Malolos.

The fact that the railroad is in operation from here to our front, greatly facilitates the transportation of supplies to the troops. Before the break in the road was repaired the transportation of supplies was very uncertain.

A battalion of the California regiment, which has been landed at Enrique, Island of Negros, has been received with every manifestation of joy upon the part of the natives.

The command of the island of Negros has been formally transferred from Gen. Miller to Col. Van Valzan, of the Eighteenth Infantry.

Spanish Steamer Taken.

Manila, March 29.—The United States gunboat Yorktown has arrived here with the Spanish steamer Mundara, owned by the Mondezona Company, of this place. The steamer was captured after a stiff chase in the Gulf of Lingayen, 245 miles north.

When she was first sighted the Mundara was entering the gulf, but she headed seaward. The Yorktown fired two shots before the steamer was overhauled.

Dewey Wants More Ships.

Washington, March 29.—Admiral Dewey has asked the Navy Department for more ships and men, and two or more additional vessels may be sent to Manila. Every available officer now on shore duty is to be ordered on ship board.

The need of a larger naval force in the Philippines is shown by Admiral Dewey's report on the distribution of his vessels, which have to be widely scattered on account of the immense coast line of the Philippines. As the army advances into the interior of Luzon, it becomes more important that a sufficient naval force should be maintained in Manila Bay, and that there should be a considerable force at the naval station at Cavite.

THE FIGHT AT MARILAO.

Gen. Otis Reports the Brilliant Charge of the South Dakota Troops.

Washington, March 29.—The following dispatch has been received from Gen. Otis:

"Manila, March 28.

"Adjutant-General, Washington:

"MacArthur had severe fighting beyond Marilao. Brilliant charge by South Dakota, led by Frost, against famed troops of Aguinaldo, brought from Malolos. Repulsed enemy with slaughter. Adjutant Lien and Lieuts. Adams and Morrison and four enlisted men of that regiment killed. Lieut. McClelland and twenty-two enlisted men wounded. Loss yesterday mostly confined to this regiment.

"Partial destruction of railroad, which is being rapidly repaired, impedes MacArthur's progress. Supply railway trains have now reached Marilao, and MacArthur is pushing on. Our small gunboats are in Bulacan River, where great execution was done yesterday. They will relieve pressure on MacArthur's front materially. Troops in excellent condition and spirits. Proclamation signed Luna, general-in-chief insurgent forces, directs that all towns abandoned be burned. In consequence thereof much country north is flames.

"Prince Lowenstein, with Wheaton's command, morning 26th, took refreshments to officers Second Oregon on firing line. Was cautioned as to danger, but advanced with line when it charged insurgent intrenchments. He was killed by enemy and a friend with him wounded; his remains delivered to friends in city. OTIS."

Bulacan Second to Manila.

Ahead of the American forces the most serious natural obstacle is the Bulacan River, which is in reality an arm of Manila Bay, about a mile wide and very deep, and reaching straight across the path of the advancing American forces. But to offset this Gen. Otis's dispatch of this morning conveys the cheering information that our small gunboats are in the Bulacan River, where great execution was done yesterday, and where they will relieve the pressure on MacArthur's front. This in the judgment of military authorities, is a strategic move of great advantage, as the Bulacan River and the big city of Bulacan may be the key to opening easy access to the insurgent capital, lying just beyond.

Bulacan is a city of importance second only to Manila. It is the capital of the province. It is much larger and stronger than the insurgent capital, Malolos, and with its broad and deep river is a sort of gateway to the capital. Only two small towns, or pueblos, Bocave and Taal, lie between our troops and the river. There is no doubt the bridge over the Bulacan is destroyed, and this is probably the bridge to which Gen. Otis refers. It is felt that some delay may be occasioned in overcoming so important a natural obstacle as the deep, wide river. Once across it, the city of Bulacan lies to the left.

THE SAMOAN TROUBLE.

Necessity of Unanimity Among the Three Powers.

Berlin, March 29.—A corespondent here has obtained from the highest authority at this capital the following explanation of a feature of the Samoan question which has lately arisen. On the report that the American government had cabled to its Admiral at Samoa to act in accordance with the decision of two out of three of the representatives of the Powers, the German government made earnest representation to the American Ambassador, here, Mr. Andrew D. White, that the Berlin Treaty requires the concurrence of the three Powers, and called attention to the dangers which were sure to arise if there was anything like a violation of the treaty.

The American government made a frank and conciliatory answer, which has caused much satisfaction. It recognized the necessity for unanimity upon the part of all three Powers under the treaty, as a condition of any settled policy or permanent action, and declared the Admiral was only authorized to act in agreement with the majority of the representatives of the Powers in a case of emergency which absolutely does not admit of delay, but that in such a case as the ratification or adjustment, the unanimous vote of the three Powers must be sought at the first possible moment, and no permanent arrangement can be made without such unanimity.

The American government, it is announced, cabled its representatives in Samoa to pursue the most friendly and conciliatory policy towards the German representatives and German interests, carefully avoiding everything likely to be misconstrued or to create ill-will.

In consequence of the stories regarding Mataafa having sanctioned sectarian tyranny, the German government assured Mr. White that all its influence would be exerted against interference with the religion of any sect.

The Sound Money League.

New York, March 29.—The annual meeting of the central council of the National Sound-Money League, consisting of the vice-presidents of the League, is in session in this city. President J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska is in attendance. The other officers of the League are A. B. Hepburn, treasurer, New York; associate treasurer, C. L. Hutchinson of Chicago, and general secretary, E. V. Smalley of Minnesota. Those who were present when the meeting was called to order are the following: Platt Rogers of Denver, Col.; N. G. Osborn of New Haven, Conn.; H. A. Du Pont of Winterthur, Del.; E. W. Peet of St. Paul, Minn.; Henry A. Parr of Baltimore, Md.; Edward Atkinson of Boston, Mass.; A. H. Lindecke of St. Paul, Minn.; E. P. Wells of Jamestown, N. Y.; Congressman Charles N. Fowler of Elizabeth, N. J.; William C. Cornwell of Buffalo, N. Y.; William A. Blair of Winston, N. C.; J. M. Devine of La Moure, N. D.; Virgil P. Kline of Cleveland, O.; John B. Jackson of Pittsburg, Pa.; F. G. Bigelow of Milwaukee, Tenn.; Joseph M. Carey of Cheyenne, Wyo. Mr. E. V. Smalley represented, as proxy, the State of Washington.

The Kennedy Murder Trial.

New York, March 29.—In the trial of Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy for the murder of Emeline C. Reynolds, at the Grand Hotel, on the night of August 15, 1898, in the Criminal Court Branch of the Supreme Court, before Justice Williams, Detective-Sergeant Carey identified a piece of lead pipe and a piece of an iron rod as having been found by him in the cellar of Kennedy's house, at New Dorp, S. I. These exactly correspond in diameter with the iron rod and lead pipe (the former inserted in the latter) which formed the bludgeon found in the room where the Reynolds woman was killed. Carey testified that he found in the defendant's cellar a cold-chisel and a vise, to which small pieces of lead adhered. The teeth of this vise exactly fitted some indentations in the leaden bludgeon.

A clerk testified to selling Kennedy a straw hat identical with the one found in the murdered woman's room.

Tammany Will Fight.

New York, March 29.—There is danger that the hundreds of officeholders who lost their positions when Tammany came into power will be unduly elated over the action of Supreme Court Justice Scott in ordering the reinstatement of six men discharged by Fire Commissioner Scannell, Charity Commissioner Keller and Water Commissioner Dalton.

It was stated at the office of the Corporation Counsel to-day that instead of several hundred men being affected by the decision, there were only twenty. Of these the Corporation Counsel admitted six should be reinstated. The cases of the other fourteen will be brought to the courts. The six referred to all come within the finding of the Court of Appeals in the Fleming case, which really had nothing to do with the question of the submission of the rules of the local Civil Service Commission to the State Board.

$50,000,000 Added to Its Capital Stock.

New York, March 29.—From $25,000,000 to $75,000,000 increase in capital stock is the phenomenal financial step taken by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company of New York city.

Information comes from Albany that a certificate was filed with the Secretary of State, announcing the extraordinary increase.

The records at Albany hardly show a parallel to this case, when by one act the capital stock is tripled.

The amount of capital stock before the increase was $23,500,000. The debts and liabilities were $902,736. The shares are $100 each.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company owns and operates the long-distance telephone system. The general offices are at No. 15 Dey street. Edward J. Hall is general manager.

The company's directors include John E. Hudson, C. W. Amory, Henry S. Howe, Melville Egleston and Edward J. Hall.

A New Furnace Company.

Chicago, March 29.—The South Chicago Furnace Company, with $300,000 capital, completed its organization yesterday. It is composed of people largely interested in the Federal Steel Company. It has purchased the Calumet Iron and Steel Company at Irondale from the Northern Trust Company for $374,000.

EAGAN WAS MISTAKEN

His Testimony as to Time Beef was to Keep Is Contradicted.

CONTRACT SAID 24 HOURS

It Was Shown by Yesterday's Testimony That Chicago Packers Had Stored Canned Roast Beef in New York Which Was Afterwards Returned to Chicago, Then Sold to a Wholesale Grocer Who in Turn Sold It for Export to Manila.

Washington, March 29.—Capt. George B. Davis, Commissary of Subsistence, before the beef inquiry court yesterday, said while in the office of the Commissary-General he assisted in preparing the Santiago beef contract with Swift & Co., dealing especially with the clause covering the time beef was to be kept in refrigerators on shore. He talked with Gen. Eagan on this subject, he said, and understood from him that the beef was to be kept in refrigerators seventy-two hours after arrival and twenty-four hours after its removal.

Capt. Davis said boards of survey examined beef which had been complained of while in the refrigerator at Manzanillo and Santiago. In the first case the beef was condemned and in the latter a portion was.

In reply to Major Lee, Capt. Davis said the understanding in the Commissary-General's office was that beef was to be kept good seventy-two hours by the contractors after leaving the ship. "This," he said, "was the extreme limit, but it was not supposed beef would be kept more than twenty-four hours."

Capt. Davis said he heard something of the Powell process for preserving beef, Gen. Watson calling it to the attention of the Department as the result of an experiment made at Tampa.

Major Lee pointed out the apparent discrepancy in Capt. Davis's and Gen. Eagan's testimony as to the conditions under which beef was to be kept for seventy-two hours. He read Gen. Eagan's statement saying that the twenty-four hour clause must be a clerical error. Capt. Davis said:

"Gen. Eagan had simply forgotten. Probably he had not seen the contract for six months. It is not customary to depend upon memory, the contracts being on file."

The witness declared there had been discussion in the office of the Commissary-General on the feasibility of shipping beef on the hoof, but it had been decided not to try the experiment because of the difficulty of getting ships, of landing the cattle, and of taking care of them after landing.

Edward Morris, of the Chicago firm of Morris & Co., stated that his company for ten years had been in the habit of storing canned roast beef on Staten Island for shipment to foreign or domestic points. Some of this beef in 1898 was returned to Chicago.

None of it had been sold to or rejected by a foreign government, and none had been sold abroad and condemned and sent back to the United States for American troops. The beef returned to Chicago was sold to a wholesale grocery house, which sold it to the Government, 90 per cent. going to Manila.

Charles E. Smith, of Jacksonville, Fla., who acted as agent for Armour & Co., testified that the beef delivered at Lakeland was first class. There was nothing to indicate that it had been treated with preservatives, and there was no coating upon it.

TALK OF ALGER'S RETIREMENT.

More Ground for It Now Than Previously The Ohio Election.

Washington, March 29.—There is more ground now for crediting the reports of Secretary Alger's retirement from the Cabinet than at any prior time, but the signs indicate that the event need not be looked for immediately. The President is now getting some advice on the subject from Ohio, where there will be a governorship election next fall, and the idea of some of his advisers is that in a State where even a little scandal goes so far in a campaign the Democrats can make terribly effective use of the cry of "bad beef for the soldiers." It looks, therefore, as if Alger would find "important private business demanding his attention" about the time the Ohio campaign begins, and will draw out without any sensational performances or any outward appearance of being kicked out.

The speech of Representative Lentz, which has been held back and "fixed up" for a belated issue of the Congressional Record, indicates the probable line of Democratic conduct of the campaign in Ohio, and Ohio must be carried at any price this year for its moral effect upon the Republican Presidential nomination next summer.

Some Pension Abuses.

Washington, March 29.—One of the reforms which some of the honest pensioners of the government will try to press upon the next Congress is a law regarding pension attorneys, compelling them to include in their first claims whatever their clients are entitled to, instead of nursing and pettifogging the various demands so as to string them out and collect several fees instead of one. The present practice of the shysters is to put in first a claim under the dependent act of 1890, and collect one fee, then to make a claim for the lowest pension to which the client is entitled under the particular classification within which his case falls, and collect a second fee; and then to apply for an increase under tha classification and collect a third fee. The result of this is to heap a great quantity of needless work upon the Pension Office, and thereby clog machinery which should be employed in grinding out the legitimate business.

Three years ago a leading physician prescribed Ripans Tabules for a professional man living in Brooklyn, and the latter recently said in answer to an inquiry "Since that time my health has been just about perfect. I never weighed more nor felt better than I do now. There have been times during the past three years when, after eating mince pie or highly seasoned food, there would come about a condition in the stomach that was not altogether pleasant, but by promptly swallowing a Tabule that unpleasant condition was at once removed. I have taken no other medicine, with the occasional exception of quinine and whisky when attacked by severe cold, and my present healthy condition can be ascribed to two things only—Providence or Ripans Tabules—most likely to both. I believe that Ripans Tabules will afford relief to any one suffering from any curable derangement of stomach, liver or bowels."

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

TROUBLE AMONG BANQUETTERS.

The Opposers of Mr. Croker's Dinner Cannot Agree Among Themselves.

New York, March 29.—Treasurer Eugene Brewster of the $1 Democratic Dinner Committee issued an ultimatum yesterday, declaring that he would no longer bow to the dictates of the Committee of Seven, which, he said, was trying to change the proposed Jeffersonian dinner from a silver affair to a mere labor demonstration. Mr. Brewster has been having a hard time for the past few days.

When the committee found that the treasurer was not in favor of calling the affair a "Workingman's Jeffersonian Dinner" it appointed George Warner official press agent, with a view, its opponents say, to suppressing the real news. Warner did not attend to his duties satisfactorily, and on last Saturday E. B. Van Vleck, a municipal employe, was selected to succeed him. Since that date Mr. Van Vleck has occupied a chair in Treasurer Brewster's office, and has sought to prevent any news but committee news from becoming public.

Treasurer Brewster was not to be suppressed in that manner, however, and when asked to talk about the present mixed condition of affairs in regard to the dinner, he said:

"There is no telling now just what will be the result of last night's meeting at Clarendon Hall. A sad mistake has been made, and the best that I can hope for is that too many of the supporters of the idea of making the dinner a silver dinner will not withdraw. If the committee wanted to change the name of the dinner it should have done so sooner. It was wrong to do so at this late date. The newly chosen name does not express the idea which prompted the organizers of the dinner in their first endeavor. The public has been led to believe that the dinner was to be a Bryan affair, and many persons have sent subscriptions and purchased tickets for such a dinner. I now have on hand a sum of money approximating $1,000.

"Nine out of every ten of the persons who have sent me money for the dinner have done so on the understanding that it was to be a silver dinner, with Bryan present. I cannot tell whether or not Col. Bryan will attend now that the name has been changed, but I will certainly make an effort to send all this money back if the committee should ever pass any resolution to signify a change of opinion as to the Chicago platform.

DARING MAIL ROBBER CAUGHT.

Mass of Letters, Including Many Check the Result of One Day's Work.

New York, March 29.—By accident an expert letter box thief was caught in the act of robbery last night. Patrolman Dickerson was standing at Church street police station. There the policeman was talking to Paul Hermann of No. 40 West Twelfth street when they saw a man take a package from the top of a letter box on the opposite corner.

He was arrested and taken to the Church street police station. There the police found in his pockets startling evidence that he had made his particular style of robbery exceedingly profitable.

Checks ranging from $6 to $500, promissory notes and a huge bundle of letters recently mailed in this city and which had not been opened were found in his pockets. The letters were addresed to firms in every part of the country. There were seventeen pawn tickets inside a notebook he carried.

The prisoner gave his name as Carol Abeles, 26 years old, living at No. 12 East Tenth street. He said he was a Hungarian of good family. An Austrian passport was in his possession.

The detectives worked for several hours with Abeles, and finally got a confession from him. He said he had been robbing mail boxes for three weeks, and had been taught how to purloin letters by a friend.

His method and the sort of wire instruments he used in drawing the letters through the drop near the top of the mail boxes the police, last night, refused to disclose. They said they had no wish to enlighten other thieves on the subject of robbing mail boxes.

Abeles's system evidently was a good one, for he said that all of the plunder found in his possession last night, except the promissory notes, was the result of one day's work.

The police say that either Abeles is a scapegoat for some one else or is one of the cleverest criminals they have come across in a long time. Many detectives went to look at him in the police station last night, but no one recognized him.

Inquiries will be made in Vienna and through Hungary if the police fail to find anything concerning his antecedents in this city. They think he is too clever a thief to have been at work only three weeks.

A photograph of a young and handsome woman was found in Abele's inside waistcoat pocket. "Next my heart" he said, with a faint smile, as the detectives took it from him. The photograph was taken in Vienna.

In the prisoner's notebook opposite the pawn tickets was written what the police say is Abeles's motto and rule of conduct. It reads:

"God helps those that help themselves."

Wages Increased.

Philadelphia, March 29.—Isaac Sheppard & Company, iron founders, have notified their employes, nearly 200 in number, of an increase in wages, beginning next week. An advance of 10 per cent. will be made on the piece prices of moulding, and an advance of 5 per cent. will be made on the piece price of stove moulding.

Exeter, N. H., March 29.—The cut-down of 10 per cent. made in the wages of the employes of the Exeter Cotton Mills in January, 1898, has been restored. The Exeter Manufacturing Company, which controls the mills, has six hundred hands on its pay-roll.

Returning Dead from Cuba.

New York, March 29.—The United States transport Crook arrived here today from Cuba and Porto Rico, bringing the bodies of more than 500 soldiers and sailors, volunteers and regulars, who died from wounds or disease in those islands since the beginning of the war with Spain.

When the Crook arrived all government buildings and forts displayed flags at half-mast and Fort Wadsworth fired a salute. The ship docked at the foot of Pacific street, Brooklyn.

RAPID TRANSIT FOR N. Y.

The Metropolitan Street Railway Co. Offers to Dig a Tunnel.

OFFER TAKEN SERIOUSLY

Proposed to Run from the Battery to Kingsbridge and Transfer to the Surface Lines—Wants a Perpetual Charter and Will Pay Five Per Cent of the Gross Receipts When Road is Paying.

New York, March 29.—The metropolis is considerably stirred up by the offer made to the Rapid Transit Commission by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, present owners of the Broadway and Second Avenue lines, to build an underground railway the length of Manhattan Island, and to run the same as a rapid transit road.

Senator Stranahan will some time this week offer at Albany amendments to the Rapid Transit act which will give the New York City Rapid Transit Commissioners authority to accept a proposition for the building of the underground railway by a new coporation to be known as the Tunnel Company. This company is to be formed by large stockholders in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. The entire route to Kingsbridge would begin with two tracks at the Battery up to the end of Elm street, and then four tracks up Fourth avenue to Forty-second street, to Broadway, to 104th street. At this point, in the Rapid Transit Commissioners' plans, the four tracks separate, two going up Eleventh avenue to Kingsbridge, and two turning east, running under Lenox avenue and across the Harlem at 138th street, thence on elevated tracks, skirting Bronx Park to the city line.

Should the offer be accepted the Tunnel Company will begin work within three months on the main route from the Battery to 104th street, and complete the main line and the Kingsbridge route from 104th street north within three years. The company say that when the West Side or Kingsbridge route is paying 5 per cent. upon the actual cost of construction and equipment they will immediately begin work on the East Side section and complete it within two years. The Rapid Transit Commission is to determine when the 5 per cent. is earned. The 5 per cent. of cost in construction and equipment is to include the cost of all private property purchased for connections and stations, together with a fair proportion of the cost of any power house, machinery or other plant constructed or acquired for the joint use of the Tunnel Company and the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Any differences of opinion as to cost arising between the Tunnel Company and the city of New York is to be settled by three arbitrators, one representing the Tunnel Company, one for the Rapid Transit Commission and the third to be selected by the two first named.

It is provided that the Tunnel Company may lease the road in perpetuity to the Metropolitan Company. The latter company shall have the right to run its present surface cars into the tunnels from any of its routes, so that continuous car passage, as well as a transfer system, may be provided. So that this may be done, the Metropolitan Company may provide stations east and west in the city, where transfers will be good for continuous track connections over surface routes and thence on the underground route northwest or northeast.

The Tunnel Company asks that it shall have free of cost, other than its franchise tax, the exclusive subway rights in all the tunnels for its own use or for rental. It also asks that the city give it free of cost adequate station room under City Hall Park and at the junction of Broadway with Seventh, Eighth, Columbus and Amsterdam avenues. Finally the company asks that its real and personal property forming part of the railway routes shall be exempt from taxes until it has paid 5 per cent. on the cost of construction and equipment.

For the privileges named above the company offers to do many notable things. It agrees that each year the city shall receive 5 per cent. of the gross receipts from the operation of the underground route, this 5 per cent. to be paid only after the fixed charges are provided for. The fixed charges are the operating expenses and the 5 per cent. on the cost of building. The earnings of the road are to be ascertained by taking all the fares received by the separate business of the road and by an equal division of the joint business between the Metropolitan surface lines and the underground road.

The company further offers to run trains for two miles below Forty-second street at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, and nowhere below Ninety-sixth street at a less rate than twenty miles an hour. It will carry passengers from the Battery to Kingsbridge in thirty-five minutes.

The company is to charge 10 cents fare on the express trains, which will include free transfer to any surface line operated by the Metropolitan Company. On the non-express trains the fair will be 5 cents, and a transfer to Metropolitan cars will be provided for 3 cents additional. Similarly a passenger on a Metropolitan surface car, having paid 5 cents, will obtain transportation on the Rapid Transit route, except express trains, for 3 cents additional. This is the substance of the new proposition.

The President Home Again.

Washington, March 29.—President McKinley yesterday returned to Washington, after an outing of two weeks and a day. The special train bearing the President and the members of the party who have been with him through the trip reached here at 5 p. m.

The party comprised President and Mrs. McKinley, Vice President and Mrs. Hobart, Garret Hobart, Jr., Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, Dr. Rixey, United States Navy, the President's physician; Mr. George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the President; Mr. Barnes, stenographer to the President.

Owing to a lack of definite knowledge of the exact hour of the return there were only a few people gathered at the Pennsylvania depot to witness the arrival. The party entered carriages and drove to their homes.

TO WELCOME THE RALEIGH.

Mayor Van Wyck Will Appoint Reception Committee of 100 Citizens.

New York, March 29.—Mayor Van Wyck, in accordance with resolutions passed by the Municipal Assembly, will appoint a committee of at least one hundred representative citizens, who will plan for a reception to the United States steamship Raleigh and her officers and crew when she arrives here from Manila. The resolutions, which were offered by Alderman McCall, are as follows:

"Whereas, the victory of that sterling American sailor, Admiral George Dewey, at Manila, on May 1, 1898, sent a thrill of patriotic pride through the American heart and was a further earnest that the American Navy of the present day is amply able to preserve the laurels won in earlier wars by Jones, Barry, Lawrence, Decatur, Hull, Perry, Stockton and Farragut; and

"Whereas, The U. S. S. Raleigh, one of the fighting cruisers that participated in the magnificent victory over Montojo's fleet in Asiatic waters, is the first vessel to return and is rapidly approaching New York city, the great metropolis of the American Nation, and a fitting and appropriate welcome should be given to Capt. J. B. Coghlan, his officers and crew of the said steamer Raleigh; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we, the members of the Municipal Assembly of the city of New York, hereby respectfully request Hon. Robert A. Van Wyck, Mayor of this city, to appoint such committee or committees as in his opinion shall be deemed appropriate to extend a cordial and fitting welcome to the Raleigh, her commander, officers and crew, and to take such further action as may be essential to make said reception a matter of civic pride to this commonwealth of Greater New York."

Editor Taylor of Boston Globe Sued.

Boston, March 29.—James C. Jordan, eldest son of the late Eben D. Jordan of the firm of Jordan, Marsh & Co., has brought suit in the United States Circuit Court here against Gen. Charles H. Taylor and against Gen. Taylor, Eben D. Jordan, Jr., and Henry G. Nichols, executors and trustees under the will of Eben D. Jordan, who died on Nov. 15, 1895.

It is well known that when Gen. Taylor assumed control of the Globe, in the early eighties, Eben D. Jordan, Sr., furnished nearly all the capital to make the paper successful and became its largest stockholder. James C. Jordan says in his bill of equity that soon after his father's death certain shares of the Globe Newspaper Company were sold by the executors of the estate—Taylor, Jordan and Nichols—to one of themselves, Gen. Taylor. He alleges that this transfer of stock was illegal, and asks that the transfer be declared invalid, and also that Gen. Taylor should render to the executors an account of the proceeds from the stock since its transfer to him.

Biennial Sessions Killed in New York.

Albany, March 29.—A motion to take the biennial sessions amendment resolution from the table was defeated yesterday by a vote of 25 ayes to 24 noes, the motion being declared lost. In accordance with an agreement made last week that unless the supporters of the amendment mustered twenty-six votes, a majority of the Senate, it would be regarded as lost for this session. Those who voted for Mr. Ellsworth's motion were twenty-four Republicans and one Democrat (Mr. McCarren of Kings). Twenty-one Democrats and three Republicans (Malby, Brackett and Willis) voted against the motion. Senator Graney would have voted with them if he had been present, making the vote a tie. This action kills the biennial sessions amendment. If it is ever brought up again it will have to pass two successive Legislatures.

Life Assessment Era Ended.

Boston, March 29.—The House has passed to be engrossed without any debate the bill for the purpose of putting an end to the assessment life-insurance companies in Massachusetts by letting them into the field of the old-line companies "by the back door," as it was put by one of the assessment officials before the committee at one of the hearings. The bill is known as the Dewey bill, from the member of that name from Westfield, who had most to do with it, though it is understood that some of the ideas are those of Commissioner Cutting himself. The bill has completed the passage of both Senate and House without a word of debate, and there is no reason to doubt that Gov. Wolcott will sign it. Therefore the end has come of assessment life insurance in Massachusetts, after it had flourished for about thirty years.

Assessment Association in Connecticut.

New Haven, March 29.—The annual report of Commissioner of Insurance Betts, part second, on life, accident, fidelity, and surety companies, is out.

The Commissioner renews his severe criticisms of the assessment associations in whose large decrease of outstanding insurance—from $736,751,118 to $606,320,929—he sees signs of "early disintegration." He disapproves of the "stipulated premium" plan of relief for such companies as a "half-way measure," and as meaning a condition of affairs as bad, if not worse, than the original one. He predicts as probable much suffering and loss from lapses by the older policy-holders. The large gain by the old-line companies is largely due, he says, to the rise of securities in the market, and he notes with approval the setting aside by those corporations of large amounts to provide against the reduction of the rate of interest.

Anti-Quay Men Combine.

Harrisburg, March 29.—The first important break in the balloting for United States Senator took place yesterday, when all the anti-Quay Republicans deserted "favorites" and cast their ballots solidly for Congressman John Dalzell, of Pittsburg. The ballot, the sixtieth of the session, resulted:

Quay, R., 87; Jenks, D., 69; Dalzell, R., 51. Total votes cast, 207; necessary to a choice, 104; absent and not voting, 46.

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

The Evening Paper.

To a question as to the relative value of morning and evening papers as advertising media, an advertising manager of one of the great department stores of New York, replied as follows:

You ask me which I consider the most valuable as an advertising medium—the evening paper or the morning newspaper. I will say that a great deal depends on whether the advertiser is catering to the popular trade or to what is generally designated as "the classes." If the advertiser's trade is with the wealthier class, then I should say that the morning newspaper is quite as good as the evening paper. On the other hand, if the advertiser desires to secure the trade of the laborer, the mechanic, the clerk, etc., who has hardly time to read even the most important news on his way to work in the morning, to say nothing of reading advertisements, and who seldom finds time to do any more reading of that nature until he returns home in the evening, I should most emphatically declare the evening paper to be the best advertising medium. In the evening the mechanic or clerk has ample time, as a rule, to read his evening paper, and to discuss with his wife any interesting news, attractive offers or advertisements he may find in its columns, and to come to a definite conclusion as to just where to buy. The experience of a great many years confirms this belief, and in our own business we are now confining ourselves almost exclusively to the use of evening papers, with most gratifying results. I am prepared to make the unqualified statement that any business house doing business on a strictly cash basis and catering to the popular trade, should confine its advertising to the evening papers, wherever it can do so.

Politics and the C. E.

According to a dispatch from Cleveland, Ohio, the Christian Endeavor Union is taking an important part in the local municipal campaign for the first time in the union's history. Every member of the union living in the city has received a letter from E. J. Hart, Chairman of the Christian Citizenship Committee of the Endeavores, asking them to oppose the election of Mayor McKisson, the Republican candidate for re-election. Many of the churches are participating in this campaign and political sermons are frequent.

Considering the intense Christian Endeavor spirit that prevades Plainfield the action of the Cleveland members of that order will doubtless be read with interest.

The comparison is rather far-fetched, indeed, but then when we read Editor Runyon's statement that he is enjoying himself in the capacity of a nuisance, as Editor Rollinson avers, he is emulating in a degree the noncha-lance that Nero exhibited when he fiddled while Rome burned. In his airy consideration of just criticism our esteemed contemporary is treading on dangerous ground. Some times it is well to know when one has got enough of a certain thing. Thus far it seems as though the Rahwegian has the best end of the argument.

The Newark Sunday Call declares that "the money markets are, nowadays, as open as the vegetable markets, and if you can assure the moneyed man that he will get his interest and principal he will let you have the use of his money for the current rate, which may be as low as three per cent, and may be as high as six. To forbid a borrower who has not good security from making a loan within reasonable limits would be a hardship to the poor and a check upon ambition."

The Philadelphia Ledger points out that "Congress has a weapon within reach to give the death stroke to nearly all of the rapacious trusts now existing. It is a gross perversion of the taxing power to impose a tariff which, without yielding revenue to the Government, enables trusts to plunder American citizens. In every instance where a domestic monopoly puts exactions upon the consumer Congress should repeal the duty and thus free the public from oppression."

New Jersey has a champion in the Philadelphia Inquirer, which rises to remark: "If, instead of constantly kicking against New Jersey because she grants concessions to manufacturers, some of the other States were to imitate her in that respect, perhaps they would discover one or two reasons for her otherwise inexplicable course. What in the world would New Jersey be, anyhow, if it were not for her two M's—manufacturers and mosquitoes?"

Mayor Carter Harrison refers to himself as a candidate for renomination and re-election as "big enough to handle the Board of Aldermen. In fact, I was bigger than the Aldermen put together." Now we don't know about that. Until the Hon. Bath House John sums up the situation from the Aldermanic standpoint we refuse to be committed to the ideas of Mayor Harrison. There is always two sides to an argument.

A New York policeman who shot a boy without provocation and was suspended from the police force fifteen months ago, has been drawing full pay throughout that period. Who will dare say that there is not a precedent for the Eagan case?

There were 549 bills introduced in the recent Legislature, of which 318 were House bills and 231 Senate bills. Less than half, 250, passed both houses, and 222 are now laws.

Three States in the Union have adopted a new holiday to be called Dewey Day. By George that's good.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

President Reed knew that he was making an unpopular ruling when he declared out of order a resolution to relieve a committee of the consideration of a bill which had been committed to it, but he was abiding by the traditions of the Senate. If those traditions are wrong and inimical to public interests, as seems perfectly clear, it is for the Senate to correct the tradition by a written rule, and not for the President to override a custom which has the force of a rule.—New York Tribune.

We have seen some pretty neat and effectual scalping of cocky editors in our time, but we never saw the job more artistically performed, than in the lifting of the hair from the noddle of brother Runyon, of the Plainfield Courier News, by Editor Rollinson, of the Rahway Advocate, last week. The Plainfield editor has been making a desperate effort the past winter to organize a concerted movement among the newspaper publishers of the State, in behalf of a bill for the publication of the laws. Because other editors looked upon the project with indifference, and Governor Voorhees did not throw himself loose in its behalf, the Plainfield man got mad, and ran amuck in his paper against everybody in sight, attributing the failure to support his scheme to all sorts of unworthy motives. The Advocate shows, from the record, that Runyon has been for years, a chronic but in the main, disappointed office and "pap" hunter, and has used his paper to air his personal grievances, to the injury of the party and its trusted leaders.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The large photographs of the choir of Grace P. E church, which are now on exhibition with the notices of the rendition of the cantata "Belshazzar," in the Casino next week, by the members of the choir, were taken by Willard M. Miner, of East Sixth street. The interior of the church is shown, with the choir in their robes, standing in their accustomed places. The photograph was taken at Christmas time, when the church was decorated with greens. It was taken by flash-light. Most of the faces are very distinct and easily recognized.

The motormen on the local trolley cars have their troubles as well as the rest of mankind. It has been found that at night the light from the interior of the car that shines through the front windows and door, is apt to make it all the more difficult for the motorman to see any distance ahead. To do away with this black curtains are now hung across the front door, thus leaving the motorman in darkness except for his headlight, which does not shine on him but on the tracks in front.

Those who are at all familiar with the pleasures and sports of the sailor while at sea, have often heard of the visit of Neptune and his courtiers when the Equitorial region is reached. Manager Maze Edwards, of Stillman Music Hall, has just heard from his son, R. M. Edwards, an apprentice of the United States cruiser Wilmington. It was the first time that young Edwards had crossed "the line" and on the occasion of Neptune's visit to the decks of the man o'-war, he was duly initated in all the mysteries of the sea-God's royal domain and proclaimed a full-fledged sailor. In the letter, Mr. Edwards received a copy of "Neptune's Greeting" which was duly awarded the young man on receiving his proper degree. The greeting is a printed document, gotten up in truly original style. It is decorated with purple stamps of the order and the seal of his Oceanic Majesty is affixed in purple ink. A trident, a razor, a shark, a warship and an ass's head give due importance to the appearance of the document.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

There was a goodly gathering at Music Hall last night to witness the performance of the charming play, "On the Hudson," by the Sawtelle Dramatic Company. The favorable impression made Monday night was confirmed by the excellent work of Miss Jessie Sawtelle and her supporting company. Tonight the popular play of "The Captain's Mate" will be presented and a fine performance may be expected. Tomorrow afternoon the matinee bill will be "Faust," when Miss Sawtelle will appear as Marguerite. Ladies will find these matinee performances thorough and pleasing. The specialties introduced are novel and refined and none should fail to witness the artistic work of little "Queen Mab," who is without question the most versatile prodigy that ever appeared here.

Don't forget the stage hands' benefit at Music Hall Thursday, April 6th. They have secured one of the best attractions on the road—Donnelly and Girard's greatest of all farce comedy successes, "Natural Gas." The company played at Waterbury, Conn., last week, and this is what The American of that city said of them: "The audience filled the house and the reception tendered to Mr. Girard and the members of his company was enthusiastic enough to prove beyond all question of doubt that he and the show were gladly welcomed. For nearly three hours the crowd of spectators was kept in a frenzy of delight 'Natural Gas,' as presented by the well-known firm of Donnelly & Girard, has been revised, improved, and is fully up-to-date. The show last night was no exception to the rule which Mr. Girard established some years ago. The members of his company are decidedly clever in their special lines, and headed by the inimitable Girard the show is fifty per cent. better than ever." Reserved seats for the benefit performance can be obtained at the box office from now on.

No theatres in Greater New York are in a position to present any better programmes than are given every week at F. F. Proctor's two continuous theatres, the Twenty third Street Theatre, just west of Sixth avenue, and the big Pleasure Palace at Fifty-eight street, Third avenue. The requirements for these two Metropolitan playhouses necessitates the employment of two score of features, sometimes approximating 100 performers, and naturally any manager utilizing such a vast force of specialty artists commands pretty nearly the pick of the vaudeville market. The programmes at the Proctor houses prove that is so, for there are more genuine debuts and vaudeville successes offered Mr. Proctor's patrons than at any other continuous theatres in the country.

—At the next meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union to be held next Monday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Miss Nuttman, vice president of the Elizabeth Union, will teach the lesson "The Annointing in Bathany."

DRINK GRAIN-O

after you have concluded that you ought not to drink coffee. It is not a medicine but food, and delicious, because it is health, invigorating and appetizing. It is made from pure grains and has the rich seal brown color and tastes like the finest grades of coffee and costs about a quarter as much. Children like it and thrive on it because it is a genuine food drink containing nothing but nourishment. Ask your grocer for Grain-O, the new food drink. 15 and 25c.

The hopping event was won by Regent Hand and the jumping contest was a tie between Regent Hand and Past Regent Buckley. The tie was won by Regent Hand and was decided by the toss of a coin.

WESTFIELD

(Special Correspondence to The Press.)

Westfield, March 29—The officials of the Central Railroad have started a vigorous war against the crowd of young men who congregate nightly at the depot and make it unfit for ladies to pass. Saturday night or rather early Sunday morning five of this gang broke into the depot on the south side of the track and acted in a very disorderly manner. C. A. Brown, the station agent, swore out a warrant for their arrest, and yesterday afternoon William Perrine, George Woodruff, Timothy McCarthy and Patrick O'Connor were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Collins with a charge of "drunk and disorderly" staring them in the face. John Pendergast, the night ticket agent, appeared as a witness against them, and as they had no defence the Justice found them guilty and fined them $5 each, or ten days in the county jail. A few good doses like this would teach them to respect the property and rights of others.

OUR FASHION LETTER

SPRING FASHIONS ARE NOW TAKING DEFINITE FORM.

Foulard Pre-eminently the Fabric—It is Usually Made With a Double Skirt—The Regulation Tailor Made Shirt Waists—The Motor Car Coat.

Definite conclusions as to the fashions for spring are becoming more possible every day. A cynic once said that dress has always been, is and will always be woman's religion, and that she changes it often. It must be admitted that one fashion supplants another in rapid succession, and the feminine mind is ever seeking something new in materials, trimmings and designs, but this only goes to prove that woman is a superior creature. She who follows Fashion in all of her guises is an experiment, and a philosopher has told us that it is the experimenters who move the world. At the same time, some things, by their vast superiority, have become fixtures, and of these is the summer silk. Nothing takes its place in woman's wardrobe, and from early spring until late fall it adapts itself admirably to the coquetry of the to-day hot, to-morrow cool American summer.

Foulard is pre-eminently the fabric for this gown this year, as it was last. A year ago dark and light colored taffetas, in tiny stripes and checks, tried to get an inning, but those who tried them said that gowns of this material in no way compared with those of soft China silk or foulard in point of grace, comfort or durability. With the present soft, clinging styles, taffeta, unless very soft, is out of the question this season, and perhaps that is just as well, for the new foulards are exquisite in texture, design and coloring. Formerly color was the first consideration in foulard gowns; now it is composition of line, as it is in dresses and waists of every kind. This is a technical term, but every woman readily understands that it means that carrying out of a harmonious line which characterizes every new design. The ornamentation of one's frock, be it a severe tailor-made affair or an afternoon toilet, must be in harmony with the most characteristic lines of the form. The long, flowing lines which distinguish many of the new gowns insure a graceful effect even on a naturally clumsy figure.

In Paris dressmakers are combining foulard with cloth, cashmere and canvas, but here, up to this time, no models of this sort have been shown. Foulard is combined with the transparent fabrics such as chiffon, lace and finely embroidered muslin. In point of color all shades of violet have the preference, though the dozen and one blues are considered quite as good style. While the foulard gown is usually made with a double skirt, it and the bodice from one scheme, for what decorates one decorates the other. The curving or straight line is carried up or down from one into the other, and they are not to be considered apart. This is well illustrated in the first model, which is effective when carried out in national blue silk with a cream figure. Bands of three-inch cream insertion are set in at the shoulder seams, and continue to the waist line at the back, while in front they have the appearance of running down to the hem of the skirt. The long pointed overdress is so shaped as to show these insertions on the skirt, and is edged with white chiffon ruching. A vest of plain chiffon, outlined with tiny ruchings, finishes the waist.

The skirts of the new foulards fit so closely from the waist to some little distance below the knees that it is necessary to make the overdress very long, since nothing in the way of brevity or embellishment can be allowed to interfere with the clinging effect. Even if the overdress is well rounded up on one side, as in some of the imported models, it sweeps away well into the hem of the foundation skirt on the other side and behind. The idea of continuity, so marked a feature in the embellishment of spring gowns, leads up to the princess dress, which, in the softer silks, stops short at what we call the princess effect, a far more practical, useful and becoming method. This half princess, half redingote, is being used a good deal in Paris. Around the hem of soft silk dresses, even those designed for rough-and-ready wear, there may be any amount of fulness and fluffy trimmings; so much, as a matter of fact, that the average woman will have to take a good many lessons in the art of walking before she will be able to get about with any degree of safety or grace. For the space of ten or twelve inches you may indulge in as many man-shaped flounces or plaitings edged with chiffon ruchings or lace or muslin appliques as you have a mind to.

Broad guipure collars, fastened on one side with black velvet loops and crystal buttons trim some of the foulard gowns; others are made exceedingly rich looking by the introduction of bands of embroidered satin on waist and skirt. The bolero, which is in general favor, also has its place on the summer silk, but is usually of heavy lace.

Man often wonders how woman can give her mind so completely to the breezy fantasies of spring, while winter still forces keen east winds and biting frosts on her attention; neither can he understand how she can think of thin summer silks, much less have them made, when the warmth of heavy gowns and furs is still most acceptable. When it comes to the subject of fashion, woman always thinks, talks and plans ahead of time, and this is well, for, as it is, soon dressmakers and tailors will be so overwhelmed with work that everybody will be complaining that no one can get anything to wear. In the meantime it is well for women to be very careful not to turn one way or the other, nor to listen to this, that and the other rumor, and not to pay the least attention to the whims of advocates of extreme styles, but to steer straight for the very latest fashion which Paris sends, and that is the cloth gown. Every woman who desires to be smart has already, or will have this spring, a cloth gown, and every week finds something new, in minor modifications, in cloth models. Very fine cloths in the most delicate colors, as well as the darker shades, are ready to appear. The plain cloth skirt has justified all predictions, for it remains triumphant, having ousted shaped flounces, overdresses and even tunics from the field. This skirt is perfect in fit and does not tolerate one faulty detail. Indeed, the figure appears to be simply moulded to fit the dress, and yet the skirt has a very full and graceful flow about the feet. Right here it might be well to say a word about the petticoat, for upon its perfect fit largely depends that of the skirt. Of course, it is gored and closely fitted around the hips; furthermore, the very newest design is absolutely without fulness at the waist line in the back, fastening at the left side in front. In color it should bear out some detail of the costume.

White cloth gowns are already being much used for at homes in the Lenten season. One of the most charming models of the sort noted is the last, which is cut away on waist and skirt to show black and gold embroidery in an open-work design on white satin. As hot weather advances gowns of white cashmere and cloth will be much used for day wear at fashionable resorts.

Pastelle is a new cloth, with a dull surface likely to be much worn. A new feature of the cloth gown, fashioned with a tunic and bodice cut in one, is its plain silk skirt trimmed with several narrow bands of cloth; again it is worn over a kilt plaited skirt of silk. The most striking of these redingotes, as they are called in Paris, fall in a point at the back. Another item is the trimming of the sides and back of cloth skirts with a series of narrow velvet ribbon ruffles for about a foot above the hem. The front of such skirts is stitched on in panel effect.

The silk blouse and the cotton shirt waist are receiving much attention just now; for one of the chief of their many uses is to tide their devotees over from one season to another. A number of smart models in silk and wash materials are shown in the group. In silk the pure white waist is the swell thing, provided it is stylishly made and trimmed with marked simplicity. Elaborate embellishment of any sort is no longer tolerated, and all waists must be made with the long line in front. Many of the cotton waists are made of fine lawn, tucked all over in bias or straight up and down tucks, and are finished with small revers and a fancy collar. The sleeves of such waists are not made like the ordinary shirt waist sleeve, but are tucked at the top and finished at the hand with a flaring tucked cuff. Other white waists show insertions of embroidery, and still others are made of all over Swiss embroidery and Valenciennes lace and are worn over colored silk linings.

Practical women favor more highly the regulation tailor-made shirt waist, which is fashioned this year of plain or striped madras and figured or satin striped pique. Bayadere stripes are out of favor.

Glücklicher Weise war das Wetter wenig einladend, so daß beim Einsturz keinerlei Besucher verunglückt sind. Wien. Von hier sind die Bankiers Siegmund Drechsler und Wilhelm Schonberger nach Unterschlagungen von 500,000 Gulden flüchtig geworden. —Dieser Tage starb der älteste Mann von Wien, L. M. Kohn, im Alter von 112 Jahren. Der Greis, den der Tod schon fast vergessen zu haben schien, verbrachte den größten Theil seiner 112 Jahre in harter Arbeit und Dürftigkeit, die letzten Jahre in vollständiger Armuth. Und doch blieb er bis an sein Lebensende körperlich und geistig gesund. Er war am 20. Januar 1787 in Frauenkirchen im Wieselburger Komitat geboren.—Der Faktor der österreichisch-ungarischen Bank, Franz Perick, hat Selbstmord begangen, nachdem entdeckt worden war, daß er Fälschern Banknotenplatten gegeben hatte.

Garsten. Im hiesigen Zuchthause ist kürzlich der Bauer J. Pircher von Haiming im Oberinnthal, der vor ein paar Jahren sein Heimathdorf in Brand gesteckt hatte und deshalb zu lebenslänglichem schwerem Kerker verurtheilt worden war, nach längerer Krankheit gestorben.

Klagenfurt. Vor dem hiesigen Gericht hat ein Heirathsagent eine Klage anhängig gemacht, in welcher er den Prinzen Friedrich von Schönburg-Waldenburg wegen einer Heiraths-Kommission verklagt, die ihm für seine Vermittelung der Heirath des Prinzen mit Alix, Prinzessin von Bourbon, Tochter Don Carlos', vom Prinzen versprochen worden ist, und die der Prinz zu zahlen sich nach der Hochzeit weigerte.

Krakau. In Rymanow wurde die Leiche des vor einiger Zeit verstorbenen Forstbeamten Laszcz zwecks Feststellung der Todesursache ausgegraben. Laszcz ist derselbe Förster, von dem es hieß, er habe mit dem Grafen Potocki ein Duell gehabt. Die Angelegenheit erregt großes Aufsehen, und es knüpfen sich daran allerlei unkontrollirbare Gerüchte.

Neusalz. Der an einer hiesigen Sparkasse angestellt gewesene Buchhalter Wilhelm Weiß ist nach Defraudirung von 27,000 Gulden flüchtig geworden.

Rohrau. Hier ist das Haus, in welchem der berühmte Komponist Joseph Haydn am 31. März 1732 als Sohn eines armen Wagenbauers das Licht der Welt erblickte, abgebrannt.

Teplitz. In Soborten sind die Fabriksarbeiterinnen Francisca Rupprich und Marie Kovacek, Beide 15 Jahre, und der Fabriksarbeiter Andel beim Eislaufen auf dem Teiche eingebrochen. Beide Mädchen ertranken, Andel wurde gerettet.

Schweiz.

Bern. Zufolge des neuen „Ehrenfolgengesetzes" sind von Anfangs August bis Ende Dezember 1898 einzig in der Stadt Bern 600 ausgeschätzte Schuldner ausgeschrieben und außer bürgerliche Ehrenrechte gestellt worden. —Im Alter von 84 Jahren starb in Marberg N. Dietler-Salchli, seinerzeit Oberst der Berner Kavallerie.

Zürich. Der Deutsche Hilfsverein Zürich, ein von Reichsdeutschen und Oesterreichern gebildeter Unterstützungsverein für bedürftige Landsleute, nimmt der Züricherischen Armenpflege alljährlich ein Stück Arbeit ab. So wurden im verflossenen Jahre wieder 2656 Personen (2504 im Jahre 1897) mit 14,000 Francs unterstützt; bis zur Grenze wurden 282 Personen, bis in ihre Heimath 432 Personen (357 Reichsdeutsche und 75 Oesterreicher) befördert. Die Meisten der Unterstützten (1270) waren ihrem Beruf nach Handwerker.

Glarus. Die Gemeinde Elm hat die Errichtung eines Elektrizitätswerkes am Sernft im Kostenvoranschlag von etwa 40,000 Francs beschlossen.

Freiburg. Der Verkehrs- und Verschönerungsverein in Mürten will ein Seebad-Unternehmen auf Aktien mit einem Kapital von 150,000 Francs gründen. Das Wasser des Murtensees besitzt die Eigenschaft, bei Nervenaffektionen heilende Wirkung auszuüben.

Graubünden. Die kantonale Regierung hat die von der Firma Frott u. Westermann in Zürich nachgesuchte Konzession zu der Errichtung eines hohen Wuhres in der Albula bei Sils zur Gewinnung größerer Wasserkräfte verweigert, weil eine so große Wasseransammlung gefährlich sei.

CHAPTER XII.

The afternoon and night that followed brought little comfort to the cabin passengers. Not till nearly dark did the steamer find the shelter of another island, and all the intervening hours she wallowed in the trough of the sea, with the wind abeam, and by the time the heights of Carmen island loomed between them and the red glow of the sunset skies Turnbull had thrice wished himself in hotter climes than even Arizona and could only feebly damn his junior for coming down to ask if there were not something he could do for him.

"Yes; take this pistol and shoot me," moaned the sufferer. "No, of course, I don't want brandy and water nor you nor anybody. It's simply scandalous for you to be up and well. Go away!"

And, though Loring sorely needed counsel, he felt that Turnbull was in no mood for talk and so climbed back on deck again. He had made up his mind to tell the purser the whole story and to ask him to examine the contents of the package. All the livelong night the Idaho plowed and careened through the rolling seas, gaining scant relief off Santa Catalina and San Jose, but when in the undimmed splendor of the morning sun she swept proudly into the placid, landlocked harbor of old La Paz Loring was the only man among her passengers to appear on deck. Even after she dropped anchor and one or two bedraggled victims were hoisted from below and dropped over the side to be rowed ashore none of the women of the gay Guaymas party was able to climb the stairs. The wind was gone by sundown, and the Idaho once more steered coastwise for Cape San Lucas. The night wore on and Loring was still alone when, just as the tinkle of the ship's bell told that 9 o'clock had come, with a soft, warm air drifting off the land, a fragile little form issued slowly from the companionway, and the stewardess smiled invitingly on the blue eyed officer, as though begging him to aid her feeble charge to a seat.

"I have brought the senorita up for half an hour. I made her come," said she as she dumped the pile of shawls into a spreading chair and began preparing a nest, while Pancha, turning away at sight of Loring, sank to the end of the bench, the very seat she occupied as they put to sea from Guaymas. But now it was Loring who tendered his arm, and, calmly ignoring her evident if unspoken protest, aided in lifting her from the bench and seating her in the depths of the easy reclining chair. The stewardess, with practiced hand, carefully tucked the rugs about her and, bidding the little damsel make the most of the soft, salt air while she herself ran below to prepare her chocolate, would have gone at once but for Pancha's trembling yet restraining hand. The child seemed to cling to her in desperation. Rapidly and in low tone she poured forth a torrent of pleading, and the kind hearted woman looked about her in perplexity and distress.

"What can I do, sir?" said she to Loring in English. "This poor little thing has eaten nothing since she came aboard. She has cried herself sick. She is as weak as a baby and must have food, yet she will not let me go."

"Stay with her until she is calmer," said Loring. "I'll get what is needed."

"But I cannot. The other ladies call for me incessantly."

A little disk of gold was slipped quicky into the disengaged hand. "Let them call awhile, but don't you go," was the double answer.

It is odd to note how soon the troubled waves subside along those summer shores. The Idaho was only lazily bowing and courtesying to old Neptune now. A long, languorous heave of the billows, as though worn out with the furious lashing of the last few days, was the only greeting of the broadening sea as the steamer rounded the southeast headland and slowly bore away for Cape San Lucas. Little Pancha's dusky head was resting wearily yet resignedly on the pillow, her hand still clasping that of the stewardess, as an attendant from below appeared with a little tray and some scalding hot chocolate, some tender slices of the breast of chicken, some tempting little dainties were quickly set before her.

"Make her take them," whispered Loring from the shadows, and, once the effort was made and the "ice broken," the dark eyed invalid ate almost eagerly. At three bells the stewardess was allowed to slip away for just a little more chocolate, and glancing furtively, fearfully about her Pancha was aware of a dim masculine form seated not ten feet away. She knew it was Loring and yet could not move. She felt that he must presently rise and accost her, and she shrank from the meeting in dismay, yet soon began to look again and to note that he had not changed his attitude. Apparently indifferent to her presence, he was gazing dreamily out across the slowly heaving billows, wherein the stars were dancing.

The stewardess was gone full quarter of an hour, and in all that time he never even once glanced her way, and poor Pancha found her eyes flitting toward him every little while in something almost akin to fascination. Could it be that he had forgotten or that he did not recognize her? Yet she had heard how both Loring and the other, that older officer, Colonel Turnbull, had carried her below as she slowly rallied from her fainting spell two nights before. Surely she thought she remembered seeing recollection or recognition in the eyes of both, yet now, when he had opportunity to accuse her, not one word did he attempt. She was warmed and comforted by the chocolate and the food. She enjoyed the second cup just brought her. She begged the stewardess to stay, yet only faintly protested when told she had to go.

Once again Pancha was alone when the chiming tinkle, four bells, told that 10 o'clock had come, and then for a moment she turned cold again and shrank within her rugs and wraps, for Loring slowly and deliberately rose and looked toward her. Now he was coming. Now he would speak. Now he would demand of her to explain her part in the wicked thing that had happened. She dreaded, yet she longed to stay, for she had a story that she could eagerly tell to him. For a moment her heart lay still and then leaped and fluttered uncontrollably. Slowly the shadowy fellow passenger had found his feet. Steadily he looked, as though straight at her, for nearly a minute, then as slowly and deliberately turned his back and walked away forward. When, nearly an hour later, the stewardess came to lead her below and the purser and one of the ship's officers had both been to inquire if she felt better and to tell her to be of good cheer—she'd be all right on the morrow and trolling for dolphin on the blue Pacific—though she saw Loring slowly pacing up and down, though twice he passed so close to her that by stretching forth her tiny foot she could have checked or tripped him, not once again did she detect so much as a glance at her.

And yet, when a little later the stewardess tucked her in her white berth and invented messages and inquiries from her prostrated aunt and cousins in neighboring staterooms, that designing woman wove a tale about the blue eyed, silent officer pacing the lonely deck—how anxious he was to do something for the little invalid; how eagerly he had gone and ordered for her and superintended the preparation of that dainty little supper; how he had bidden the stewardess to stay by her and soothe her and was so deeply interested. High and low, rich and poor, they love romance, these tender hearts, and for that reason, doubtless, no reference did Mme. Flores make of the $5 gold-piece that had found its way to her ready palm.

Pancha had been reclining ever since noon.

"And he spoke Spanish beautifully, did the Senor Teniente," said Mme. Flores, whereat did Pancha's heart begin to flutter anew, for that meant that he must have heard and understood her pleadings.

And so it happened that till long after midnight the child lay wide eyed and awake, listening to that steady, measured tread upon the upper deck. Strange and sad and eventful had been that young life thus far. What strange, new thing had fate in store for her now?

The Idaho dropped anchor at San Lucas and put off a passenger and took on the mails—two bags, with flanks as flat as the sandy strand on which the long, white line of breakers beat in ceaseless, soothing melody. The broad, blue ocean glistened under the sunshine of another day, and late in the afternoon one or two pallid and attenuated shapes were aided to the deck, where Pancha had been reclining ever since noon, and the captain had come and rallied her upon her big, pathetic eyes and hollow cheeks and coaxed her to promise to play her guitar that evening, and the purser had been polite, and the stewardess had brought up an appetizing lunch, and Colonel Turnbull had put in an appearance toward sundown—a grewsome face was his—and all this time Mr. Loring was either briskly pacing the deck or reading in a sheltered nook back of the purser's cabin, but never once did he address her or intrude upon her meditations. Pancha's spirits and courage—or was it innate coquetry?—began to ferment. That evening no fewer than five passengers appeared at table, though all five did not remain through the several courses.

That evening Pancha was again tucked in her chair, and Cousin Inez was aided from her room and placed beside her, and very attentive was Mr. Traynor, the purser, though fair Inez was but languid and unresponsive still and kept her veil about her face, and Colonel Turnbull came and poured champagne for both with lavish hand and vowed it was specific against further assaults of the salty seas, and still Mr. Loring never spoke a word. With the sparkling sunshine of yet another day the little maid was early on the shining deck, fresh from its matutinal ablutions, and there was Loring taking his early exercise, striding up and down, up and down, and drinking in the glorious, invigorating sea air, but even now he came no nearer, and she who feared at first to venture to her accustomed seat lest he might take advantage of her solitude and come and ask things or say things she could not bear to hear finally sidled along one side while he was patrolling the other, made her timid way to the stern and stood there clinging to the flagstaff and became absorbed in the rush of foaming, boiling waters unrolling a gradually narrowing streak of dazzling white through the blue green waste of billows, all sparkling in the slanting sunshine.

Wheeling in flapping circles overhead, skimming the crested waves, settling down and lazily floating on the heaving flood, so many dots of snow upon the sapphire, the flock of gulls sailed onward with the ship, white scavengers of the sea, and sometimes dropped so close to the rail on wide extended wing that Pancha could plainly see the eager little red beads of eyes, could almost bury her soft cheek in the thick plumage of their fleecy breasts. Away out toward the invisible coast a three master was bowling along under full speed of canvas, and midway between some huge black fish were plunging through the swelling brine. Early as it was the deckhands had cast astern the stout trolling line, and far in their wake the spinning, silvery bait came leaping and flashing from the northward slope of each succeeding wave, and Pancha, who had seen the previous day a dolphin hauled in to die in swiftly changing, brilliant hues upon the deck, tested the taut lanyard with her slender fingers, wondering whether she alone could triumph over the frantic struggles of the splendid fish, or what she would do if she found she could not.

It was an hour to breakfast time. Only Loring and herself had yet appeared on deck, and she stole a peep at him. There he was tramping up and down, as though he had to finish a thousand laps within a given time and stood at least a hundred laps behind. Four days earlier the child looked with terror to the possibility of his even drawing near her. Now she was beginning to wonder if he never would again. Five days before she could have sobbed her heart out, praying not to be subjected to the possibility of his asking her a question. Now she was wondering if he did not even care to ask, if indeed she would ever have a chance to tell.

She did not know, poor little maid, that late the previous evening, after consultation between Turnbull and Loring, the latter had asked Mr. Traynor to place a packet of his within the safe, and that then and there Traynor had permitted him a peep at the valuable parcel to be delivered to Escalantes' representative in San Francisco. Loring had been allowed to "heft" it in his hand, to curiously study the seals and superscription, to satisfy himself it could not be the tin case stolen from him as Sancho's, for this one was smaller, yet not to satisfy himself it did not contain the missing watch and diamonds, for it was big enough to hold them.

Pancha did not know that the two officers had agreed upon a plan of action to be put in operation the moment they were within the Golden Gate. She did not dream that the thoughts of the silent officer dwelt on her and her past intently as did hers on him. She was heart sick, lonely and oppressed with anxieties such as seldom fall to the lot of maidens of 16, yet her heart was beating with the hope that lives in buoyant health and youth. She had left the father whom she devotedly loved and had believed all that a father could or should be, had received his parting blessing at Hermosillo and his faltering promise to soon be with her—at Guaymas. She had been radiant with the thought of soon again springing to his arms when the Idaho stopped there on the northward trip. She had been stunned and stricken when told it was his wish she should go with her cousins to San Francisco, dwell with them there, be educated there and without hope of again seeing him until he could come to her, perhaps late in the summer. She had then been told that his life was threatened, and that hated Gringos and suspicious compatriots, both, were thirsting for his blood.

She had been told that she herself was in danger of arrest for complicity in robberies at Gila Bend—she, who had overheard the plot to meet the stage, murder the passengers and rob the mails—at least that was what the woman whom she was bidden to respect as her stepmother had fearfully told her and asked if there were no way in which she could warn Blake. How was she to know, poor child, what would result? How could she help shrinking from sight of the officers she had watched with such eager interest at Sancho's, when she was later told they were seeking her father's life—told that could they force a confession from her nothing on earth could save him?

Yet here was the gray haired colonel devoting himself to Inez and being kind to her own trembling self. Here was the Teniente Loring who had been lovely to her, said the stewardess, until he saw her terror, her shrinking from him, and now when she longed to tell him her simple story he would not come near her. Of the packet and its contents she knew next to nothing. Of their intention to secure it and, if need be, her arrest with it, the moment they reached the wharf at San Francisco, she could not dream. That that fated packet was destined never to reach the Golden Gate, that every plan and project based on the safe return of the Idaho to port was doomed to die, no one of her passengers or crew could possibly have predicted this beaming April morning as she cleft the billows on her northward way. Pancha was only wondering how and when Loring's silence would end when within the minute the end came.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

Both George Proctor Smith and Walter L. Long, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball team, made some remarkable shots in the game Monday night. Long tripped over a Columbia man, fell on his knees but tried for goal and made it. Smith threw sideways, backwards and with all kinds of twists and scored.

There is a possibility that the game played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium may not end the basket ball season in the Y. M. C. A. after all. Manager George E. Fuller is still in communication with the management of the team of the Eastern District of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., in an effort to get that team to come to Plainfield. The game may be played and if so, it will be in the local gymnasium.

GOLF.

At the annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club the constitution was amended to provide that any associate member or junior associate member, not under eighteen years of age, might become an active member without paying the initiation fee if application was made on or before April 1st, to the secretary, Josiah Browne, 1225 Watchung avenue.

C. A. W. Fox, the North Berwick professional, has returned from a winter at his old home in Scotland. He was accompanied by his wife, an American girl. Fox saw the match between Willie Park, Jr., and Ben Sayers, when the former won easily, and he says Park is playing a much smoother game than when he was here in 1895. Fox considers himself the great golf pioneer, for he has been in turn the first professional engaged at Meadowbrook, Glen Cove, Shelter Island, Albany and Plainfield, and, while he wants a place, he positively declares he will not go to a brand new link this time.—New York Sun.

AROUND THE BASES.

The public is entitled to the Newark Advertiser for the following outburst: "Get out the club and padded mitt, produce the whirling sphere, for there's is no denying it—the baseball season's near. Get colors gay and horns of tin, both relics from last year; witch hazel too—and rub it in; the baseball season's near. Awaken from your lethargy, the time is almost here when we must lose our apathy—the baseball season's near. Soon we will hear the crazy shout that echoes far and near, and tells us that beyond a doubt the baseball season's near. Come, grease the lungs and thorax, that yelling may be clear; this statement is no hoax—the baseball season's near. Just keep your eye on April 3d, the day will soon be here; the boys have now sent forth the word, the first ball game is near. So get the rooters ready, soon to bleachers we'll adhere. Young woman tell your 'steady' that the baseball season's here."

He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents, at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store. Bryan Democracy Active.

(Special to The Daily Press)

New Brunswick, March 29.—Organization Democrats are apprehensive as to the outcome of a rather vigorous movement among the Byran Democrats of this city headed by ex-Alderman John Mulvey. The movement among the Independents has gained especial strength in the Sixth ward, where Mr. Mulvey, familiarly called "Honest John," has a large personal following and a clash is expected between the regular organization and the independents when it comes to nominating candidates for Mayor, City Recorder and the ward officers.

To Organize a Volunteer League.

S. Niwa, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Tokyo, Japan, was present at the Y. M. C. A. here last night to talk with any of those interested in the formation of a volunteer league. The work of the league is to take up short courses of special Bible study, to establish a mission study class, and also a meeting for conference and prayer. It was decided to organize such a league and the first meeting will be held next Monday night.

Discussing Street Work.

The most important matter of business was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Waldorf; first vice president, Mrs. H. A. Pope; second vice president, Mrs. W. L Ramsen; treasurer, Mrs A. V. Searing. The report of the treasurer showed that the organization is in a good condition financially.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on L. W. Randolph, Druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c. and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

DID STRANGE THINGS.

impossible to solidify, was converted into a sticky paste and even into solid forms like icycles. Mercury was frozen solid and used as a hammer.

The large percentage of oxygen in the liquid air, the hydrogen being the first to evaporate owing to the lower temperature necessary to liquify it, was shown by burning various articles in the liquid air. Hair felt, that would not ordinarily burn, blazed with a dazzling flame in the liquid air. So did splinters of wood.

Later this season, Prof. William H Meadowcraft, of Newark, will lecture on the same subject, probably at the Casino.

Replacing Iron Poles.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company is gradually replacing the old iron poles, to support their street lights, with wooden ones. When the line has become crossed, several people have received slight shocks from touching the iron poles.

Putting Wires Underground.

Employes of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company have resumed the work of laying wires underground. If the weather remains pleasant the work will be completed in a short time.

A steady improvement is noticed in the condition of Charles Cranston, of Jackson avenue, who underwent an operation a few days ago.

—A meeting of the W. C. T. U. will will be held at an early date to settle the question of moving from the present quarters. The majority seem to be in favor of remaining at the present place and keeping the rooms open every evening.

CADETS REVIEWED BY AN ARMY OFFICER.

Lieutenant Horn Witnessed High School Boys at Their Best.

CONSIDERABLE WORK DONE

DRILL WAS HELD IN THE CRESCENT RINK BUILDING.

Cadets Were in Command of Captain George F. Edwards—Lieutenant Horn Inspected the Company and Put the Cadets Through a Short Drill in the Manual of Arms—Many Visitors Present.

The Crescent Rink presented quite a martial appearance last evening. There was an armed sentry at the door and sundry other uniformed young men were circulating about the floor, passing through various evolutions in measured tread. It was the review of the Plainfield High School cadet corps by Lieutenant T. N. Horn, of the First U. S. Artillery, a graduate of the local High School and the United States Military Academy.

It was first intended to unite the High School cadets and the Leal School cadets for an exhibition drill but the Leal boys withdrew. So some thirty of the High School cadets turned out and made a very creditable showing.

The cadets were in command of Captain George F. Edwards. A number of the privates were absent owing to illness. Second Sergeant H. K. Doane was the only non-commissioned officer absent. His place was filled by Third Sergeant Claud Edwards while First Corporal Linden Bridgeman acted as left guide of the company.

The cadet officers and non-commissioned officers were as follows: Captain, William A. Fisher; first lieutenant, LeRoy Radford; second lieutenant, Blanchard Fosgate; first sergeant, Howard S. Mason: quartermaster sergeant, J. Stanley Mosher; second sergeant, Hervey K. Doane; third sergeant, Claud Edwards; color bearer, Harold Davis; bugler, William Hobbie; first corporal, Linden Bridgeman; second corporal, E. Douglass Murphy; third corporal, Harold Phillips.

After the company had been formed, it was turned over to Captain Edwards. Then Lieutenant Horn inspected the company and put the cadets through a short drill in the manual of arms. He also addressed a few words to the cadets on discipline.

The company began the regular manoeuvres and passed in review, saluting the reviewing officer. The spectators applauded vigorously. Then followed marching and countermarching and sundry evolutions through which the cadets went with but very few mistakes. They made an excellent appearance and the drill was well done. Cadet Captain Fisher afterwards took command and showed himself proficient with the drill manual.

The visitors gallery was crowded and many other guests lined the sides of the hall. The spectators numbered three hundred. Among them were former cadet Captains George Proctor Smith and Henry W. Brower, besides a number of the returned soldiers of the war.

Distinctly Local Institution.

The Union Building and Loan Association is officered by Plainfield business men only. Dr. Long is president; E. M. Laing, vice-president; R. A. Meeker, secretary; R. J. Shaw, treasurer. If you have money to put out you should investigate the merits of this company before making an investment. Either of the above mentioned gentlemen will explain the workings of the association to your entire satisfaction.

Not Ready to Put Up the Money.

It has been rumored that several persons along the Watchung avenue line in the borough, who are still dissatisfield with the assessments for the improvement, will contest the matter. An investigation fails to disclose any such movement owing to the fact that the dissatisfied ones are indisposed to put up the necessary money to fight. Several meetings were called for this week, but so far none have been held.

Supplementary Proceedings.

Attorney Charles J. McNabb has instituted supplementary proceedings against Mrs. Jennie A. Cramer, of Washington, Pa., to discover her property, and yesterday the matter came up before Judge Vail, of the Union county Common Pleas. Upon Mr. McNabb's motion the court granted a receiver. J. P D. Kirch was Mrs. Cramer's counsel.

Miss Emily A. Wearer, who has been visiting Mrs. W. B. Maxson, of West Sixth street, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

THE BABY MUST SUFFER

BECAUSE JUDGE RUNYON WAS OBDURATE WITH ITS MOTHER.

Warden Dodd Not Certain That He Has the Right to Receive a Fifteen-Months'-Old Child in the County Jail.

The Elizabeth Journal yesterday printed the following:

Mrs. Annie Holmes, of Plainfield, with her fifteen-months'-old baby, were committed to the county jail last evening by City Judge Runyon, of Plainfield, for 40 days, on the charge of drunkeness. That is the mother was committed on the charge and the baby came along with her, having no other place to go.

The question now arises, had Warden Dodd any right to accept the child? The baby was not mentioned in the commitment papers, and there was no commitment papers for it. The little one had not done anything wrong. Is it right that the little one should be made to suffer for wrong deeds done by the mother? Warden Dodd is at a loss what to do in the premises. He had to accept the mother, and the baby is in jail with her, but it does not seem right that the little one should be allowed to have this stigma attached to its name in after years, especially when no wrongdoing can be ascribed to it.

City Judge Runyon was seen this morning by a Daily Press reporter in regard to the probable action of the city in case Warden Dodd refuses to allow Mrs. Annie Holmes' child in the jail. The Junge explained that the reason that the child had been sent down was because it was feared that the babe was too young to be separated from its mother. If, however, the Warden would not receive the child the mother's parents were willing to care for it. At home, the Judge said, Mrs. Holmes was drunk most of the time and the life in the jail with the mother would be far better for the child than at home with her.

STRIKE IT CANNOT STOP.

Manufacturing Company in Elizabeth in a Predicament With Its Employes.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 30.—The Worthington Pump Works, in Elizabeth, is seriously hampered in its work by a strike of a portion of its men. It has no dispute with the strikers. The trouble is between Coremakers' and Moulders' unions. The coremakers object to the moulders making cores, and the moulders claim the right to make them when they need them in the course of the operations. The superintendent of the works said today he would not interfere beyond trying to have the unions come to some agreement relative to the matter. If he forbade the moulders to make cores the moulders would strike and the coremakers would return to work. If he allowed the moulders to make cores the coremakers would remain out, and either way was as bad for the company as the other.

DEATH OF HUGH GASTON.

Well-Known Somerset County Man Died Tuesday.

Hugh Gaston, aged 76 years, one of the best known and most substantial residents of Somerville, died at his home on Ross street last Tuesday. He was a person of large acquaintance and well-liked by all who knew him. He held the offices of Freeholder and County Collector, in which he displayed rare ability. He was next to the last of a family of nine brothers and two sisters, the other being Isaac Gaston, of Newark. Mr. Gaston leaves two sons, John G. Gaston, of Somerville, and Wm. G. Gaston, of New York. He also leaves six daughters, including Mrs. O. W. Dunham, of 325 East Fifth street, this city.

New Bridge at Rahway.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, March 30—The new Bridge street bridge at Rahway, which has been under construction since last summer, was opened to travel yesterday. The structure is entirely finished, with the exception of the final top-dressing on the macadam roadway over the bridge. Sheriff Kirk furnished the iron work, and the structure was built by him under the supervision of the bridge committee of the Board of Freeholders. The cost was $8 000.

Putting Electric Light Wires Undergound.

In a very short time Patsy Christmas, contractor, expects to resume the work of laying the underground conduits for the electric light wires. The work will be started at the corner of Park and North avenues and continue to Fourth street. The other parts of the city will then be worked according to the plans and specifications.

Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., and family, of Hillside avenue, returned yesterday from Lakewood, where they have been stopping for a time.

INTEREST AROUSED IN SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Committee is Hard at Work Devising Ways and Means.

APPEALING FOR MONEY.

SOME OF THE LOCAL LODGES WILL LEND A HELPING HAND.

Somerset Council to Follow the Example of Sons of Veterans and Make a Liberal Appropriation — It is Understood That There is Already Money for Such a Project, was Raised Several Years Ago.

Now that the plans for the soldiers' monument for Plainfield have been placed before the people of the city through the local papers there is much favorable talk concerning this enterprise and if the sentiment of many expressed is any criterion there is every reason to believe that the monument will be a reality.

Already the local lodges have been discussing the scheme, and with favor. Tomorrow evening at the meeting of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., the subject will be introduced and it is learned from one of the members that it is reasonable to believe that at least $25 will be contributed toward the monument.

In other societies and associations the scheme is being talked of freely and everyone seems to be disposed to contribute something, however small, to the fund. The fact that the Sons of Veterans have headed the list with $200, is proving as an incentive for others to do something. The idea given out by the committee that they want everyone to give something is meeting with general approval, and the committee say that every penny will help to swell the fund to the necessary proportions.

In the course of a few days the people of Plainfield will receive a circular accompanied by a subscription blank. It is desired that the recipient will place his or her name down for a sum and return the same to Treasurer J F. Buckle. It is not necessary to pay the amount all at once or at the time of subscribing, and the blank is used more for the purpose of having something to count on in keeping an account of the money received. Of course, it is expected that when a person subscribes they will keep their obligation.

It is understood that there is now in Plainfield money that was subscribed for a soldiers' monument and the committee will ascertain the facts regarding this, and if it is true it will be placed in the Dime Savings Institution, where it will draw interest at the rate of 3 per cent. It is to be hoped that the people of the city will respond generously and quickly to the call made, and thus help a noble and patriotic object along.

NO STONE BEING CARTED.

A Difference in Opinion as to Amount That Should Be Paid.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 30—Not since last week has any carting of stone from Gray & Garretson's crushers been done, owing to a little difference of opinion between the men and the proprietors regarding the sum of money per ton they should receive. The differences may eventually develop into a strike, although it is hoped that before it comes to that a settlement can be effected.

Gray & Garretson have been employing about sixteen teams this spring hauling stone from the crusher in the mountains to wherever it was to be delivered. Where it was delivered it was always possible to dump the entire load to the ground at once by simply taking off the side-boards of the wagon and making it unnecessary to shovel it.

For this work the men receive 30 cents a ton. Saturday the firm received on order for some thousand tons of stone to be shipped away. The cars were on a siding at New Market, and the teamsters claim that it is too much to ask them to cart the stone to New Market for 30 cents a ton, and demand 40 cents.

No work has been done since Saturday, and the teams and cars stand idle. Mr. Gray is ill and is not able to confer with the men. Another meeting will likely be held today, when further plans will be discussed.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers in North Plainfield have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week: Fidelity Title Co. to William C. Smith, $1; Mary Leland and husband to Sarah M. Ten Eyck, $1; George F. White to Charles W. Hummer, $1; Charles W. Hummer to Isaac P. Runyon, $1; Maria Tine and husband to Frederick Clark, $1.

PARENTS' DAY AT SCHOOL

WORK OF PUPILS TO BE SEEN AT FRANKLIN BUILDING.

A Chance to See How Proficient the Rising Generation is in the Things Taught to Make Them Capable in Life

Today was "parents' day" in the Franklin School, and an opportunity was given any who desired to do so to visit the classes and watch the pupils at their work. The opportunity was seized upon by fully a hundred parents and friends of the pupils this morning, who were invited to pass from class room to class room and take in the regular routine of a school day.

No preparations were made for today, and it was not an exhibition in any sense of the word. The work was displayed so as to be readily seen, and that was all. From hour to hour the work of the classes went on, and there was no difference between today and any other day, except that the school was thronged with visitors.

The work of the youngest pupil was seen as well as that done by the most advanced. Writing, drawing, modeling, etc., were shown, and it is surprising to see the proficiency of the little ones.

Miss Gilbert, who teaches the third grade, a class of little tots of eight and ten, introduced color work when she first took charge of the class, and much interest was centred about that room and the color work of its pupils. Although young and inexperienced, the drawing shows great skill, especially in shading and the blending of the colors.

It is probable that soon water color painting will be placed on the list of courses, as there is so much talent displayed in the school.

The opening exercises consisted of the singing of Easter carols. Miss Strong, one of the teachers, sang the "Easter Story."

HE TALKED—BUT NOT INSURANCE.

A Pleasant and Thorough Surprise to Benjamin W. Hand.

Benjamin W. Hand, of West Seventh street, was persuaded not to go out last night after supper, but to stay at home and talk business to a man wanting insurance. Mr. Hand consented to do this, and sat congratulating himself on the certain prospect of landing from $5,000 to $10,000 worth of life insurance.

When the alleged customer came, it proved to be a company of neighbors who had decided to treat him to a surprise party, and took this method to prevent him being out.

Mrs. Harry W. Fraleigh arranged the party, and it was a great surprise to Mr. Hand. The evening was passed in playing games, and at midnight a bountiful collation was spread. The company dispersed about 1:30 o'clock.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Fraleigh, T. F. Gilmore, of New Haven, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Boice, Mr. and Mrs. L. Woolley, Mr. and Mrs. H. VanMiddlesworth, Miss Mabel VanMiddlesworth, Lloyd VanMiddlesworth, Mrs. Eisenman, Miss Louise and Miss Lottie Eisenman, Mr. and Mrs. Pugh, Miss Alice and Miss Mary L. Pugh, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. S. Ayres, Miss Leola Smith, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Luther Morris, Miss Anna Wooden and G. R. Wooden.

The board of great chiefs and also the board of great chiefs and also the board of great chiefs of the Degree of Pocohontas will be present.

Flagpole for New Borough School.

Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, having secured the contract to furnish a flagpole to be placed in front of the Watchung Public School in the borough, went to Jersey City yesterday to purchase the pole. He succeeded in securing a pole of Norwegian pine seventy-five feet in length. It has been salt water-soaked and is in the pink of condition. The pole will be erected within the next two weeks.

The Parsonage is Finished.

The committee in charge of furnishing the new parsonage of Grace M. E. church has planned to have their work completed so that the pastor and his wife can take possession the third week in April.

To Improve Borough Streets.

It is the intention of the borough street committee to get to work as soon as possible on the streets so that by the time summer arrives they will be in good condition for travel.

STRANGERS YESTERDAY, BUT COMRADES NOW.

Friendship Began in the City Jail.

CONTINUED THIS MORNING.

PATROLMAN VANDERWEG PLAYED ROLE OF PROVIDENCE.

Arrested Archie Davis and Thomas Melvile Last Night for Being Drunk—Locked Them up in Adjoining Cells—Became Acquainted During the Night—Departed Together This Morning

Yesterday Thomas Melville and Archie Davis were entire strangers. Last night they were companions in misery in adjoining cells at the city jail. This morning the new-made friendship was cemented together with copious daughts of strong drink. Melville is a tall thin individual who hails from Raritan. He served his country and incidentally enjoyed camp life with the Third New Jersey Volunteers. Davis is short and inclined to stoutness. He is a Plainfielder, a painter by trade.

Patrolman Vanderweg was the blue-coated Providence that brought about the acquaintanceship. He found Melville encamped in the North Avenue station too drunk to care for himself. So the officer dragged him to jail to recover his equilibrium. Davis was found by Vanderweg, making more noise than was exactly conducive to the peace and quietude of the neighborhood. He, too, was locked up.

During the night the men sobered up somewhat and began to get acquainted. This morning they felt very friendly toward each other. Davis was the first to be arraigned before City Judge Runyon. The Judge suspended sentence on him. As Davis passed out of the courrtoom, Melville was marshaled in.

"I'll wait for you," called Davis and he stood about outside until the Judge suspended sentence on Melville and the latter joined him.

Later in the morning, they were seen walking lovingly together, having just departed from a local saloon. Judging from their walk, the ground was slightly unsteady. They went in the direction of Mayor Smalley's domain.

A TRIP THROUGH ENGLAND.

An Audience Saw Many Interesting Things in the Mind,s Eye.

Guided and directed by Elizabeth Powell Bond, of Swathmore College, a company of Plainfield people took a summer day's trip through the most picturesque part of England last night, and yet did not stir from their seats in the old Quaker meeting house.

Mrs. Bond made a tour of England last summer, and gave her hearers the result of it last night. Mrs. Bond visited the old homes of Milton, Coleridge, Shelby, Wardsworth, and also Swathmore Hall the dwelling place of George Fox, that staunch old Quaker, who did so much for his followers.

The speaker was provided with views of many of the places she visited, and these were thrown upon a screen and assisted very much in giving the hearers better ideas of what the lecturer described. The times, not so many years ago, when the Quakers were persecuted in England, formed the subject of a part of her discourse, and the horrid forms of cruelty practiced upon the quiet, peace-loving people, simply because they would not give up their religious belief, was almost beyond belief.

Mrs. Bond, a sweet-faced, elderly lady, read her lecture in a low, soft voice that gave what she had to say an added charm.

The evangelical churches of the city and borough will tomorrow evening hold a union Good Friday service in the Crescent Avenue church. All the clergymen will make short addresses. A general invitation is extended to attend the service which will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

A NEW TRUST COMPANY.

UNION COUNTY MEN TAKE ADVANTAGE OF A NEW STATE LAW.

Preliminary Steps Taken to Organize the New Company in Elizabeth, Which Will be Capitalized at the Sum of $500,000

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 30.—At a meeting held in the house of Frank Bergen, of this city, the preliminary steps were taken to organize a trust company under the law passed by the last Legislature. The company will be capitalized at not more than $500,000, and its sphere of operations will be confined principally to Union county. Committees were appointed to arrange the various details in connection with the undertaking, and will report at an early date, when the officers of the trust company will be chosen.

The following well-known men are among the organizers: Senator Joseph Cross, Judge Edward S. Atwater, Frank Bergen, Henry H. Gham, former Congressman Amos Clark, A. Denman Mulford, William Clark, George C. Thomas, Melville Eggleton, John Davidson, George W Rogers, Theodore C. English, Louis F. Hersh, former Judge P. Hamilton Gilhooly.

The company will carry on a general trust, safe deposit title and guarantee business and will try to interest various corporations in the county in the scheme. The headquarters of the company will be in this city.

JOHN VALIANT IS SUPERINTENDENT.

Annual Meeting of the Sunday-school of Grace M. E. Church.

The annual Sunday school meeting was held at Grace M. E church last evening, at which time officers for the ensuing term were selected. John Valiant was chosen superintendent and Andrew Wilson assistant superintendent. The position of secretary held by J. P. D. Kirch was not filled, owing to the fact that Mr. Kirch was not inclined to accept a reelection. The place will be left vacant temporily. Charles Herdin was elected treasurer, and Bert Simpson was chosen as organist.

The report of the secretary showed that the membership of the school is excellent, and the average attendance about 200. The treasurer's report was encouraging. It shows that the financial condition of the school is sound, and there is a balance on hand after expenses are paid.

The Words Around the Cross.

A special service, entitled "The Words Around the Cross," was held in the Congregational church last evening. It was especially appropriate to the present season Short talks were given on the words spoken at the time of the Crucifixion. The speakers were Philip S. Suffren, Alexander Miller, Joseph A. Robinson, Dr. A. T. VanHorn, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, Miss M. G. Morse and Anthony C. LaBoyteaux. There was a vocal solo by William Holmes, of the First Baptist church choir.

Randolph Anderson; members of Union County Freeholder Board, John Farrell, Second ward, and Christian Ehrlich, Fourth ward.

Improvements About a Residence

Other changes will be made which will enhance the value of the place and add to its attractiveness.

Rahway Nominations.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, March 30—The Democratic primaries were held in Rahway Tuesday night. The meetings were largely attended and these candidates were named for Councilmen: First ward, George Vansant; second ward, Augustus N. Ritter (renominated); third ward, J. Lester La Forge; fourth ward, John Darrah; fifth ward, Augustus L Fischer.

Weather Delayed the Work.

Contractor L. W. Serrell, Jr., who has the contract for building the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway, hopes to start the work in a short time. The weather has partially had something to do with the delay, and the contractor has also experienced trouble in securing rails from the iron works.

PREPARING THE PAY ROLLS.

"GOVERNOR'S DAY" DID NOT BRING OUT A BIG CROWD.

Governor Voorhees Approves the Plans for Additions to State Prison—Will Visit the Morris Plains Asylum—One Wing of the Rahway Reformatory to be Ready for Occupancy First of Next Year.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 30—"Governor's Day" was resumed after the Legislature with the usual political and official attractions, though the interest in the occasion was not as great as has been seen in times gone by.

One subject concerning which all, or nearly all, of the visitors had inquiries to make was when the New Jersey Volunteers in the Spanish-American war would receive their State pay. Many of the volunteers had expected that their compensation would be forthcoming as soon as the bill was approved. It was stated yesterday that this course would be impracticable, because it might take several weeks to have the regimental, division and company officers prepare the pay rolls for their respective commands The necessary blanks have already been ordered and the work of preparing for the payment will be proceeded with as rapidly as possible.

Secretary Barber and his staff of assistants in the Senate, together with Clerk Jones, of the House, and his corps, were present, busily engaged in preparing the index for the pamphlet laws, a task which heretofore has frequently been delayed for weeks and sometimes months after the close of the session. As a result, volumes of the "pamphlet laws" complete, instead of in circular form, will be ready for distribution within a few weeks instead of several months after the close of the session, as has been the result under the system which left 143 bills for the Governor's consideration after adjournment last year.

The legislators present were mostly those who are building fences for reelection or advanced positions. Others who have had the the terms allotted, according to party usage, in their counties, were on hand to bid farewell to their colleagues and look after such of the bills as they had been interested in. Not one of the entire number called to draw his salary, for that was attended to before the session was well under way.

Other matters attracting the attention of the visitors were the commission the Governor is expected to appoint to revise and codify the laws relative to the government of cities, and the building of a new Senate Chamber or addition to the present one. Governor Voorhees said he would hardly be prepared to act in either of these matters until such time as he concludes the work of inspecting plans for additions to several State institutions which the Legislature has provided for. Heretofore this work has been conducted by the commissioner in charge of these institutions without any supervision or veto power, and this custom was held to be accountable for the apparent extravagance displayed in the plans for the State Reformatory at Rahway.

Band Concert in Reform Hall.

This evening the Queen City Band will give a free concert at Reform Hall, and those in charge hope that there will be a large attendance. Benjamin LaVere, leader, has selected a fine programme for the occasion, and the full band will be present. The programme is as follows: March, "American Guard," Brooks; "In Gay New York," L. O. DeWitt; "The Wayside Chapel," Wilson; "Comic Tattoo," Fahrbach; March, "Metronome," Heed; Coon Medley, "The Chicken Brigade," Lee Johnson; "British Patrol," George Ash; March, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa.

Old Frieds Meet.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Morey, of Troy, N. Y., were welcome visitors at the home of Rev. W. C. Nelson this week. Mr. Morey is a member of the firm of Morey & Lee. They had been spending a few days at Atlantic City, and were returning on their homeward trip. Forty-one years ago the same couple acted as bridemaid and groomsman at the marriage of Rev. W. C. Nelson and Miss Olive Clark, at Pittsfield, Mass.

—Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men will meet tomorrow night, and it is expected that there will be a few adoptions.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

SHALL WE DISPUTE

The Opinions of Scores of Our Fellow Citizens.

Residents of Plainfield, like other American citizens, in making an investment want to be sure of getting the worth of their money. They want to know all the whys and wherefores, and in a direct ratio to the value of the investment they borrow and ferret until satisfied with the collateral. Take an instance in the realm of proprietary articles. If we know of a friend who has been cured, we have some faith in the preparation; if we know of two or three our faith increases. If the cures reach scores, all well-known citizens, and anyone who still maintains that there is nothing beyond ordinary merit in the said preparation can safely be left to the care of his fellow taxpayers. If he wishes to pick a quarrel with them on the question of their judgment or veracity, he has ample opportunity in Plainfield to do so. Begin with this case:

Mrs. W. W. Mills, of No. 86 Summit avenue, says: "I suffered times with a severe pain across the small of my back and in my hips. If I did any lifting or stooping my back became lame and sore, and though I used plasters they only helped me for the time being. I was feeling very badly when I had my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills. They were so highly recommended for troubles like mine that I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. I felt their good effects in a few days, and when I had finished the treatment my back was better and stronger, and I had much more energy to attend household duties. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement, and I am always pleased to recommend them."

NO MORE VOLUNTEERS

The President Not Disposed to Organize the Provisional Army.

JOHN SHERMAN AT HOME

At a Cabinet Meeting the Suggestions of the Last Congress Was Considered—The Ambassador Now in Europe Will Probably be Appointed to the Czar's Peace Congress.

Washington, March 30.—There has been no determination as yet to enlist the volunteer or provisional army of thirty-five thousand which was authorized by Congress. It is the desire of the President to avoid calling this volunteer force into service. If possible, and it is understood that no steps will be taken in the matter until the result of the present operations against Aguinaldo's army is determined. Should the campaign result in the destruction of the insurgent force, it is thought there would be no need of enlarging the army beyond the limits of the regulars. At all events the raising of the volunteer force could not affect the present operations, and could bear upon the Philippine operations only in the event of a great protraction of the resistance of the natives, since it would take three months to get the new recruits to Manila. If the volunteers now in the Philippines are willing to re-enlist after the expiration of their present term of service, they will undoubtedly be taken in, but the regular army has not yet been fully recruited, being probably three thousand short, and it is the desire of the Department to make up this shortage if possible before calling on volunteers.

The situation in Cuba and Porto Rico warrants the expectation that the military there can to a very considerable extent be speedily replaced with civil officials, so that not only will no additional troops be needed there but some of those now there may be withdrawn.

It is understood that some of the War Department officers are strongly in favor of organizing the volunteer force at once, whether or not it will be of service in the Philippines, their theory being that an army of a hundred thousand is needed anyhow, and that its existence under the temporary law would accustom the public to it and render easier the execution of the plan for the establishment of a permanent standing army of that size. The President, however, has shown a very decided indisposition to accept this advice, and it is acknowledged among many officials that a positive necessity for the increase will have to be shown before he will consent to a call for the volunteers.

In reply to an inquiry from Adjutant-General Corbin, asking whether he had sufficient supplies, and if not to state what was wanted, Gen. Otis has sent a message stating that he has "supplies of all kinds sufficient for immediate wants."

The six additional mountain guns asked for by Gen. Otis a short time ago are now on their way to Manila. These guns are two-pounders, and can be taken anywhere that mules or men can go. Gen. Otis had eight of these guns, besides four guns of the Astor Battery. The latter, however, are twelve-pounders, and much heavier to handle.

A CABINET MEETING.

Administration of Affairs in Cuba and Changes in Civil Service Considered.

Washington, March 30.—A Cabinet meeting was held yesterday, at which a number of questions which have arisen during the two weeks of the President's absence in the South were taken up. It was practically decided to simplify matters in Cuba by consolidating some of the administrative departments.

The amending of the Civil Service rules and regulations was considered. Almost the last thing the President did before leaving for the South was to return to the members of the Cabinet their several recommendations on the subject, with a request that they again go over them, with a view to making any changes which might suggest themselves during his absence.

The President asked that he be furnished with their conclusions in the matter as soon as possible, as he expects to issue his order within a few days. It was again demonstrated at the meeting of the Cabinet that while strongly upholding the principles of the Civil Service law, several members are disposed to criticise its present administration.

The subject of the appointment of commissioners to represent the United States at the Czar's peace conference, was advanced by the President. It is understood that three Ambassadors of the United States at European courts will be named, together with two or three citizens not in the diplomatic service.

The new Nicaragua Canal Commission, provided for in the last river and harbor bill, also was discussed and it is not unlikely that the members will be named very soon.

John Sherman at Home.

Washington, March 30.—Ex-Secretary Sherman, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. McCallum and Mr. Harry Wiborg of Cincinnati, arrived at Washington yesterday on the steamboat Norfolk. He was in as good health as had been hoped for and expressed his pleasure at reaching home again. The patient was conveyed at once to his home, but it will be some time before he will be able to see visitors. Dr. Magie of Duluth, Minn., who was one of the party on the Paris when Mr. Sherman was taken ill, has attended him throughout his illness and came to Washington with him. He expressed confidence in his patient's recovery.

The Alaskan Boundary.

Indianapolis, March 30.—Senator Fairbanks (Rep., Ind.), of the Joint High Commission, announces that he intends to make a trip to Alaska this spring. The time of departure is dependent upon word from Senator Perkins (Rep., Cal.), who will be a member of the party. The plan is to go to the head of the Lynn Canal, which is near the scene of the recent rioting over the boundary line. The trip will be for the purpose of making an investigation of the boundary question. Senator Fairbanks says that two or three members of the Commission besides himself will make the trip.

THE FUTURE OF CUBA.

A Stable Government Would Make It Bloom.

Havana, March 30.—Opinions of Americans in Cuba as to the present outlook for the island are far from uniform. The general idea seems to be that things are far from being on a solid basis at present—that men of money will not risk their capital until a stable government is an assured fact.

One of the largest trust companies of this city has upward of $3,000,000 belonging to Americans in its vaults, to be used the minute something definite is determined upon by the Administration. One of the best-known and successful New Yorkers, Col. J. A. McAnerney, the president of the Seventh National Bank, paid a flying trip to Havana recently, and his friends say that he was much encouraged with what he saw. He did not waste any time here.

Hugh Kelly, the well known shipping man, is here on a tour of the island. He has been trading with Cuba for the last twenty years, making an average of three trips a year between New York and this city. He was president of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York for the years 1896, 1897 and last year, is a director in several banking interests in that city, is a member of the New York State Commerce Commission, has had a wide experience in the Board of Education of the metropolis, was chairman of the Finance Committee, and, altogether, is a man competent to talk about commercial affairs. This is what he says concerning the business prospects in Cuba:

"Nothing can or should be done here until the return of confidence, and confidence can only be brought about with a stable and permanent form of government which will give to capital all the security that capital always seeks. There is nothing in the world so timid as capital in the midst of insecure conditions, yet with any degree of security there is nothing so venturesome as capital.

"I think that the greatest riches of Cuba lie in the sugar industry, and that all things on the island revolve around that. In its best year, which was 1894, this island produced 1,000,000 tons of sugar and nearly the same in 1895. The manufacture of that much sugar involved the production, cultivation and handling of perhaps 12,000,000 tons of cane, which in itself necessitated the employment of many hands at a fair wage. It is a well known fact that unskilled labor in the sugar industry in this country has been paid better than the same class of laborers in the same industry in the United State, and therefore a reasonable degree of comfort in living was secured to a very large number of the inhabitants of this island by this industry alone.

"A large proportion of the business done by the railroads in the country was due to the handling of this 12,000,000 tons of cane. The cost of producing sugar consists almost entirely of labor charges. This big crop of sugar was produced from less than one-fifth of the arable land of the island, and it seems reasonably safe to assume that with such security as a stable government might afford to capital and such encouragement as advantageous arrangements with the United States would give, Cuba within ten years might be expected to produce not less than 5,000,000 tons of sugar.

THE PHILANTROPIC PAWNSHOP.

Quoted as Calling It the Best in the Country—What Major Black Says.

Washington, March 30.—At the beef inquiry hearing Major Black, who was chief commissary on Gen. Miles's staff during the Porto Rican campaign, was asked by Major Lee to detail a conversation he had with Gen. Eagan, at that time Commissary-General, after his (Black's) return to Washington last fall.

"I called upon Gen. Eagan," Major Black began, "to confer with him concerning the conduct of our affairs at Ponce. He asked me why the refrigerator beef was not issued at Ponce, and I replied that it was because the issue commissaries did not want it, as they were getting native beef. Thereupon Gen. Eagan became very much excited and exclaimed: '—— —— them, they have no right to refuse it. I consider it the best beef in the United States, and —— —— them, I'll have it.' I said, '—— —— them, I'd have Major Black also stated that at the time the Manitoba was on the reef he had some conversation with Gen. Miles about the vessel, and while there was casual reference to the beef on board, the General seemed principally concerned to get the troops and horses off.

Rear-Admiral Edwin Stewart, paymaster of the Navy, stated that canned beef was one of the articles of food used by the navy and explained in detail the careful inspection that was demanded by the Department regulations.

Occasionally the beef when delivered would be found to be unsatisfactory, and it would then be rejected. He estimated the average purchases of this character of food for the navy to be 500,000 pounds per year, the purchases being made through the New York representatives of Armour & Co., Nelson, Morris & Co., and other firms. The canned beef was a portion of the regular navy ration, and very little of it was ever condemned.

Paymaster Henry G. Colby, assistant chief of bureau of supplies of the Navy Department, also testified concerning the use of canned roast beef in the navy. He stated that where any question arose as to the quality of beef it was submitted to chemical analysis. The navy had found that the canned beef kept well at sea, and in some cases it was held from year to year.

Spreckels's Electric Plans.

San Francisco, March 30.—Claus Spreckels will establish in this city an electric plant that will furnish light, heat and power almost at cost. In accordance with his plans, articles of incorporation of the Independent Electric Light and Power Company, with a capital of $10,000,000, have been filed. The directors for the first year are Claus Spreckels, John S. Spreckels, Adolph B. Spreckels, Charles E. Hume and W. K. Gibson. It is understood that Claus Spreckels will be chosen president of the company, and that it will also enter the gas house business.

On Monday next the supervisors of the city will be asked to grant a franchise to operate within the limits of the city.

OUR STEADY ADVANCES

Filipinos Offer Less Resistance to American Troops.

THE CAMPAIGN LENGTHENS

The War Department Evidently Do Not Expect a Quick Ending of the War—Desolation in the Work of the Armies—A Hard Fight Expected Before Malolos Is Taken.

Manila, March 30.—The American army advanced yesterday, sweeping onward three miles before 10 o'clock, and driving the insurgents beyond Bocave, to the west of Bulacan, and on the railroad leading to Malolos. Our troops met with but slight resistance. The country between Marilao and Meycauayan presents a picture of desolation. Smoke is curling from hundreds of ash-heaps, and the remains of trees and fences are to be seen everywhere. The general appearance of the country is as if it had been swept by a cyclone. The roads are strewn with furniture and clothing dropped in flight by the Filipinos. The only persons remaining behind are a few aged persons, too infirm to escape. They camp beside the ruins of their former homes and beg passers-by for any kind of assistance. The majority of them are living on the generosity of our soldiers, who give them portions of their rations. The dogs of the Filipinos cower in the bushes, still terrified and barking, while hundreds of pigs are to be seen busily searching for food.

Bodies of dead Filipinos are stranded in the shallows of the river, or are lying in the jungle where they crawled to die or were left in the wake of the hurriedly retreating army. These bodies give forth a horrible stench, but there is no time now to bury them.

The inhabitants who fled from Marilao and Meycauayan left in such a panic that on the tables our soldiers found money and valuables, and in the rooms were trunks containing property of value. This was the case in most of the houses deserted. They were not molested by our soldiers, but the Chinese, who slip in between the armies, are looting when they can, and have taken possession of several houses, over which they raised Chinese flags, some of which were afterwards torn down.

An old woman was found hidden in a house at Meycauayan yesterday, just dead, apparently from fright and hunger.

Filipinos Apparently Weaker.

Washington, March 30.—The following cable dispatch from Gen. Otis has been received by Adjt.-Gen. Corbin:

"Adjutant-General, Washington:

"MacArthurs advance yesterday only to outskirts of Marilao; took until late afternoon to repair road and railway bridges, and send cars through with supplies. Commenced march this morning; march rapidly on Bocave, and will continue to Bigaa, seven miles from Malolos. Enemy have destroyed railway and telegraph line; construction train following our forces. Enemy's resistance not so vigorous to-day. Our loss thus far slight. Towns in front of our advance being destroyed by fire. Troops in excellent spirits.

"OTIS."

In reply to an inquiry from Adjt.-Gen. Corbin, asking whether Gen. Otis had supplied supplies, and if not to state what was wanted, the latter has sent a mesage, stating, "supplies of all kinds sufficient for immediate wants."

AGUINALDO'S SKILLFUL TACTICS.

The War Department Not Apparently Expecting a Quick End of the War.

Washington, March 30.—The report widely circulated that the War Department was looking for an early end to the war in the Philippines by our troops bringing on a decisive engagement and capturing the capital of the Filipino republic seems to be ill-founded. The authorities in Washington appear not so much assured of the speedy collapse of Aguinaldo as astonished at his agility. As one officer of prominence expressed it, the Filipino president carries his capital under his arm, and, when it is imperilled by the forward movement of our troops, he simply pitches it ahead of him a little further into the jungle.

Meanwhile, it is dawning upon the minds of the Jingo element here, and most seriously within the military circle, that Aguinaldo shows uncommon ability as a tactician. His mode of warfare seems to be to engage our troops, fall back little by little, and thus lure them deeper and deeper into the heart of an unknown country, till their line of communication becomes so attenuated that one sharp blow will cut it in two.

We have not now, obviously, the troops needed to occupy the territory gradually subdued as we advance, and arangements for filling up the army are progressing very slowly indeed. In short, it is everywhere recognized now that the military problem confronting us at the outset of our career in the Philippines is as serious as the civic problem with which we shall have to deal when we attempt at a later day to set up a colonial government there.

Yarn About the Philippines.

London, March 30.—The London correspondent of the Birmingham Post sends the following dispatch to that paper: "A report reaches me from a well-informed diplomatic source that the United States Government proposed to Sir Julian Pauncefote early in February that Great Britain take over the Philippine Islands upon certain conditions to be discussed between the two Powers.

"The feeling in the matter is admittedly altered since the heavy fighting began, but it is said to be beyond doubt that at the beginning of February the United States would have been glad to exchange or otherwise discharge themselves of the permanent burden of the islands."

The advertising manager of one of the most successful New York dailies relates his own experience with Ripans Tabules as follows: "I had for some time a trouble with my heart, a sort of palpitation or fluttering that was very annoying. It would occasionally produce a choking sensation that would make me take a long breath. It was very unpleasant and rather painful, too. It was not until I had suffered for a considerable time that I resorted to Ripans Tabules. Their effect was not immediate but gradual. Within a week, however, the fluttering had ceased and I found my health again at its normal point. I took one Tabule after each meal and one before going to bed. I am not taking them now for I have no present need of them. The nicest thing about the Tabules is that their action is so mild and pleasant, entirely without any of the disagreeable features associated with so many medicines. The need of them is rarely more than temporary and good results are often brought about by even a single one."

A new style package containing a dozen Tabules (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. [illegible] for the two and three cent package. THE TROUBLE IN SAMOA.

Chief Mataafa, Encouraged by a German Proclamation, Attacks Apia.

Apia, Samoan Islands, March 23, by way of Auckland, N. Z., March 30.—The troubles growing out of the election of a King of Samoa have taken a more serious turn and resulted in a bombardment of native villages along the shore by the United States cruiser Philadelphia, Admiral Kautz commanding, and the British cruisers Porpoise and Royalist. The bombardment has continued intermittently for eight days. Several villages have been burned, and there have been many casualties among the American and British sailors and marines.

As yet it is impossible to estimate the number of natives killed or injured.

As Mataafe and his chiefs, constituting the provisional government, continued to defy the treaty after the arrival of the Philadelphia, Admiral Kautz summoned the various consuls and the senior naval officers to a conference on board the Philadelphia, when the whole situation was carefully canvassed.

The upshot was a resolution to dismiss the provisional government, and Admiral Kautz issued a proclamation calling upon Mataafe and his chiefs to return to their homes. Mataafe evacuated Mulinu, the town he had made his headquarters, and went into the interior.

Herr Rose, the German Consul at Apia, issued a proclamation, supplementing the one he had issued several weeks before, upholding the provisional government. As a result of this the Mataafans assembled in large force and hemmed in the town.

The British cruiser Royalist brought up the Malietoa prisoners from the islands to which they had been transferred by the provisional government.

The Americans then fortified Mulinu, where 2,000 Malitoans took refuge. The rebels—the adherents of Mataafa—barricaded the roads within the municipality and seized the British houses.

An ultimatum was then sent to them, ordering them to evacuate, and threatening them, in the event of refusal, with a bombardment, to begin at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of March 15.

This was ignored, and the rebels began an attack in the direction of the United States and British consulates about half an hour before the time fixed for the bombardment. The Philadelphia, Porpoise and Royalist opened fire upon the distant villages. There was great difficulty in locating the enemy, owing to the dense forest, but several shore villages were soon in flames.

A defective shell from the Philadelphia exploded near the American consulate, and the marines outside narrowly escaped. A fragment struck the leg of Private Rudge, shattering it so badly as to necessitate amputation. Another fragment traversed the German consulate, smashing the crockery. The Germans then went on board the German cruiser Falke.

During the night the rebels made a hot attack on the town, killing three British sailors. A British marine was shot in the leg by a sentry of his own party, another was shot in the foot, while an American sentry was killed at his post.

The bombardment continuing, the inhabitants of the town took refuge on board the Royalist, greatly crowding the vessel.

Many people are leaving Samoa, the captain of the Royalist urging them to go so as not to interfere with the military operations.

The Porpoise has shelled the villages east and west of Apia and captured many boats.

The Americans are fighting splendidly together, but there is a bitter feeling against the Germans.

Two men, a British and a German subject, have been arrested as spies.

The bombardment of the jungle was for a time hot.

The British cruiser, Tauranga, which, it is understood, was intending to annex the Tonga Islands (a section of the Friendly Islands, in the Pacific), was intercepted at Cuva, capital of the Fiji Islands, by order of the home government.

EAGAN PRAISED BEEF.

Twelve Per Cent. Earned—Pawnbrokers Compelled to Reduce Rates.

New York, March 30.—In the annual report of the Provident Loan Society, organized five years ago by well-known financiers of this city, to conduct a pawnbroking business on a philanthropic basis, there are a number of interesting data. Loans made in 1898 aggregated $889,144, on 41,274 separate pledges, of which $809,004 were redeemed, covering 38,254 pledges. Interest accrued to the society was $58,451; interest received, $53,776. Auction sales of jewelry pledges during 1898 showed a loss of $1,450, exclusive of interest and commissions. Amount loaned was $11,001; interest, $1,943; commission and expenses, $2,216; total due society, $15,161; gross amount realized on sales, $14,771; surplus to credit of pledges, $1,060. Out of 736 pledges sold, 86 realized less than the amount loaned on them. The advances were $1,015, amount realized at sale $805.

The report of President James Speyer comments as follows on the society's business:

While our financial results clearly demonstrate that loans can be made on the pledge of personal property at less than the existing legal rate of interest allowed to pawnbrokers and still yield a fair return on the capital employed, our competition, by making loans below the legal rate (a competition which must certainly be considered as perfectly legitimate in this as in any other business) has had a far-reaching effect. A great many pawnbrokers have reduced their rates, and some even advertise that they are willing to loan at the same rate as the Provident Loan Society.

The total amount of interest earned in 1898, after paying all expenses and fixed charges, was $29,835, or about 12 per cent. annual interest on $250,000 certificates of contribution.

SECOND IS DISTASTEFUL

The Source of the Story Gives It Importance—The Governor Taboos National Politics in the Executive Mansion—Many Precedents Quoted of New York Gubernatorial Promotion.

Washington, March 30.—The dispatch from the staff corespondent of the New York Mail and Express to the effect that Gov. Roosevelt is being groomed in Albany for Presidential honors in 1900, has caused considerable talk here, where the positive ways of the Rough Rider are so well known as to be appreciated.

More importance is attached to the dispatch because of its source, as the paper which printed it is in some quarters regarded as the personal organ of the Governor. The statements and conclusions are of interest.

The Mail and Express Story.

"For many years the Governorship of New York has been regarded as the steppingstone to the Presidency. Recently, however, the "steppingstone" seems to have lost its "lift" since Gov. Hill, Gov. Flower and Gov. Morton each aspired to the Presidency without avail. But in this present day, during the administration of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, there are certain indications that the old-time charm is returning to the "steppingstone," and that a New York Governor may again be a candidate for the highest office in the land. It is early even for political leaders to discuss Presidential possibilities, and it is much too early for Gov. Roosevelt to speak his mind, though many astute politicians have their eyes in his direction.

"The talk of Gov. Roosevelt for the Vice-Presidency is regarded, by those who are close to the Governor, as breath wasted. Those who know him best say that no considerations will induce him to stand for anything short of the head of the ticket. The rumors which have reached Albany that the Governor may be invited to run for the Vice-Presidency have been received with interest, but are not regarded seriously. In the Executive Chamber National politics is tabooed, except when the Governor is with his intimate friends, and while various rumors are in the air Mr. Roosevelt is busying himself only with the affairs of State.

"He once said to the Mail and Express correspondent that it is sufficient for him to fill a public office to the best of his ability without using it as a steppingstone to anything higher.

"Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, is reported as having said that a winning ticket in 1900 would be McKinley and Roosevelt. If, then, Gov. Roosevelt should jump from the Executive chair in Albany to the Vice-Presidency, it would be no unusual thing, for years ago some of the State's greatest men were glad to rise to that office from the Governorship. Gov. George Clinton became Vice-President under Thomas Jefferson. Gov. Daniel D. Tompkins became Vice-President under James Monroe. Gov. Martin Van Buren was proud to accept the Vice-Presidency under Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory," and subsequently became President. Levi P. Morton has been both Governor and Vice-President though the latter office preceded the former.

"As to the Presidential timber which in past years has been seasoned in Albany, much of it has been used in Washington, while more of it never quite filled the bill. Gov. Cleveland was elected President in 1884, was a candidate in 1888, and was again elected in 1892. Gov. Hill had the solid New York delegation to the Democratic National Convention in 1892, and Gov. Flower has had the bee in his bonnet for years. Gov. William H. Seward was a formidable candidate against Abraham Lincoln for the Presidential nomination, and Gov. Horatio Seymour was a Presidential possibility for years. He was beaten as the Democratic candidate against Gen. Grant. Gov. Tilden, to complete the list, was beaten for the Presidency by Hayes in 1876.

Talmage Without a Church.

Washington, March 30.—The unnatural relations between Rev. Dr. Talmage and the First Presbyterian Church, of Washington, were dissolved by the resignation that was handed in at a recent prayer meeting. When Dr. Talmage went there three years ago the church was dying of exhaustion, and he hoped to restore its numbers and influence, as well as find a platform from which he could deliver the sermons that he sells to Monday newspapers throughout the world.

He agreed to preach once a week, provided the church would employ an asistant to do pastorial work, and to accept as his compensation the difference between the revenues before and after his arrival. The arrangement has been a failure. The congregations are larger than they used to be, but are composed mostly of strangers, who attend out of curiosity to hear the great preacher. The membership of the church has scarcely grown at all.

The Windsor Hotel Safe.

New York, March 30.—Workmen are bending their energies in and about the large safe in the Windsor Hotel. The safe in falling was driven through a heavy wall and turned completely around.

The safe does not appear to be a very heavy one and it is feared that the contents may have been injured by the heat, owing to the breaking of the top. It contains valuable property, the jewels of the guests, bonds, stock, valuable papers of all kinds and about $3,000 in cash, which was taken over the office counter during the day. This safe was the depository of the valuables of the guests.

Baroness Hirsch Critically Ill.

Paris, March 30.—Baroness Hirsch, widow of Baron Hirsch, the capitalist and philanthropist, is critically ill in this city.

Mme. Goldschmidt, sister of Baroness Hirsch, was hastily summoned to the Baroness's bedside. The shock of the sudden summons so affected her that upon her arrival she was stricken with paralysis, and fell unconscious by the side of her sister's bed.

GEN. ALGER'S VISIT TO CUBA.

He Expresses Satisfaction With the Sanitary Condition of Havana.

Havana, March 30.—Secretary of War Alger is now at Matanzas where he is investigating the reports of destitution among the people. At a conference before Gen. Alger left Havana Gen. Brooke and Gen. Gomez were present.

When luncheon was announced Secretary Alger took Gen. Gomez by the arm and went with him to the dining room, where he placed him at his right hand. Later, in conversation, Secretary Alger said: "I am very much satisfied with Gen. Gomez's loyal and frank attitude. He is a wise patriot."

The reporter asked the Secretary what he thought about the Cuban Assembly. Gen. Alger laughed and said: "There is no fear that any attention wil be paid to them. I know that their committee has gone to Washington, but they will not be recognized. If they have any good sense they had better join us and help us, instead of trying to make trouble. You can say that after what I saw and the information I have received, my impression is that things are going on much better than I expected. Over $700,000 has been spent on sanitary improvements, and the city looks nicer and cleaner than I believed. Gen. Ludlow has done very good work. Gen. Brooke, I think, is also working efficiently. There is no trouble in any department. Prosperity is returning, slowly, of course, but steadily. The wound was very deep and it takes a long time to heal, but there is no reason to doubt that in a very short time the effects of the war will be over. There is still much misery. I have just received a dispatch from Gen. Wilson saying that there are 20,000 persons starving in Matanzas. His report has impressed me greatly. I am going there to-day, but I have great hopes in Gen. Brooke's decree concerning mortgages on rural estates. I am sure the country will be reconstructed under military control and that we shall establish a stable government."

A committee of Spanish shipowners, headed by representatives of the firm of Sobrinos Herrora, visited Secretary Alger and demanded protection for their flags, which were recognized by the Spanish Government, but are not recognized by the Americans. Their steamships run between island ports, carrying passengers and freight, and have been fined because their flags were not recognized. Secretary Alger promised to consider the matter.

Gen. Brooke's decree remits for three years the taxes on estates that were totally destroyed in the war, for two years on those half destroyed and for one year on those not destroyed. Interest on mortgages is not to be collected during the same periods.

Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez has called on Gen. Brooke and offered to co-operate with him in the organization of a rural guard in the province of Santa Clara.

The body of J. Black, a captalist of Atlanta, has been sent to the Bacteriological Institute for examination, he having died under suspicious circumstances. Dr. Jeliffe, an American, is held incommunicado pending the investigation. Secretary of Justice Lanuza, advised by Gen. Ludlow, has ordered the Judge to proceed with energy in the case.

Six bandits are committing outrages at the Limones estate in Matanzas. Ten others are at Cidra, in the same province. Both gangs are commanded by Partillo Cajizota, a well known bandit. Cuban forces have been sent against them.

Harrisburg Bribery Inquiry.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 30.—The bribery investigating committee yesterday resumed its inquiry into the charges of bribery in connection with the United States Senatorship and the consideration of the McCarrell jury bill in the House. Representative O'Brien of Schuylkill testified that immediately after the House adjourned to prevent a reconsideration of the McCarren bill, he was told by Representative Criste of Northumberland that there was lots of money in the House that day, and that there was $1,000 for some one. This is the day Mr. Criste is alleged to have refused an offer of $1,000 to move to reconsider the bill. Twenty-five additional members were called, and answered the list of formal questions in the negative.

The sixty-first ballot for United States Senator resulted: Quay (Rep.) 94, Jenks (Dem.) 73, Dalzell (Rep.) 53. Total vote, 220; necessary to a choice, 111; paired or not voting, 33. The anti-Quay Republicans again cast their vote for Representative Dalzell.

"Senator Quay is coming north for the purpose of personally directing his fight against the insurgents in his own party," said State Treasurer Beacum to-day. "I understand also that he will carry the war still further. It is said to be his purpose to stand as a candidate for delegate to the State Convention in Beaver county, and to lead his forces on the floor of the convention."

This would appear to indicate a purpose on the part of Quay and his friends to fight to the finish. The conference of Quay leaders at the Executive mansion last night did not break up until long after midnight. It is almost certain that for the present, at least, the fight will go on.

Big Storm Near Lake Erie.

Corry, Pa., March 30.—Northwestern Pennsylvania is suffering from a severe snow storm, which has been raging for the past twelve hours, accompanied by a strong wind. There was no sign of abatement this morning. Over three feet of snow has fallen and drifts are piled as high as eight feet.

Many telegraph wires are down. At Sherman, N. Y., the storm is severe, and drifts are reported twelve feet deep.

Trains on all the railroads entering this town are running behind schedule time and are in danger of being completely stalled. In Erie the street car service is nearly stopped. The thermometer registers 30 degrees.

Cup Challenger Shamrock.

London, March 30.—Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of the challenger for the America's Cup, says the Shamrock will probably be launched privately during the first week in June. She is not so advanced as he had hoped.

The decision as to the mode of crossing the Atlantic, he declares, will rest with the captain and her builder, and will accord strictly to rules of the cup competitions, with nothing in the nature of sharp practice

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Former Mayor William C. Farr was named for Mayor and former Councilman Bridgman for recorder by the adjourned session of the Bayonne Republican City Convention Monday night. The Farr faction deposed the chairman, elected their own men and ran the convention. Meanwhile the dispossessed faction met in an anteroom and decided that the proceedings of the rump convention was illegal. Resolutions to appeal to the Hudson County Republican Committee to set aside the alleged nominations were passed by an overwhelming vote.

In reviewing the work of the Republican leaders in the last Legislature and their chances in the future political work the New Jersey editor of the New York Tribune says: "If he chooses to have a third term George A. Squire, of Union, one of the especially capable members of the Assembly, may be a strong candidate for either the speakership or leadership. Other men who will probably figure prominently in the next House are John M. Bell, of Bergen, and Roger Franklin Murray, of Union."

Advertising pays. Acting on this principle, the electrical manufacturing companies of the United States will expend a million dollars in placing their exhibits in the space allotted them in the Paris Exposition next year, says the Philadelphia Record. As a maker of electrical supplies and and an inventor of new devices for the application of electrical energy to the uses of mankind the Yankee will make his claim for the first place among competitors, and will expect to reap the harvest he has earned.

William K. Vandervilt will give his son, who is to marry Miss Fair, $10 000,000 to start married life with. Under such conditions there will be no need for the young couple to indulge in acrimonious debate in the wee hours of a cold winter's morning as to who shall go down cellar to split the kindling wood with which to start the kitchen fire to make the gruel for breakfast.

If the Hudson county authorities would get rid of Clifford, the convicted murderer, who is about to be sentenced to death again, and who has been escaping the death penalty for two years through legal technicalities, let them deport him to Philadelphia and give him nothing to drink but city water. He cannot long survive such a course.

In a letter written to a Jersey friend Vice-President Hobart says, referring to the gossip anent his renomination by the National Republican convention next year, "I do not know that I want any more office or offices; but I heartily appreciate the loyalty of my friends."

A proclamation has been issued by Gov. Voorhees setting apart Friday, April 28th, as Arbor Day. He recommends that that day be devoted by the people to the planting of forest trees and to appropriate exercises in the schools of the State.

The dollarites of New York are scarcely honoring the memory of Thomas Jefferson in the way the revered Democratic statesman would appreciate if he were alive. There is too much unseemly disagreement over the details.

Congressman Fowler made a speech at the meeting of the Sound Money League in New York Tuesday night, in which he declared that a perfect banking system could not be effected until the currency question had been settled.

Mayor Seymour has been nominated for chief executive of Bayonne by the Democrats. It is to be presumed that the people will desire to see more of him in official position, and therefore vote for him.

A Brooklyn boy has confessed to setting fire to numerous buildings. There is one thing in his confession, however, that does not resemble the eternal fitness of things. He does not smoke cigarettes.

A $65,000,000 woolen trust has been organized in New Jersey. Of course, we can not let the occasion pass without hoping that stockholders won't find their money shrinking in due time.

George Wilcox has been nominated for Mayor of Summit by the Republicans. From all appearances Summit's commencement as a city will be a lively one in a political sense.

For the next few days the man that doesn't fervently declare his wife's Easter bonnet the prettiest thing on top of the earth may well expect himself to be called a villian.

In the death of Dean Murray New Jersey loses a citizen who could honestly claim the distinction of being "a gentleman and a scholar."

March will disappear from the 1899 calendar with a record of bringing the nastiest weather imaginable.

No Vice-President has been renominated for fifty years.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The types in this column have twice insisted upon calling Assemblyman Roger Franklin Murray by a surname more popular in Hudson than in Union county. Such a legislative light cannot, however, be hidden under a wrong name. The energetic, fearless legislator whom the telephone lobby could not extinguish will survive the error.—Tribune.

Farmers have been wondering what would beceme of the horses they are raising since the use of electricity as a motive power is coming into such general use. They need have no further worry over the matter, for a factory is in operation in Hudson county for the conversion of horse flesh into bologna sausages. In some European countries horse flesh is considered quite a delicacy.—Somerset Unionist-Gazette.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

If a lengthy name has anything to do with the success of the possessor, then Will Randolph, the well-known colored barber, should find an easy path to fame and fortune. He is the proud owner of the following name: Wilbert Benjamin Franklin Priscilla Augustoria Randolph. Luckily, perhaps for his associates, he is not frequently addressed by his full name.

Tuesday, April 11th, the first marriage to occur in the Presbyterian church at Freeport, L. I., since it was built fifty years ago, will take place, when E. Douglas Finch will be united to Miss Edith Williams. The fact that makes this item of paritcular interest to Plainfielders is that Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian church, this city, will perform the marriage ceremony.

On rainy and muddy days there is an unneedful amount of profanity let loose at the southwest corner of Franklin place and Putnam avenue. When the sidewalk there was relaid at grade, no connecting link with the crosswalk was laid. As a result, all pedestrians are compelled to wade through a mud puddle on rainy days. It would be well if the street commissioner or street committee would look into the matter and see that the connecting stone is properly laid.

If there is no wind blowing and no tide is running the ferryboats of the New Jersey Central Railroad makes the trip between Jersey City and New York in less than ten minutes. When there is a breeze over the North river, or when there is a tide or both, then things happen. Then the Jersey Central commuters look out for trouble. Most of all, they cherish expectations when they go aboard the ferryboat Central. The Central has a record. She is known as the Jonah, and that is why the passengers who boarded her in Communipaw yesterday morning just before 9 o'clock groaned. There was a high wind sweeping over the water and the river looked as though it were full of strong cross currents. The passengers' fears were warranted. The Central was an even hour making the trip to New York and when it arrived it had turned around and came into the slip stern first.

A good story is related of a well-known Plainfield resident and commuter who experienced a trip last evening that was much to his discomforture. The person in question left New York aboard a Blue Line flyer and no idea that he would have any trouble in getting off at his home, so he sat down with a great deal of composure with the feeling that he would have a quick trip home. As the train neared Plainfield the commuter noticed that there were no signs of slacking up, and he began to wonder a little bit. Presently he had the experience of passing the station at the rate of a mile a minute. This did not please him, and hasty inquires of the conductor gave him the information that the next stop would be Philadelphia, and that there would be no chance of leaving the train until the Quaker City was reached. The Plainfielder then went back to his seat and tried to make the best of it. In time the train reached Philadelphia and the Plainfielder quickly arranged to return home. He did not reach his house as soon as he had anticipated, but he learned one thing—that it always pays to be on the safe side and ask a few questions.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Sawtelle's Dramatic Company appeared in one of their best plays last night, "The Captain's Mate," and it is to the credit of this organization that no better presentation of this very interesting play has been witnessed in this city. Tonight another good play will be given, one that made enormous success when lately presented at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, entitled "Slaves of Gold." The full strength of the company will be here seen to best advantage and in a scenic point of view will be unsurpassed. In fact the remaining plays of the engagement will excel any thing ever before presented in the repertoire line. Mr Sawtelle has the sole right of presentation of the plays performed by his company, and he has some of the best acting material that is in the profession. The specialties of the company, too, are good and are introduced in proper manner, so that the interest of the plays do not suffer as in other instances. By special request "The Captain's Mate" will be repeated tomorrow afternoon, and none should fail to witness it.

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." It nourishes and feeds the system. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening substance of pure grains. NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, March 30.—The Central Railroad Company are filling up the empty lot in front of the station, and will soon have a solid tract of land there, instead of the marshy piece. A temporary track was built out some time ago, and on this the cars are run out and dumped. The filling comes from Pond's where they are undergoing the spring cleaning, and consists of coal dust. This is said to make a good firm soil.

In accordance with the law that within ten days after election the newly elected school commissioners must meet and organize, the Dunellen commissioners met Tuesday night, and elected William H. Hamilton president, and Wilson Frederick district clerk. The first regular meeting will be held Tuesday evening.

Mrs. J. Y. Wilson is very ill, and early this week a consultation between Dr. Brakeley and Dr. E. W. and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, of Plainfield, was held. It was decided that an operation was necessary, and yesterday Mrs. Wilson was taken to to Muhlenberg Hospital in the ambulance.

Henry Garretson and family moved from Piscataway into the house on Washington avenue formerly occupied by Rev. Frank Fletcher, yesterday.

Mrs. Emily Apgar, of Front street, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sherman Cooley, of Flemington.

Alvah Gray, the coal and wood dealer, is confined to his home by illness.

Mrs. Augustus Sampson attended a millinery opening at Somerville Tuesday.

Postmaster Charles Coriell was in Bound Brook and Westfield Tuesday.

Mrs. Josephine Dunham is visiting friends in New York for a few days.

Mrs. Wilson Frederick spent Monday with friends in New York.

Miss Mary Conwell has gone to Burlington to spend a week.

Station Master Charles English was in Jersey City yesterday.

Adam Dealaman went to Plainfield yesterday on business.

Mrs. Annie Abbott spent Tuesday in Somerville.

NEW MARKET

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press)

New Market, March 30.—Rev. and Mrs. F. E. Peterson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, left yesterday morning for Mr. Peterson's new pastorate in Alfred.

The claims of William Coriell and Stanley Day, Jr., victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck January 9th, are still unsettled.

Abner S. Coriell and Alfred G Storms have received their commissions as justices of the peace.

Miss Edna Smalley, of South Orange, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. B. Nelson.

George Soulsby and family moved yesterday to West Orange.

L. B. Nelson and family will move to Dunellen next week.

Mulford Casterlain move here from Plainfield today.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, March 30.—The entertainment given in their hall last evening by Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, was a success socially and financially. At the close of the entertainment the hall was cleared for dancing and the members and their friends tripped away several hours to the strains of the tempting waltzes and two-steps. The music, which was enjoyed so by all, was furnished by Mrs. Buckley, of Plainfield.

Some complaint is heard about the newly laid crushed stone on Park avenue. Those who are compelled to use this street think the crushed stone should at least have a covering of dirt or sand over the rough top. This would soon pack and then we would have a fine road once more.

Miss Hattie Wilcox who has been visiting her mother has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Miss Lulu Robison is entertaining her friend, Miss Jardine, of Brooklyn, for a few days.

The Township Committee meet in the town rooms Friday night.

Goodwill Lodge, K. of P, meet in their rooms this evening.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price, including the spraying tube, is 75 cts. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

OUR CHURCH A GUIDE.

IT CLEARLY LIGHTS THE WAY OF THE CATHOLIC CITIZEN.

The Better the Latter Understands the Principles of His Religion the Better Is He Fitted to Do His Whole Duty to His Country.

There is a feeling abroad that we have no business to introduce our religion into our citizenship, but the question of religion and citizenship cannot be divided because there can be no question of such vital importance to the community at large as the question, What are the impulses that guide the daily lives of men? If religion is the guide of daily life of man, it is of vital importance, whether religion teaches principles that are for good order or whether it is opposed to the principles of good government. Religion is necessary to society because morality is necessary, and you cannot have a moral code without the fundamental principle of our religion. Voltaire's teachings in France did not do harm until the public generally began to accept them, and then the great commercial disturbances, the political dissensions and the reign of lawlessness began. Under those teachings the king and queen of France were dethroned and beheaded and the streets of Paris ran knee deep in blood. The people were carrying out to the bitter end the logic of Voltaire, and if speculative reasoning would not tell us that religion is necessary for morality these scenes of the commune are enough to show us that it is. No standing army, no police force, no constabulary, could keep the passions of the majority of the people in subjection.

The Catholic church is an all important factor in upholding any government, especially in the government of the people by the people and for the people. It is a great bulwark against anarchy and socialism and all the other isms that are opposed to government. No other church can point to the fact that the first colony to declare for religious toleration was the little Catholic colony of Maryland. The American ought to be a better Catholic on account of the religious freedom he enjoys in this glorious country. The freedom gives him an opportunity to study his religion, and the better he understands its principles the better citizen of the republic he will be. We have a glorious record in this country. Away back in the days when a Catholic sailor, with a faith deeper than his knowledge, rescued from the waves this continent and gave it to Europe to be civilized he brought to these shores the cross of Christ to the savage Indians.

But we do not stop there. There is not a spot of land from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Hudson bay to the gulf of Mexico, that is not made sacred by the blood of Catholic explorers. The Jesuit Marquette discovered the Father of Waters in the center of the country, and other Jesuits explored the center of New York state and taught the Indians wherever they could be found. These men came for the glory of God and the salvation of their fellow men. They did not come for the glory of the world or for riches.

When we come down to the early days of this struggling republic, when the Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia, we find delegates there pledging their lives and honor to the support of the colonies. As one of those delegates went up the aisle to sign that memorable document another said, "There goes millions." That delegate who represented millions for the support of the colonies was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, and he was a Catholic. In the struggle that followed who was it of all the nations of the world who came to our aid? It was Catholic France. Who organized our first navy? It was Captain Jack Barry, another Catholic. On the staff of George Washington we find Richard Moylan, another Catholic, and we find members of our faith in every battle that was fought for this government.

But our claims are not made because we shed our blood. The success of our country is in the prosperity which accompanies peace and in all the movements to develop trade by building our canals and railroads and tunneling our hills. We find the vast majority of those who left their bones bleaching in the interior of the country on these lines were men of our faith. It is not necessary for us to contend with our separated brethren on these grounds. We are prepared to stand on the constitution of the United States and that alone.

The church put its quietus on the gladiatorial contests of Rome, and soon the custom passed away. It began the abolishment of slavery in Rome, and that teaching has spread until there is very little slavery in the world today. It was not able to save the Roman empire, but saved the classics we enjoy today and which had such a refining influence on the middle ages. It brought about the science of architecture among the nations of Europe. It set out to civilize, and we, with all our wealth and knowledge, have to imitate its teachings when we attempt to construct our grand buildings. It is this great force which has made the American Catholic. The church is not acting today as it did in the fifth, the tenth or the sixteenth centuries. It adjusts itself to circumstances. What shall the American Catholic be with such a mother as that? She is the friend of liberty, and she will be, in her children, the saver of liberty. If we have rights, we also have duties, and we should not forget the duties we owe our grand movement. By an exalted manhood and womanhood, by probity in life and by morality in private life we should show we are worthy of our citizenship. If we fail in this, ours will be the last experiment of self government, and we will be recreant to the teachings of our mother church.—John J. Delaney in Pittsburg Catholic.

RESTORED TO THE CHURCH.

The Interesting History of a Chapel in Austrian Poland.

There has recently been restored to Catholic custody and to divine service an interesting little monument in the Polish town of Oswiecim (Austrian Poland). This place was in olden days the residence of the dukes of that name, descendants of the Piasts, the first royal family of Poland, and there are still to be seen the ruins of their castle and of the Dominican church built by them in the fourteenth century. Filled with admiration at the apostolic labors of the two holy Dominican missionaries, St. Hyacinth and St. Ceslaus, in the thirteenth century, the Dukes of Oswiecim had obtained from them some friars of the order and kept them long in their capital.

But in the fifteenth century troubles broke over them. The Hussites set fire to their convent and would have also burned the church, but were deterred and scattered, the legend tells, by an apparition of St. Hyacinth. In the following century again the heretics seized the convent and drove away the friars. In 1596 Clement VIII had just canonized St. Hyacinth, and at the same time heresy was once more defeated, and the Dominicans returned and transformed their chapter room into a chapel dedicated to the new canonized saint. But in 1655, another year of disaster, Oswiecim was taken and completely destroyed by the Swedish troops. Once again the Dominicans were driven forth, and their property eventually passed into the hands of Jews. It was not until 1894 that the ruins were bought back from these proprietors by a committee of Catholics formed for the purpose.

The chapel of St. Hyacinth has now been restored and forms one of the chief ornaments of the ancient city. It is true, the Dominicans have not returned to their old home, but at any rate another religious order has replaced them, and during the present year the Salesians will form an establishment on the spot.—London Tablet.

HISTORICAL LIES.

Church Calumnies That Fade Away In Nineteenth Century Light.

The nineteenth century, which appears to be and is considered so anti-Catholic and so antireligious, has seen and has produced the most ample justification of the immaculate honor of the church and of Catholics in the order of doctrine and in the sphere of facts.

The most vilified pontiffs have been shown to be entirely free from the errors attributed to them and from the faults with which they were charged. At the same time those so called Catholic crimes so richly exploited by heretical and sectarian malice and so generally believed in by the herd of sciolists and the ignorant have been dissipated like mists before the wind.

An educated person today smiles at the idea of attributing to the church and to Catholics the slaughter of the Albigenses, the Templars and the Huguenots, just as he smiles when any one persists in attributing to Catholics the famous gunpowder plot for blowing up the English parliament house.

These historical lies, now exploded by the religious criticisms of writers in great part non-Catholic, are no longer invoked except by the parrots of the most fossilized liberalism, or by the idiots of the pen, or by the pariahs of Freemasonry, who continue to fire them at the church, the Jesuits and the Catholics as if they were cannon balls instead of being soap bubbles.—Osservatore Romano.

The Holy Father's Recovery.

That wonderful man, Leo XIII, has really made another recovery. It was only recently that, turning to his personal attendant, he said, with his sweet smile, "Well, Pio, I wonder what they will say now, those clever persons who have killed and buried me so often in the last 20 years."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Catholic Wife and Mother.

[Read before the world's congress of Catholic representative women, Chicago, May 18, 1893.]

The queen may flaunt her golden crown,
Her jeweled scepter sway,
While cringing serfs about her throne
Her lightest nod obey,
But queen of hearts and queen of home,
And second to none other,
Is the sovereign of all Christendom,
The Catholic wife and mother!

Her crown may be a thorny one,
Her scepter Calvary's cross,
The pathway leading to her throne
Thick set with pain and loss,
But in faith's glorious domain
The angels crown and clothe her—
Our own triumphant suzerain,
The Catholic wife and mother!

Great deeds have gifted women done
In art and literature,
Rare grace hath even science won
From woman's genius pure,
But high and broad as heaven's dome,
Surpassing every other,
Is the life work of the queen of home,
The Catholic wife and mother!

Inspirer of lofty aims!
Promoter of deeds sublime!
Her glory, like a beacon, flames
Athwart the clouds of time!
Happy is he whose lot she shares
(When deathless vows betroth her),
Happy who wins and reverent wears
The Catholic wife and mother!

God guard her when her hand or foot
The homely cradle stirs!
Thrice blessed is the golden fruit
Of harvest such as hers!
God strengthen her when demons tempt,
When worldlings scout or loathe her!
Love may not from love's thorns exempt
The Catholic wife and mother!

A lighthouse on the cliffs of home,
Above time's stormy sea,
Guiding the lost ones o'er the foam
From shoals and quicksands free;
A fortress in a land of strife,
Where brother wars 'gainst brother—
Thou art the bliss and balm of life,
Unselfish wife and mother!

Then bravely tread where angels lead,
A queen by right divine!
Though flesh may falter, heart may bleed,
A glorious trust is thine.
Men's destinies are in thy hands;
To thee—and not another—
We cry: "Hail, light of all the lands!
Hail, Catholic wife and mother!"

CHAPTER XIII.

The waiters were just beginning to set the tables for breakfast in the saloon beneath the broad skylight. The crew had ceased the morning "squilgeeing" and swabbing forward, and were busy stowing away mops, buckets and brooms. One or two passengers had crawled up the companionway and dropped into seats amidships, staring in envy, if not disapproval, at the swinging stride of the young officer whose cheeks were beginning to glow again with the flush of health, and Pancha, clinging to her perch at the stern, after following him with her eyes far up the deck until she knew he had almost reached the point where he suddenly faced about in his swift march, again resolutely turned her back upon the Idaho and all that appertained to her, and found herself for the fortieth time gazing out over the glistening wake, and for the first time with a thrill of excitement.

The taut trolling line was snapping and swaying, and far astern something gleaming in the slant of the sunshine came springing into view from the crest of a wave, then diving into the depths of the net and darting to right and left beneath the heaving waters—a dolphin, a beauty, she knew in an instant, and grasping the cord she strove with all her strength to haul in. For a second or two it came readily enough, then, with sudden jerk, whizzed taut again, as the game-victim made a magnificent dash for liberty.

Again she laid hold, and bracing her slender feet threw her whole weight on the line and pulled away, again with only temporary success, for the dolphin only shook himself and struggled, but suddenly darting forward he as suddenly slackened the line, and Pancha, who had been pulling for dear life, with set teeth and straining muscles, fell suddenly back and was spared a hard tumble only by a pair of strong, clasping arms that quickly righted if they did not as quickly release her, and Pancha, furiously blushing, excitedly panting, could only show her white teeth one instant as she fluttered out a faint "Gracias!" and wriggled out of the gentleman's embrace, then with the instinct of her sport loving race grabbed again for the line, and now there were seasoned muscles behind her, and the dolphin knew he had met his master.

Hand over hand they pulled away, 5, 10, 15 fathoms, and the dripping cord curled upon the deck, and at last the gleaming beauty of the Pacific seas came leaping into view and swinging at the stern, and then Pancha, with sparkling eyes and eagerly flushing cheeks, ducked out of the way as Loring skillfully swung her prize aboard and sent the magnificent fellow gasping and flapping upon the deck.

And so at last the spell was broken. He had spoken slowly and with grave kindness in his modulated voice a few words of the stately and sonorous tongue she loved, and now in the fresh, sweet air of morning, in the gladness of the ocean breeze and the beyeay of life and youth, these two stood there at the taffrail of the Idaho, she so slender, dark and willowy, he almost Saxon in his blue eyed, fair haired, fair skinned manliness, alone with each other and their prize. The child who had fainted at sight of him less than a week agone was peeping shyly up at him now and thinking how good a face was that, so fresh and fair and strong, with its smooth shaven chin and cheeks, its round white throat and the flawless teeth that glistened under the curling mustache whenever he opened his lips to speak and that showed so seldom at any other time. Not until this moment had she ever seen him smile.

The fringe of her Mexican rebosa had caught the button of his snugly fitting sack coat, and it needed her deft, slim fingers to release it. Then in its frantic struggles the dolphin threatened to spring back to its native element, and Loring had to head him off and thrust him to the middle of the deck again, close to the skylight of the saloon, and there he bade her come and watch the vivid, swiftly changing, iridescent hues of the beautiful creature, and she obediently drew near and stood bending over in mingled triumph and compassion.

"Ah, que es bonito!" she sighed as the frantic leapings seemed to cease and the prize lay gasping at full length, exhausted by the violence of the long battle.

Presently Loring called the steward to send up for the senorita's captive and to serve it at the senorita's table for breakfast, and then perhaps he might have returned to his solitary walk, but the study of Spanish is never more fascinating than when rosy lips and pearly teeth are framing the courtly phrases. Whatever the cause of her agitation the night of the meeting, whatever his preconceived idea of her complicity in the scheme that robbed him of his guard at Gila Bend and laid him low in the dust of the desert, Loring found as the result of five days' observance and reflection that his original views had given place to doubt, and doubt at last to confidence in her utter innocence.

Knowing what ordeal was before him at the end of the voyage, he had studiously avoided her, but now avoidance was no longer possible. For a few moments they stood there, saying little, for he was not practiced in the speech of Spanish, and at any time his words were few, and then he asked her if she would not like to walk. When Turnbull clambered up the stairway just as the breakfast gong was banging, he was amazed to find the engineer and Pancha, arm in arm, pacing swiftly up and down the deck in perfect step and apparently in as perfect accord, the girl's delicate face lighted up with a glow that was not all of exercise, her wonderful eyes looking frankly into Loring's fine, thoughtful face, her free hand gesticulating eagerly as she chattered lilthely, almost ceaselessly, for Loring was a flattering listener to men or women, old or young.

It was a transfigured maiden that met the sisters De la Cruz as they ventured from their staterooms to the table. Even Inez, their boasted beauty, looked sallow and wan beside her radiant cousin, and the fat duenna, their aunt, gazed in mingled astonishment and disapproval at the sight.

But Pancha was the heroine of the day. Pancha's hand had caught the dolphin, and the captain showered his loud congratulations, the purser handed her to her seat and would gladly have sidled into the chair of Senor Sepulvida, who had come aboard with them at Guaymas and kept his berth until the previous evening, yet now came forth to face the gathering company at breakfast. The skipper had placed the stout senora at his own right, with Turnbull just beyond her. To Senorita Inez he had given the left hand seat, with Loring on her other side and Senorita Carmen just beyond him. So there was the engineer flanked by damsels said to enjoy no little wealth and social station, yet his blue eyes never wandered over across and farther down the table than where sat Pancha with a stuffy old cigar merchant between her and their party, and that scapegrace, Sepulvida, ogling on the other hand. Two at least of that reassembling company deserved their appetites at breakfast. But Turnbull had no zest for anything, and the women generally only feebly toyed with their forks. The colonel had found time to seize Loring by the arm and whisper on the stairs:

"By Jove, young man, you're playing a deep game! D' you expect to find out anything?"

"I have—already," said Loring.

"The devil you have! What?"

"She's innocent—utterly!"

And that bright morning was followed by a cloudless afternoon and a sweet, still, starlit evening, and by this time all men and all women were on deck, and the Idaho was foaming swiftly on through the summer seas, and people went below reluctantly at night and woke to new and brighter life on the morrow, and Loring was up with the sun and drinking deep drafts of old ocean's ozone as he paced the decks till Pancha came.

And one day followed another, and Turnbull read and yawned and dozed and tried to talk to the charming senoritas, but couldn't muster enough Castilian, and Traynor chalked the decks for "horse billiards" and shuffleboard, and everybody took a hand at times, and one evening, despite the havoc moist salt air plays with catgut, Pancha's guitar and that of the purser were brought into requisition, and Pancha was made to sing, a thing she didn't do too well as yet, and Pancha knew it without asking when she looked in Loring's eyes, and no power or persuasion could make her try again, until long, long after.

They were having now an ideal voyage so far as wind and wave and weather were concerned, but the Senoritas de la Cruz declared it the stupidest they'd ever known, and the officers—los Americanos—the least attentive or attractive of those with whom they had ever sailed. And everybody seemed to long for the sight of the green headlands of the Golden Gate and the terraced slopes of San Francisco; all save two—Pancha, to whom the ending of that voyage meant the ending of the sweetest days her life had ever known and the beginning of a school drudgery she dreaded, and Loring, to whom the return to San Francisco meant the taking up anew of a tangled case that had become hateful to him, to whom there was the prospect of a meeting that he would gladly avoid, to whom there was coming an inevitable parting, the thought of which oppressed him strangely, and he could not tell why.

The marvelous green of the California bluffs spanned the horizon for miles on their starboard hand one radiant afternoon as they went below to the captain's dinner, the last before reaching port. The sunshine had been brilliant all the day, yet there came a chilly, shivering air toward 2 o'clock, and the first officer shrugged his shoulders and looked dubiously ahead, but gave no other sign. Gayly they drank the skipper's health and pledged the Idaho in her best champagne.

Long they lingered over the table, and laughter, jest and song and story livened the hours that came to an end at last, and Pancha stole her little hand within Loring's arm for the last starlight walk along the now familiar decks, and lo, when they issued from the brightly lighted saloon the stars were gone, the steamer was forging ahead through a chill mist that grew thicker with every moment, and as half speed was ordered and the mournful notes of the whistle groaned out throbbingly over the leaden sea she swayed uneasily over a heavy ground swell that careened her deeper and deeper as the mist thickened to fog, and oilskins and sou'westers came out and dark figures went dripping about the decks. Loring fetched his uniform cape from below and muffled in it Pancha's slender form, and for awhile they tottered up and down, then abandoned the attempt to walk and settled in their chairs at the end of the bench, just where she had sat and clung to the white stanchion and sobbed her heart out that night in Guaymas bay. Pancha could have sobbed almost as hard, though no longer in loneliness and desolation, this very night.

As early as 9:30 Senora Valdez had gone below, following her lovely nieces and warning Pancha to come at once. It was too dark, too damp, to remain there longer, but Loring begged, and the Idaho lurched and rolled sympathetically at the moment, and the duenna found further argument impossible. She had to rush for her room, and later to confide her mandates as to Pancha to the stewardess, who came, peeped and considered them ill timed. At six bells Turnbull and a few determined yet uncomfortable souls were consuming cognac and playing vingt et un in the cabin, while the lookouts were doubled on the deck and every ship's officer stood to his post. The sound of the muffled tinkle of the bell roused Pancha from the silence that had fallen on the pair.

"I must go," she murmured for perhaps the twentieth time, and yet she could not.

Once more, mournful, moaning, the deep toned whistle poured forth its warning on the night, and before the long blast had died away up from the depths of the dense fog bank ahead rose an echo, accentuated with sharp, staccato shrieks. Then came a sudden, startling cry at the bow; then deep down in the bowels of the ship the clang of the engine gong; then shouts and rushings to and fro at the hidden forecastle, and Loring started to his feet only to be hurled headlong to the deck, for, with fearful shock, some mammoth monster struck and pierced and heeled to port the stanch little coaster, and then, withdrawing from the fearful rent in her quarter, came crashing and grinding down the side, sweeping away every boat that hung at the starboard davits, ripping through the shrouds like pack thread and rolling and wallowing off astern amid a pandemonium of shouts for aid and frantic screams of startled women. In one moment the great steamer had vanished as suddenly as she came, and the Idaho was settling by the bows.

A signal rocket tore aloft to tell the tale of desperate peril.

"Stand by us, Santiago! Don't you see you've cut us down?" bellowed the captain through his trumpet.

Again the steampipe roared, and the mournful whistle crooned the death song. No answering signal came to cheer their hearts with hope of rescue. The great Pacific mailer was lost in the fog full half a mile away. The crew came rushing up on deck, reporting everything under water below. There was a mad dash of fear crazed men for the boats, discipline and duty both forgotten.

Over the first officer's prostrate form they sprang at the "falls" of the sternmost—the longboat—a huge, bearded seaman in the lead. The captain, with fury in his eye, leaped in his way, shouting blasphemy and orders to go back, and was knocked flat with a single blow. The brawny hand had seized the swaying tackle. Three seamen were already scrambling into the swinging craft when a revolver cracked, the big leader threw up his hands with a yell of agony and toppled headlong upon the deck. Then a lithe figure vaulted over the longboat's gunwale. One after another three seamen came tumbling out abashed and overawed. The captain regained his feet and senses. The boat was lowered by cooler hands until it danced in safety on the waves, and one after another the women were carefully passed down to the care of him whose stern, clear headed sense and instant action had proved their sole salvation—a landsman, Loring of the engineers.

JOCKO'S SUNDAY OUT.

He Released the Parrots and Other Creatures, and There Was a Time.

A sad-faced monkey with a fringe of agricultural chin whiskers got out of his cage in a bird store on Bromfield street yesterday afternoon, and, owing to the absence of every one from the store, he was not put back in it again until about 12 o'clock at night. When he did go it was at the instance of two policemen armed with long poles, who had broken through the door in order to stop the devastation which he was causing in the interior, and he returned to impr sonment with the proud consciousness that he had done everything which a monkey could do to make it interesting for the other occupants of the store.

His first act on escaping from his cage appears to have been to let out the parrots. There are many brilliant hued African parrots in the store, and the color scheme created by their release seemed to please the monkey immensely, for he attempted a closer acquaintance with them. The parrots, however, were coy, and sought the cages at the top of the store, so that the monkey was only able to pull out the tail of one of them. About this time he began to get hungry, and his eye chancing to light on the goldfish which were swimming about in glass globes in the centre of the store he thought that they would do for a meal. He first tried to snatch them out, but this process was too slow, and he pushed one of the globes over, smashing it, scattering the fish about on the floor.

It was this performance which attracted the attention of two policemen. It is on record that they did actually chase the monkey an hour before they succeeded in getting him back into his cage. He showed marked agility in avoiding them, bounding from the door to the door to the cages at the side of the room, and from one side to the other, until their eyes stuck out of their heads in the attempt to follow his movements.

Finally the monkey was cornered and then driven along the wall and into his cage. The store looked like moving day, but the cause of it all was wholly uninjured, and in as good condition as ever.—Boston Transcript.

HE SAID "POKE AND BEANS."

The Failure of a Georgia Man to Pass Himself Off as a Yankee.

Joe Cavan, who has had a whirlwind experience in the South and West, said to the crowd the other day: I was at a dinner once in St. Louis. It was given by Gov. Marmaduke. Before we had given our orders, for at a Western dinner every man has the privilege of saying what he wants, the Governor asked each one of his guests where he hailed from. One from Tennessee, one from Illinois, one from California. The East was not represented so, I handed in my card from Vermont. Just then the waiter passed the bill of fare, and my ruling passion asserting itself, 'Poke and beans,' said I, in my natural voice.

"'Cavan,' said the Governor of Missouri, vehemently, 'you're from Georgy. No man from Vermont ever said "poke and beans," and your scheme of passing for a Yankee, suh, is reprehensible, and will cost you the wine.'

"I have sailed under my own colors ever since."—New York Sun.

The Clergyman Popped the Cork.

When the telephone first came up at the end of 1877, a number of scientific gentlemen, along with the mayor and other authorities of Dover, went to St. Margaret's to try whether a conversation could be, really held across the sea. So the telephones were fixed, made of polished mahogany, and in shape like a champagne glass without a foot. By placing one to the ear and speaking into the cup of the other a continuous conversation was kept up without difficulty. Songs were sung—"Star of the Evening" and "Auld Lang Syne"—across the rough and stormy Channel. By way of ascertaining the delicacy of the acoustics some one tried whistling; that was heard. Then some one said, "Let us try the popping of a cork." Agreed; but no bottles were at hand. Then a clergyman present rose to the occasion; he put his finger in his cheek and admirably imitated the sound. "You have just drawn a cork," came the voice from the other side, with just a shade of melancholy envy in the tone; and a hearty laugh was raised by the mistake..

"'Bout 'Nuther Killin'."

During the days when Sherman's army was operating in front of Atlanta the lines at last got so close together that the men of the opposing forces could talk across the intervening space. Hood had several times massed his army and thrown it against one of Sherman's wings, only to be sent back reeling, torn and bleeding. One morning a sergeant "of ours" called out:

"Say, Johnnie!"

"Hello, Yank!"

"How many you rebs left?"

"Dunno, Yank. 'Bout 'nuther killin', reckon."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Too Much for the Elephant.

One of the chief features of the circus which had struck town was an elephant which, it was claimed, could play any piece on the piano. When the time came for this to be done a piano was brought into the ring, and the elephant just after. The elephant sat down on the stool, and struck one note.

Immediately afterward he gave a groan, whereupon the manager came up and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the elephant has just discovered the tooth of his mother in one of the keys, and is overcome with grief, so I will immediately telegraph for another piano; in the meantime, we will proceed with the rest of the performance."

Patching a Blood Vessel.

In one of the black-land counties of South Texas is a negro doctor who enjoys a more or less extensive practice among the colored population.

A white physician accosted him on the road the other day, saying: "Well, Doctor Sam, where have you been?"

"Been to see Bill Johnsing, sah. Wraslin' wid Mose Jones he bus' a blood-vessel."

"Why, that's serious! What did you prescribe?"

"Ah! I done fix him all right, wid alum an' gum arabic. Alum to dry dee pahts togeddah, an' de gum to stick 'em."

Why Charley Took a Day Off.

General Joseph E. Johnston, Confederate Commander, now deceased used to relate that in the hottest part of one of the early battles of the Civil War he felt his coat-tails pulled. Turning about, he recognized a young man who had been employed in his tobacco factory previous to enlistment. "Why are you not in your place fighting?" the General demanded angrily. "Why, I just wanted to tell you that, if you don't mind, I will take my day off to-day!"

"My ancestors came over in the Mayflower," said the icy young woman.

"Indeed!" responded her equally frigid friend. "None of my people have ever, to my knowledge, traveled otherwise than first class."—Washington Star.

DR. ECOB DECLINES THEIR CALL.

Elizabeth's Wealthy Congregation Questioned His Orthodoxy.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, March 27.—Rev. James H. Ecob, D. D., formerly of Denver, Col., has declined a call to the pastorate of the Westminster Presbyterian church, the wealthiest congregation of this city. Dr. Ecob is a Congregationalist, but was at one time a Presbyterian. The call extended to him a few weeks ago caused a division in the congregation, and a protest to the Presbytery was prepared. Those opposed to him found fault with some of his utterances, which they declared were not orthodox.

Dr. Ecob in his letter to the church said: "It is a painful duty to return the call to you unanswered, knowing as I do the intense earnestness of many whom I have learned to love and honor, but the interests of the church must always be placed first These sacred interests cannot be conserved without practical unanimity. Until that is secured the question of the pastorate ought not to be presented."

Dr. Ecob left the Presbyterian denomination as a protest against the acts of the General Assembly in connection with the Briggs case.

A Swindling Piano Tuner.

Piano dealers and users are complaining of an impostor who palms himself off on unsuspecting piano owners as an "expert tuner and polisher." His method is a very plausible one, as he claims to represent some prominent piano house, which, he says, sent him to tune a piano. He invariably leaves the instrument in worse shape than before he touched it, and in many cases ruins fine instruments.

SPORTING.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The proposed series of games between the Roselle Casino and the Park Club has been declared off by consent of both teams The season is so nearly ended and the interest in the sport is so low that both teams decided that the series would be better left unplayed.

Probably the last event of the bowling season at the Park Club will be the series of three games between the Plainfield and North Plainfield delegations of the club. The first of the series will be rolled on the club alleys Saturday night. Plainfield will be represented by a five man team, headed by H D. Hibbard. The North Plainfield delegation will be led by F. O Ball, captain of the regular Park Club team. The other games will be played on successive Saturday evening.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Rev. Melville E. Snyder, pastor of St. James Methodist Episcopal church, New Brunswick, believes in encouraging cycling among his congregation. He has organized a bicycle club, of which he is president and captain and hereafter he will set the pace in club runs.

An official century course has been laid out from Englewood to New Brunswick by the New Jersey Division of the Century Road Club, with checking stations at Englewood, Ridgefield, Belleville, Milburn, Scotch Plains and Highland Park. The course has been surveyed by three different engineers and the total distance of 101 858 miles has been accepted by the Road Records committee. Riders seeking century medals must check at the places named and have the checkers sign with ink or indelible pencil. No distinction will be made between paced, unpaced and competition records in century rides. The division officers have issued a neat checking book for the use of riders. The first century of the New Jersey Division will be held on May 28th.

GOLF.

Next Tuesday evening the annual meeting of the Park Golf Club will be held when arrangements will be made to make the club house larger by building an addition.

There was a misunderstanding about the date of the holding of the annual meeting of the Park Golf Club. It was not held last Tuesday night as previously announced but will be held next Tuesday.

COAL "JIMMIES" TO GO.

Central and the Lehigh Roads to Do Away With Small Cars.

The Lehigh Valley and Central Railroad of New Jersey have sold to a Canadian railway all their six-ton "Jimmy" cars. A proof of this is that shops on both roads have been instructed not to repair any more of them. Hereafter, as soon as possible, both roads will use only gondolas, with patent couplers and air brake attachments.

Both roads have thousands of these small cars in use now, and by disposing of them all at once they will have much trouble to supply the demand at nine collieries for cars.

This move on the companies' part is compulsory, because of a national law which provides that all railroads after 1900 must use cars, whether freight, coal, or any kind, with patent couplers. To put these couplers on "Jimmies" would be too expensive, and the cheapest method was by disposing to them.—Hazleton Standard.

NEW PRESIDENT OF SETON HALL.

Rev. George F. Brown Likely to Be Chosen President of the College.

Rev. George F. Brown is highly spoken of as a probable successor of the late Rev. Dr. Joseph J Synott as president of Seton Hall College, South Orange. Father Brown is at present acting president of the college, and is filling his position admirably From all indications it is not likely that a president will be appointed until after the close of the present college term. The board of trustees, together with Rev. Bishop Winand W. Wigger, have the power of the appointment, and when they will meet in session can only be guessed at, as the Bishop is now in Bermuda.

Father Brown is one of the youngest priests in the diocese. He is liked by all who know him. He has a magnetic personality and a pleasant disposition. He is a talented musician and is considered one of the best art critics in the country.

William Newcorn was in Orange yesterday on legal business.

RISKY MARINE REPORTING.

Nerve and Skill Must be Possessed by the Man in the Skiff.

It was a pleasant, breezy day in the latter part of September. The wind was blowing from the northeast in the Straits of Mackinac with just enough force to raise a white crest on occasional waves somewhat larger than their fellows. It seemed quite enough sea for the cockleshell skiff which held the marine reporter and his papers and messages, although but a pleasant sailing breeze for the towering three-masted schooner which had been towing it along side. The schooner was bound down to Lake Huron for a load of cedar, and her dingy, smoke-discolored sails were piled high to the topmast head.

The marine reporter had been on watch for just four hours. That is, he had been rowing about the Straits of Mackinac on the lookout for and boarding passing boats for that length of time. Ere long he discovered and started to intercept a large wooden steamer towing two consorts, coming up the straits.

Getting directly on the track of the steamer, the reporter's boat rested until the big wooden hull loomed right over it. Then, with a skillful sweep of the oars, the skiff was drawn out of the way and alongside the steamer, which checked not for an instant. The reporter was standing up in the boat now. "Stand by," he cried, and a head appeared above the bulwarks ten feet above him. With a skill born of practice, the reporter threw a coil of line which was attached to the bow of the skiff, and holding the slack in his hand checked the jerk which came when the steamer commenced towing the skiff.

The crew of the steamer knew what was wanted, and at once lowered a bucket over the side of the boat holding a couple of iron belaying pins for weights on the letters in the bottom. Every man in the crew wanted a newspaper, as the voyage had been long, and the Captain wanted two, but the reporter had enough to go around. There was an order from the owner in Cleveland to the Captain of the steamer, sent by telegraph in care of the station at Mackinaw, and to be delivered by the reporter, and two letters also to be sent to the station.

"See anyhing new coming up, Captain?"

"No, nothing but gales of wind dead ahead, and a little fog on Saginaw Bay," was the response.

"All right, let go." A deck hand cast off the painter, and, giving a pull on a tiller line the skiff was steered from the dreaded vortex at the propeller.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

BULLET IN A HAILSTONE.

A Tale that Would Do Credit to Baron Munchausen.

Col. Clark R. Wescott of London, England, who has been spending a couple of months in Chicago and the West, in the interest of a syndicate which owns considerable mining property in this country, is responsible for the following account of a singular natural phenomenon. His story is as follows:

"One hot day a couple of weeks since, I was riding along a mountain road in Colorado on my way to a mine in which I am interested, when I noticed high above me, soaring in majestic circles, an eagle. I had a 45-90 Winchester slung across my back, and it was but the work of a moment to unsling the gun and fire at the bird, which appeared to be directly above me. The shot was a clear miss, and not caring to waste any more cartridges, I was about to ride on, when I was startled to hear what I took to be the dull 'chung' of a stone thrown by an unseen hand, which fell into a little gully partly filled with leaves, within twenty feet of me.

"I looked carefully about me in all directions, but could see no sign of a human being, and then dismounted, and scraping back the leaves, was astonished to find a piece of ice as large as a goose egg and about the same shape. I was further astonished to discover my rifle ball firmly imbedded in the centre. I have speculated a great deal over this phenomenon since that time, and the only solution I can see is that the ball in passing through the cloud gathered the moisture and held it by its whirling motion, so that it was frozen at a higher altitude and fell to the earth as I have described."—Chicago Chronicle.

FINER GOLF GROUNDS FOR HILLSIDE CLUB

Clubhouse to be Enlarged so as to Have Plenty of Room.

236 ACTIVE MEMBERS NOW.

SUPPORT FROM OTHER THAN GOLFERS IS ANTICIPATED.

Mr. Ivany, Formerly Steward of the Seabright Club, Will be in Charge of the New Restaurant, Which is Expected to be a Popular Feature—The Lay of the Links to be Changed to Make Better Playing

The trustees of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club are planning to carry out some much needed improvements to the clubhouse and golf grounds. The present dining room is but 11 feet by 16 feet and the kitchen but 11 feet by 12 feet. The experience of last season demonstrated that this space was much too limited to accommodate the large number of members who patronized the restaurant. Golfers and others were sometimes obliged to waste much valuable time in waiting to be served with luncheon and this created great dissatisfaction. It is proposed to erect an addition to the clubhouse on the north side as shown in the plan above. The present kitchen will be converted into a private dining room. Adjoining this will be a new dining room of spacious dimensions (16 feet by 39 feet). This room will run entirely through the house from east to west, having windows at either end, which will provide abundance of light and free circulation of air. The present butler's pantry will be converted into a broad hall leading to the main entrance of the new dining room. The rear piazza will be extended and a door will give entrance from thence to the new dining room at the east end.

To the north of this dining room will be the new kitchen, butler's pantry, etc. It has not been decided what disposition will be made of the present dining room. Perhaps it will be devoted to the use of the ladies for a reception room, their present reception room really being needed for additional locker room. In making these improvements no extravagance will be indulged in, but the work will be done in the simple and inexpensive manner which characterizes the present clubhouse. Mr. Ivany, the former steward of the Seabright Club, has been engaged to act in that capacity for the Hillside Club during the coming season. Mr. Ivany will be assisted by his wife, and he will employ a cook and house servant. As the entire time of these four persons will be devoted to catering to the wants of members in the clubhouse, this department will be thoroughly equipped.

The power of the windmill has proved inadequate to pump the large amount of water necessary for the comfort of the members, and a gasoline engine will be erected to act as an auxiliary pump in conjunction with the windmill.

Interested friends have already subscribed about three-quarters of the amount of money necessary to carry out these improvements, and it is confidently expected that the remainder will be obtained shortly. From this fund will be devoted a sufficient amount to enable the golf committee to introduce artificial hazards and other betterments on the golf course, making the links a delight to the ardent golfers of the club. Bonds will probably be issued similar to those issued last year in all respects excepting that these bonds will not carry interest until March 1st, 1902. Thus it will be seen that all these improvements will be obtained without increasing the expenses of the club at all for the next three years. By that time, it is hoped, the club will be upon so firm a basis as to be able to exercise its option to purchase the beautiful property it has secured.

It was feared that a large number of resignations would be tendered in consequence of raising the annual dues from twelve to twenty dollars. Thus far this fear has not been realized to any great extent. The active membership is now two hundred and thirty-six, being within fourteen of the limit.

The trustees believe that this club will become more popular than ever this year, by reason of the added attractions to the clubhouse and golf course, and they look forward with confidence to having a "waiting list" before the season is far advanced. If the trustees carry out the improvements they contemplate, and furnish a good restaurant as well, the club will receive the support, doubtless, not only of golfers, but of many who drive or ride a wheel.

The clubhouse certainly occupies a beautiful location, commanding an extended view over the valley to the mountains beyond, and its broad piazzas furnish a charming resting place to break the monotony of a drive or ride.

In fact this clubhouse constitutes the only attraction of the kind within easy driving distance of Plainfield, and for this reason, if for no other, this popular club should continue to enjoy the cordial support of the public spirited citizens of our city.

The officers of the club elected to serve during this year are as follows: President, Geo. A. Chapman, 443 Stelle avenue; vice-president, Albert H. Atterbury, 315 West Seventh street; secretary, Josiah Browne, 1225 Watchung avenue; treasurer, Jan VanHerwerden, 1302 South avenue; chairman of the house committee, George P. Mellick, 224 LaGrande avenue.

The following named gentlemen composed the golf committee: Lewis E. Waring, chairman; Dr. F. C. Ard, Rutherford M. Shepard, Thomas K. VanBoskerck, Henry W. Lowe.

THIRTY TO RIDE THE GOAT.

A Large Delegation of New Members to be Initiated by Franklin Council.

There was no initiation at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., last evening, but next week thirty candidates will be put through. This will make the membership of the council 295. There was a large attendance last night and the members had the pleasure of listening to a fine address from Past Councilor Gilmore, of Connecticut, who is visiting in this city. The members hope that very soon they will be able to reach the 300th mark in membership and everyone is working hard to that end.

The members, being enthused regarding the erection of a soldiers' monument in this city, unanimously agreed to donate $10 toward the fund.

Queen City Players Rendered a Programme at Reform Hall.

The Queen City Band, with Benjamin LaVere as musical director, gave a free concert in Reform Hall last evening under the auspices of the Reform Club. The entire orchestra of twenty pieces was out and eight or ten selections were played before the end of the programme.

During intermission President Wm. C. Smith and Michael Armstrong made a few remarks on the temperance cause and gave an invitation to signers. There were four who put their names to the pledge. The attendance was large and the concert was enjoyed by everyone.

NO BANN AGAINST QUIET POKER GAMES

Police Board Supports Judge Runyon's Action.

INVESTIGATED THE RAID.

DECLARED THE JUDGE DID RIGHT IN DISCHARGING PRISONERS.

An Opinion From the Corporation Counsel Put Same Interpetation on City Ordinance as Did Judge—Board Not Finished Case of Police Officers—May Hold a Public Hearing.

A quiet little poker game is permissable under the present city laws. So said City Judge William N. Runyon when he discharged the prisoners captured in the raid on the alleged poker game in the West End several weeks ago. At hearing this the people talked. So said the Mayor and Police Board, last evening, after hearing an opinion of the Corporation Counsel and looking into the circumstances of the raid.

There was another meeting of the Police Board last night. Its principal object was to look more deeply into the facts concerning the raid of the alleged gambling house. The officers who made the raid, Patrolmen Totten and Saffron, were before the Board. Other officers who knew something about the trouble were also there. The members of the Board heard what they had to say.

The city ordinances on the subject and an opinion by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, giving his interpretation of the ordinance, were read and discussed. Then the Board decided that the City Judge had done right in discharging the prisoners and they supported his action. They decided that an occasional game of poker in a private house was perfectly legal. The regular den, deriving a revenue either directly or indirectly from the game, was what the law objected to.

No action was taken regarding the officers who were ordered before the Board. There were several minor charges against them. They will come before the Board at some future date unless the Board decides to refer the matter to the Council and have a public hearing in their cases.

The criticism of the City Judge in dismissing the complaints against the prisoners captured in the raid was one of the causes for the investigation. The Board says that the criticism was unjust and that the Judge's course was perfectly proper.

The effect of this decision of the Board will be that raids of alleged "poker joints" in the future are likely to be very few and far between. It will be much more difficult to prove that it is other than a private game.

BABY TO BE CARED FOR.

Elizabeth People Interested in Misfortune of Mrs. Holmes' Baby.

Yesterday's Elizabeth Journal says: The article in yesterday's Journal about Mrs. Annie Holmes, of Plainfield, who with her fifteen-months old child is in the county jail, attracted the attention of the managers of the Day Nursery and the members of the Woman's Civic Federation, and this morning Warden Dodd was kept busy answering telephone calls about the infant. Inquiries were made of him as to what disposition he intended making of the little one, and to all he was compelled to say he could do nothing.

It is not improbable that the members, of the federation will interest themselves in the little one, and will see the mother and get her to let them care for it until her term of imprisonment expires. Those who talked with Warden Dodd this morning expressed themselves as being horrified that a state of affairs exists which permits the innocent to suffer with the guilty. They realized that the warden was not to blame for accepting the little one, and they will see, they told him, what they can do about caring for the child while the mother serves out her term of imprisonment.

Power for the Collector.

At a meeting of the borough finance committee last evening they gave Collector George F. Brown the power to receive money from the assessed property-owners on Watchung avenue at the rate of 6 per cent. The former per cent. was 10, and this was considered too high, so Collector Brown will only charge 6 per cent. As yet very little money has come in for the reason that the property owners were waiting to ascertain something definite regarding the rate of interest.

TO GO HIGHER IN COURT.

DISSATISFIED BOROUGHITES TO FIGHT AVENUE ASSESSMENTS.

Thirty Taxpayers Who are Not Pleased With Recent Decision Will Put Up Three Per Cent. More to Pay C. A. Marsh.

It has been learned since yesterday that there are about thirty persons living along the line of Watchung avenue in the borough who have taken exception to the new report recently given regarding the assessments by Judge Gummere, and they propose to fight the thing until they get a decision that they think is right. In the first instance those who objected were assessed five per cent. of the amount of their assessment. This time they will be assessed three per cent. to carry the case to the Supreme Court. Lawyer Craig A. Marsh represents the opposition, and he has been instructed to carry the case up.

One objector to the assessment, who is down for $300, informed a Press representative last evening that if everyone along the line was assessed in proportion to himself he would not kick, but he feels assured that he is paying enough to help some one else out. He contends that the people on the upper part of the avenue are not assessed enough, and thus he claims inequality.

GIANT BEN CREMATED,

A NOTED SOURLAND MOUNTAIN CHARACTER BURNED TO DEATH.

His Old Hut Collapsed by the Wind and Set on Fire by Burning Logs—Aged Mrs. Blue is Also Cremated.

Old Ben Bush, the giant half-breed Indian of Sourland Mountain, was burned to death in his cabin, near Zion, Tuesday night. He was last seen alive Tuesday afternoon by his son, Ike, who lives further up the mountain. He was seated in his cabin with Catherine Blue, his aged housekeeper. The wind on the mountain was blowing a gale that shook the cabin and caused Ike to remark: "Gosh, Pop, if you don't brace up this old house it will blow down on you." Old Bush replied: "It has stood for fifty years and it will last to the crack of doom."

Late Tuesday night, from his home on the mountain, Ike saw a red glare in the sky in the direction of his father's home. He ran toward the place and found the smouldering ruins of the cabin, which had been blown down and set on fire by the burning logs on the hearth. In the ruins he discovered the charred trunks of his father and Mrs. Blue lying side by side. He removed the remains from the fire and placed them in a nearby wagon house, and then hurried away to tell his neighbors of the disaster.

Old Bush was the most noted of the many strange characters of the wild Sourland Mountain district, in the western part of Somerset county. He was seven feet in height. He was 100 years old and as straight and agile as many of the young mountaineers with whom he had recently hunted on the mountains. He hoarded the money he obtained for his skins and labor, and was at one time considdered rich by his neighbors. He recently made application to the Poormaster of his district for financial assistance. This was granted, but the Poormaster soon discovered that he had a pot of money of his own, and further public charity was denied him.

A Serious Fire Narrowly Averted in Dunn's Grocery Store.

A serious fire was averted last evening in F. W. Dunn's grocery story, corner North and Park avenues. Some of the clerks were putting a shipment of potatoes in the cellar and a candle was used for light. This candle was placed on one of the steps of the cellar stairs. After the potatoes were put in the clerks went away forgetting to take the candle. They were absent some little time, when one of the clerks heard a strange noise. He hastened to the cellar and discovered that the cellar steps were on fire. There was some lively hustling for a short time and by hard work and through the use of plently of water the fire was extinguised. An examination was made later by Assistant Chief Jennings of the fire department, and everything was found to be all right.

PORTO RICAN REFORMS THAT ARE NEEDED.

Commissioner Carroll Returns From His Investigation.

PRAISE FOR ISLANDERS.

HE BELIEVES THEY ARE CAPABLE OF TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT.

Imperative Reforms are Better Schools, Good Roads, Popular Municipal Government and Cleaner Jails and Prisons—Commerce Should be Unrestricted—Praise for Governor-General Henry.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, whom President McKinley appointed as a commissioner to Porto Rico, returned home yesterday accompanied by Mrs. Carroll, his secretary, C. E. Buell, and the stenographer, Edgar W. Williams. Each member of the party looks well and have enjoyed good health while away.

The party arrived in New York on the Steamer Buford after a very delightful voyage. The commission has completed its work and nothing now remains but a compilation of the report to be presented to President McKinley. Headquarters will be established in this city after next week and the work of preparing the report will be started.

Dr. Carroll was seen yesterday afternoon by a Daily Press representative.

In answer to the question as to what are the most urgent reforms that should be undertaken to restore prosperity to the island, Dr. Carroll said: "The first is the construction of good cart roads. Nothing is better fitted to kill prosperity than the lack of a system of roads in the island. It is not surprising that the planter has little or no margin after his crops are harvested. It costs almost as much to transport as it does to produce the crops.

"The second reform of importance is, in my judgment, that of public schools. The late government is responsible for the inadequate system of public system, and nearly everything is to be done. I would recommend competent teachers, suitable buildings erected with regard for hygenic principles.

"The third reform should be municipal government. About the success of a self-government I cannot say under the present military regime, but it would be practical to allow the people to elect by their suffrage, and thus give them power to conduct their own affairs without referring to everything to the Insular Government.

"Another reform necessary is that pertaining to the jails. None that I have seen are above criticism, while most of them are a reproach to civilization. It seems to be most important that the people should organize and express public sentiment as regards the various reforms and take steps to improve the present condition of affairs.

"In regard to the establishment of a civil government this step is impossible until Congress meets, which probably will not be very soon, and it is hardly possible that Porto Rico will have its new form of government inside of a year. I think the best form of government for the island is a territorial one. I believe that the people are competent for the measure of self-goverment that a territory implies, and I believe that it is perfectly safe to make Porto Rico a territory

"I think that the commerce between the island and the United States should be unrestricted. The natural market of the island is the United States; the natural market for the manufactures of the United States is Porto Rico, and I trust that free trade will be granted I expect to see the bonds of commerce draw our new possessions close to us and make it what it really aspires to be—an integral part of the United States."

Dr. Carroll was very loud in his praise of Governor General Henry, who has charge of the island. He believes that he is the right man in the right place. He does not believe that the people are restive under his military regime, but on the contrary they recognize in him a true friend.

Commissioner Carroll will go to Washington next Monday to see President McKinley regarding the report of his work in Porto Rico. Upon his return the latter part of the week he will establish an office where his report will be compiled. He will be assisted by Secretary Buell and Stenographer Edgar W. Williams. It will probably take the largest part of a month to complete the report.

RENDERED A CANTATA.

High School Closed for Easter Vacation in a Musical Way.

The Plainfield High School closed at noon today for the spring vacation. At 11 o'clock special Easter exercises were held in Assembly Hall and were attended by a number of the friends and graduates of the school. The platform was decorated with palms and potted plants.

After prayer and the singing of several hymns by the school, there was an appropriate recitation by Miss Ruth Maxson. Then followed the principal part of the exercises, an Easter cantata, entitled "The Risen King."

A trio in the cantata was sung by the Misses Angie S. Kuhl, Martie Anthony and Mary Collier. They also took the solo parts in the cantata. It was well sung, under the direction of Charles L. Lewis.

As very little notice was given of the Easter service, Principal I. W. Travell has decided to have the cantata repeated later in April.

DIED AT THE HOSPITAL.

Mrs. John Y. Wilson Unable to Survive Serious Illness.

Mrs. John Y. Wilson, of Dunellen, aged 48 years, died today noon at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she has been for the past two days under treatment. Mrs Wilson had been critically ill for sometime and she was removed to the hospital in the hope that her life might be spared. Everything possible in the medical line was done to save life, but the best efforts failed. The remains were placed in charge of Undertaker Walter Runyon, of Dunellen, today, and will be taken to the latter place, where the funeral services and burial will take place.

Three Cases of Typhoid in One Family.

Three cases of typhoid fever have developed in the borough at the home of Edward T. Mundy, where Mr. Mundy's two children as well as himself are confined with the disease. The Board of Health is keeping close watch over the house and will use every means to prevent a spread of the disease. Health Inspector Pangborn is making a close investigation in the hope that he will be able to ascertain the cause for the outbreak of the disease.

Changes in Library Staff.

Miss Mary K. Jobs, of Third place, who has been first assistant librarian in the Plainfield Public Library, left today for Philadelphia to accept a position as librarian in the Library of the University of Pennsylvania. Her place in the local library will be filled by Miss Bowman, the second assistant. Miss Louise Patten will act as second as second assistant hereafter.

A Pleasant Surprise.

A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Miss Estella Brooks, of the borough, last evening, when a number of her young friends called on her unawares and spent a most enjoyable time in playing games, dancing, singing and listening to instrumental music. The affair was arranged by Miss Addie Carney and Miss Tiny Voehl.

Dr. Raymond to Speak.

Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, president of Union College, will address the Sunday-school of the Congregational church, Sunday afternoon. Special Easter exercises will be held at the time

PRINCIPAL HONORS WON BY CARROLL.

Results of Season at Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium.

ATHLETICS AND GYMNASTICS

RAYMOND B. CARROLL MADE BEST ALL-ROUND SHOWING.

Won All-Round Athletic Contest and Finished First in Dual Meet With Brunswick—Walter L. Long Won Gymnastic Honors—Rapid Development of Eric Moraller—Some Other Winners.

Now that the active season at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium is nearly at an end, it is a matter of interest to know which of the local athletes and gymnasts has, by his work in the various competitions, made the best showing of the year and might properly be entitled to championship honors. To those who have kept in touch with affairs in the local gymnasium, there seems little doubt but that in all-round work, particularly athletics, Raymond B. Carroll stands well in the lead. In gymnastic lines, alone, Walter L. Long has done the best work. Carroll's general excellence in everything, however, makes it eminently proper to place him at the head of the list.

Carroll has to his credit two of the principal victories of the year in athletics that can be won in the local gymnasium. He was easily first in the all round athletic contest of ten events. Although it was considered a novice event, there was no one else who could have defeated Carroll. In the dual athletic contest with the New Brunswick Association, Carroll was the highest among all the competitors, including his two team mates, as well as the New Brunswick men. F. O. Bristol and George Proctor Smith, who have carried off most of the honors in the two years preceding, have done little during this year except in the dual contest when they were out classed by Carroll.

Most of the indoor records are held by Bristol and Smith, although Carroll broke three this year and came very close to several others.

Walter L. Long has done excellent work in gymnastics during the regular class periods. He won the indoor pentathlon contest and the open contests with bar and dumb-bells. In none of these, however, Carroll participated. It is doubtful whether Long could stand second to Carroll on athletics but in gymnastics, he is the leader of the local men. Frank Marcley would give him a lively tussle for first in gymnastics had he the time to practice. Marcley has taken little or no part in the work in the gymnasium this year owing to pressure of business duties.

Probably the most improvement to be noted in any of the local men can be seen in the work of Eric Moraller. He has now risen to one of the high places in line, winning the novice gymnastic contest, and finishing second in the pentathlon, bar and dumb-bell contests. He has done well in both athletic and gymnastic work, but it is particularly noticeable in the latter.

Two entirely new candidates for honors have pushed forward during the year. They are Hervey K. Doane and Wm. Townsend. Townsend had the advantage of a better physique on which to build. He finished second in the all-round athletic contest, a trifle ahead of Doane. Doane was second, however, in the gymnastic contest. This is the first year for both of them and they promise to be winning championship honors in a year or two if the present improvement continues.

Ivan Hardingham could make a good showing if he tried, but he has done little this year. Both Bristol and Smith have taken little part in the work this year and the lack of training and practice threw both back in their usual form when they did occasionally compete. There are a number of others who have made improvement during the year and who promise to step into prominence in the future.

All the contests for this season have been held and the season is nearly up. Thursday evening, April 20th, will see the formal closing of the work of the gymnasium. The leaders will all assist and the first, second and third year's work will all be exploited.

MALOLOS IS TAKEN

Attack Began at 7 a. m. and Filipinos Quickly Give Way.

HALL TAKES MAREQUINA

Our Troops Forced to Work Artillery Over a Railroad Bridge by Hand and to Swim Their Mules Across Guiguinto River Under Fierce Fire—Gen. MacArthur Makes Rapid Advance,

Manila, March 31—(Noon).—Major General MacArthur entered Malolos, the seat of the so-called insurgent government, at 9.30 this morning, the rebels burning the city and simultaneously evacuating it.

They are now in full retreat toward the north, where Aguinaldo and the Cabinet have been for two days.

Advance Began at Dawn.

Washington, March 31.—The following dispatch from General Otis was received at the War Department late to-night:

Manila, March 31.

Adjutant General, Washington:

MacArthur made dispositions yesterday for attack on Malolos to-day.

Engagement opened at 7 o'clock this morning, and is now progressing.

Casualties yesterday: Four killed and twenty-three wounded, all brought to Manila last night.

Hall moved out from pumping station at daylight this morning with three battalions northeast; attacked and has taken Mariquina and is pursuing enemy; ordered to return this afternoon. OTIS.

Manila, March 31—7.35 A. M.—The United States troops rested last night in the jungle, about three miles and a quarter from Malolos. The day's advance began at 2 o'clock a. m. and covered a distance of about two and a half miles beyond the Guiguinto River, along the railroad. The brunt of the battle was on the right of the track, where the enemy was apparently concentrated.

The First Nebraska, First South Dakota and Tenth Pennsylvania regiments encountered the Filipinos intrenched on the border of the woods, and the Americans, advancing across the open, suffered a terrific fire for half an hour. Four men of the Nebraska regiment were killed and thirty were wounded. Several men of the Dakota regiment were wounded, and one of the Pennsylvania was killed.

Manila, March 29—(Wednesday, 10.10 P. M.).—After two hours of rest MacArthur's division pushed on across rice field and rivers, through the jungle, without meeting any opposition, the enemy flying from the villages of Uacat, Taal and Bigaa, after burning them. Even the town of Bulacan, the capital of the province, was burned and abandoned, although General MacArthur passed miles to the right.

At 5 o'clock p. m. the enemy made a stand in trenches half a mile beyond Guikuinto station, at a river crossing. The Kansas, and Pennsylvania regiments immediately deployed, crossing the railroad bridge under heavy fire, and attacked the enemy's position. The rebels withstood the musketry fire for half an hour, but the artillery disconcerted them, and at the end of a forty-five minute fight the insurgents bolted toward the hills.

Washington, March 31.—Official news of the results of fighting is necessarily received here only after several hours' delay. The destruction of the telegraph lines at many points between Manila and the advance guard of MacArthur's division makes the work of the Signal Corps very difficult. It is even possible that the news of a day's engagements may have to be brought back from the front by courier to Gen. Otis.

At the Adjutant-General's office the opinion is still expressed that the American campaign is being attended with all the success that could be expected, and that the outlook for the near future is exceedingly bright.

The Capital Burned.

Manila, March 31.—After a couple hours of rest MacArthur's division pushed on across rice fields and rivers, through the jungle, without meeting any opposition, the enemy fleeing from the villages of Ucat, Taal and Bigaa, after burning them. Even the town of Bulacan, the capital of the province, was burned and abandoned, although Gen. MacArthur passed miles to the right.

At 5 o'clock the enemy made a stand in trenches at a river crossing half a mile beyond Guiguinto station. The Kansas and Pennsylvania regiments immediately deployed, crossing the railroad bridge under heavy fire, and attacked the enemy's position. The rebels withstood the musketry fire for half an hour, but the artillery disconcerted them, and at the end of a forty-five-minute fight they bolted toward the hills.

Our loss was two killed and twenty wounded. The enemy's loss was severe. Gen. MacArthur went into camp near the station, four miles from Malolos, at 6.30 o'clock.

The latest news from Gen. Otis came in the following mesage:

Gen. Otis' Report.

"Manila, March 31.

"Adjutant-General, Washington:

"MacArthur advanced from Marilao; passed rapidly to Bocave. At 11.45 took advance for Bigaa, and at 3.15 in the afternoon started for Guiguinto, three and a half miles from Malolos, reaching that point at 5.15. Casualties for the day about 70. Fierce fighting in the afternoon. Troops made crossing of river at Guiguinto by working artillery over the railroad bridge by hand and swimming mules against fierce resistance. Column will pass on railroad to extreme front; road nearly repaired, and will resupply to-day. OTIS."

The Niagara Power Monopoly.

Toronto, March 31.—The government will to-day ask the Legislature for power to make arrangements with the Canadian Niagara Power Company, under which the company will abandon its monopoly at Niagara Falls in return for certain concessions.

GEN. EAGAN'S MEMORY REFRESHED.

His Testimony Before the Military Court of Inquiry.

Washington, March 31.—Brig.-Gen. Charles P. Eagan was a witness before the Military Court of Inquiry in Washington at its last session. In answer to questions about the army beef contracts he said that his first idea was that beef should be good seventy-two hours after delivery. "When I was asked about the twenty-four hours," he said, "I had totally forgotten that I had changed my mind. Later, when I had a conversation with Col. Davis, my assistant, I recalled that I thought twenty-four hours would be ample time from the refrigerator on shore to the troops." He said that he had been positively assured that refrigerated beef could be kept good for seventy-two hours, provided it was properly cared for. He said that the Secretary of War had approved his action in letting the contract.

Gen. Eagan said he had received but one complaint until lately against the canned roast beef. He had received reports that it was very satisfactory. He attributed the apparent dissatisfaction of the soldiers with canned roast beef partly to prejudice and partly to sickness of the men. When he began to hear that it was not giving satisfaction he discontinued its purchase. He declared that Gen. Shafter need not have taken any tinned roast beef with his expedition at all unless he wanted to. "He could have done, as we did for many years, take bacon. Gen. Shafter took from the depot at Tampa just what commissary supplies he wanted. The canned roast beef was intended merely as a makeshift."

Major Lee—Then it was a substitute for fresh beef.

Gen. Eagan—When fresh beef could not be procured. It was not intended as a substitute for bacon. I never regarded it as a travel ration. When for any cause the men could not get fresh beef they could take canned roast beef. The regulations provided for its use in 1888.

Q.—General, in any of the conversations do you recall mentioning anything about any process other than the cold-air process for the keeping of meat? A.—I may have mentioned something about the Powell process. These contractors did not propose to furnish processed or chemically treated beef. If any such preparation had been made I should have rejected it. Swift & Co. proposed to furnish refrigerated beef. I don't think Swift & Co., or Armour & Co., or any of the other large firms in the United States offered anything other than what I called for in my advertisement. I believe at one time Armour & Co. did offer to furnish some processed beef. I would not have it.

Gen. Eagan insisted that he could not recall anything about the process. The proposition was contained in Armour & Co., bid, and he knew nothing more about it.

REMARKABLE RUN OF THE SOLACE.

The Supply Steamer Believed to Have Made a Record for Long Distance.

Washington, March 31.—The Navy Department officials have compiled data based on the run recently made by the naval-supply steamer Solace from Norfolk to Manila which would seem to credit to the Solace the world's record for a long-distance run. Commander Dunlap of the Solace has been called upon it, it is said, to furnish a minute and detailed report on the subject, for naval officials here believe that in the showing made by his vessel the country can claim a record for one of its ships ahead of anything ever yet made.

The data supplied by the naval officials show that the Solace covered a distance of 11,670 knots in forty-three days. This time included all stops, and also included the slow speed which is demanded through the Suez Canal. Inclusive of all stops, and including the less than six knots speed through the Suez Canal, the Solace averaged for the 11,670 knots a speed of 11 1-3 knots per hour. Naval officials freely express the opinion that in order to make the above record the Solace must have maintained in the open sea a mean speed of about 16½ knots per hours. The coal-bunker capacity of the Solace is 800 tons.

Some idea of the remarkable showing made by the Solace may be gained from a comparison with the run of the Oregon. The performance of the latter ship was truly a magnificent one, as naval men say, for a battleship, but as an actual steaming record it was far below the showing of the Solace. The Oregon traveled over a course from Puget Sound to Jupiter Inlet of 14,511 knots. Seven stops were made, the stops varying from one to ten days. The time consumed by the Oregon was seventy-four days. Deducting all stop periods, the Oregon made a mean average speed of 11.16 knots per hour; including all stops the Oregon made 7.65 knots per hour.

Government Seeds.

Washington, March 31.—The Department of Agriculture has issued a formal advertisement inviting proposals for furnishing field flower, and vegetable seeds to the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, all bids to be filed not later than April 20. The seeds, together with all material necessary for their distribution, and all labor connected therewith, the necessary printing on seed-packets, and the place for conducting and carrying on the distribution work are to be at the expense of the contractor, not the government. In a word, the seeds are to be furnished already for mailing in packages of five or more packets each. All the work of putting up and distributing them is to be done in this city. There wil be in round numbers 13,000,000 packets of vegetable seeds, 1,000,000 of flower seeds, 91,000 of tobacco, 23,000 of cotton, and 36,000 of lawn-grass.

A Bankruptcy Decision.

Dubuque, Ia., March 31.—Judge Shiras, in the Federal Court, has decided that under the bankruptcy act innocent third parties can hold their securities. The court holds that mortgagees can not be compelled to yield possession of property in their hands which passed into their possession before the proceedings in bankruptcy were begun. The decision is considered one of the most important under the law.

A PESK OF MUSKRATS.

They Eat Away the Larger Part of a Dam and Cause Much Trouble.

Oakhurst is a typical south Jersey country village remarkable for nothing in particular except its muskrats. Numerous ponds from springs are found a few miles outside of the village, and here the muskrats swarm. On the shores of the largest of these ponds, known as Van Gilder's, are the Ocean Mills. The waters of the pond are kept from running away in useless streams by a large dam.

This pond was fairly alive with muskrats. It was no common thing to see ten or a dozen of them sunning themselves on the logs of the dam, and every spring when the rising waters drove them from their holes the banks were fairly alive with them. The presence of so many of these animals led to the establishment of an industry, that of hunting muskrats.

Time and again the farmers about the pond have been awakened late at night by the mill hands to assist in stopping up some leak in the dam, through which the water threatened to tear its way to the damage of the farms below. Year after year the mill owner has been compelled to make repairs, but the reason for the continual wear never appeared clear to him until recently he discovered that the colony of muskrats had become so large that great holes were being eaten in the dam and only a few pilings remained to hold back the water.

Alexander Ludlam, a farmer, while waiting for muskrats, noticed the water breaking through the logs in a stream that promised to increase to a flood if not stopped immediately. Twenty of more farmers turned out and stopped the break temporarily, and then the water was let out of the pond through the sluiceway. Investigation of the dam showed that 300 or 400 muskrats had beds there, and when their hiding place was revealed they scampered away in all directions.

An investigation showed that the muskrats had burrowed into the dirt banks to such an extent that these were entirely too weak, and a new dam would have to be built.—New York

UNCLE SAM IN SAMOA

Kautz Was Told to Use Force If One Other Power Agreed.

WASHINGTON NOT ALARMED

Thursday's Press Dispatches Concerning the Fighting Alliance of Great Britain and the United States Confirmed—German Officials Are Surprised at the Attitude of the Administration.

Washington, March 31.—Admiral Kautz, in attacking the provisional government set up in Samoa under Mataafa and recognized by the German Consul, acted within his orders, these were, that he should guard and protect the interests of Americans in the islands, but, further, that if compelled to take summary action he should do so only in conjunction with the representatives of one other Power. This feature of the affair has not heretofore been made public, although Great Britain and Germany have been aware of the tenor of the orders ever since they were issued.

The State Department has been notified of the general accuracy of the press dispatches describing the bombardment of villages by the British and American warships. The information came to the Department through the German Embassy, which received advices from Consul Rose at Apia. His dispatches were meagre, but told of the trouble on shore and the bombardment of the villages by the war vessels.

The news gave much concern to the officers at the State and Navy departments, for while the possibility of a conflict in Samoa had been recognized ever since Dr. Rose, the German Consul, recognized Mataafa as King over the protests and objections of the other two Consuls, its probability had been held to be too remote for serious consideration. And notwithstanding the present situation the hope is felt and expressed that an amicable adjustment of the troubles may be made. A high officer in the State Department, authorized to speak for the Administration in the matter of our foreign relations, said: "The instructions to Admiral Kautz when he sailed for Samoa in the Philadelphia were, in effect, these:

"To preserve order in conjunction with the representatives of the other Powers interested in the management of affairs in Samoa; to guard American interests and residents against attack and injury, and not to take any action in regard to a settlement of governmental affairs without the support and assistance of the respresentatives of at least one other Power—in other words, unless a majority of the Consuls advised the course, he was to do nothing.

"The conflict is in every way regrettable, as are all misunderstandings and difficulties between nations; but it is not of sufficient force to set the world afire, or of sufficient moment to occasion serious trouble among the Powers involved. If they really desire it an amicable settlement may easily be made.

"The German contention that the Consuls are of equal rights and powers, and that no action should be taken save by concurrent approval of all three, is justifiable by the terms of the treaty. But, on the other hand, our contention is that the German Consul by his action violated the terms of the Treaty of Berlin, and the other parties were justified thereby in taking the stand they did. I suppose Admiral Kautz found such a condition of affairs existing in Samoa as to satisfy him and the representatives of Great Britain that their joint interests were unsafe, and, supported by them, the attack upon Mataafa's forces was made."

When Dr. Von Holleben, the German Ambassador, was informed of the tenor of the instructions given to Admiral Kautz it is said he was somewhat surprised, and expressed to his associates in the diplomatic corps with whom he consulted the opinion that the United States had made a mistake in taking the attitude they had. Secretary Hay, who advised and directed the delivery of instructions to Admiral Kautz, does not share this opinion.

Brief Advices at Berlin.

Berlin, March 31.—Only a brief official message concerning the disturbances in Samoa has been received here. This dispatch, which is dated Apia, March 20, says that the bombardment continues in pursuance of military orders, and the whites have deserted many houses in order to get out of the reach of danger. The chiefs of the Malietoa Tanu party who were exiled to other islands have been brought back to Upolu Island, on which Apia is situated. The firearms and ammunition which were taken from Malietoa Tanu's followers have been returned to them.

The Cologne Gazette characterizes the statement that Germany intends to withdraw from Samoa as pure invention. Referring to the report that there is great dissatisfaction on the part of the United States over Ambassador White's alleged pro-German treatment of the Samoan question the Gazette indignantly repudiates the suggestion that Mr. White has been guilty of any breach of duty. Germans, the Gazette adds, are deeply stung by England's persistent attempts to prevent friendly relations between Germany and the United States. The Gazette intimates that it has semi-official inspiration for the foregoing.

Loubet to McKinley.

Washington, March 31.—Ambassador Cambon yesterday delivered an autograph letter signed by President Loubet of France and directed to President McKinley, informing the latter of his election to the Presidency of the French Republic.

This is a graceful personal compliment from one President to another and permitted renewed assurances of good will between the two governments.

Mr. Sherman Improves.

Washington, March 31.—Ex-Senator Sherman spent a comfortable night, manifesting no special fatigue from his long journey.

He sat up yesterday, and expressed delight at being again at home.

THEY RIDICULE IT

Many People Ridicule the Idea of an Absolute Cure for Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Ridicule, However, is Not Argument, and Facts are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so obstinate to cure, that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is about it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for little book on stomach diseases, sent free.

THE RALEIGH AT FAYAL.

Cruiser from Admiral Dewey's Fleet Will Reach New York on April 15.

Fayal, Azore Islands, March 31.—The cruiser Raleigh, Capt. Joseph B. Coghlan, from Manila December 15, is coaling here, will coal at Bermuda on April 8 and expects to reach New York April 15.

The Raleigh had stormy weather on the Atlantic, but proved to be a good seaboat. All are well.

After leaving Manila on December 15, the Raleigh stopped at Singapore, Colombo, Bombay, Aden, Port Said, Alexandria, Malta, Algiers and Gibraltar. In all the British colonies the officials of the British army and navy and civilian population gave the warship an enthusiastic welcome.

The Raleigh has her war paint on. At Singapore she met a Spanish transport with troops and sailors from Manila. Although flying a warship's pennant, she lowered her colors to the Raleigh and permission was granted to the Spaniards to visit her, where they fraternized with the American sailors, who gave them food and clothing. Many of the Spaniards showed wounds inflicted upon them by the shells of the American fleet.

At the Island of Malta, in the Mediterranean, the Raleigh met the British Mediterrenean fleet, consisting of ten battleships and a number of cruisers. The British sailors extended a cordial welcome to the sailors. The French, at Algiers, gave no reception.

At Gibraltar, the crew of the Raleigh saw the Spanish fleet, commanded by Admiral Camara, consisting of six ships. The fleet and the Raleigh sailed at the same hour and passed close to each other. The Raleigh hoisted the Spanish flag and saluted it. This was promptly returned by the Spanish Admiral from his flagship, the Emperador Carlos V.

The Raleigh, in two years, has cruised 36,000 knots.

WERE OFFERED BRIBES.

So Several Witnesses Testify Concerning the McCarrell Bill.

Harrisburg, March 31.—The special committee met yesterday on charges of alleged bribery in connection with the United States Senatorship and the McCarrell jury bill in the House. Mr. Thompson (Quay Republican), of Wayne, was questioned concerning Mr. Norton, who testified that he was offered $1,000 by Robert Evans, of Philadelphia, for his vote on the McCarrell bill. He said Norton told him he would have to give evidence against Evans.

Representative Pratt (fusionist), of Chester, said Representative Hersch (Democrat), of Montgomery, told him he was offered $50 to vote in the negative on the motion to adjourn the House to prevent a reconsideration, but after the investigation commenced expressed a belief that the offer was a joke. Mr. Thompson, recalled at his request, testified that Evans came to his seat in the House and asked him to point out Norton.

Mr. Towler (Quay Republican), of Forest, swore that a member told him he was indirectly approached to change his vote from Quay.

Representative Heil, of Northampton, testified that Parker Titus, of Easton, visited him at his home and told him there was "two apiece" for signers to the Spatz agreement. Heil refused to sign, saying he was elected a Democrat and would vote as a Democrat. Titus requested Heil not to say anything about the alleged offer.

Mr. Zerbe (Quay Republican), of Lebanon, said ex-Sheriff Miller, of his county, asked him to meet Congressman Dalzell and said the question of offering money to change his vote from Senator Quay had been discussed by anti-Quay leaders of Lebanon, but he advised against it.

THE FUNERAL OF CUBAN SOLDIERS.

How the Bodies Will Be Taken to Arlington and Buried.

Washington, March 31.—Col. Moore, of the Quartermaster's Department, who has charge of the arrangements for the reinterment of the bodies brought back on the Crook, has prepared the following statement in regard to the number of bodies brought home, and their disposition.

Number of bodies brought from Cuba, 550. Number of bodies applied for by relatives for private interment, 221; number of bodies uncalled for, 329, number of bodies brought from Porto Rico, 120; number applied for, 90; number uncalled for, 30. Total number of bodies, 670. Total number of bodies to be interred at Arlington Cemetery, 359.

Col. Moore estimates that it will take at least two days to remove the bodies from the ship to the railroad station. He says that arrangements have not yet been fully perfected for the transportation of those destined for Arlington, and he is as yet unable to say exactly how and when they will be taken there. It is probable, however, he said, that they would be taken to the railroad station nearest to Arlington and would not be disembarked in this city. He said further that the bodies would probably be brought over on the Pennsylvania Railroad and taken from the cars at a station within two miles of Arlington, where graves already are prepared for their reception.

Tax-Dodging in Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, March 31.—Tax-dodgers are reported as being surprisingly numerous in nearly all the States municipalities, but the neatest evasion is credited to Harrisburg property-owners. In the several wards of that city there are hundreds of houses, worth from $5,000 to $12,000 each, that are marked on the assessors' books "unfinished," which calls for the houses being assessed at the vacant-lot rates. The full and just tax is dodged by the property-owners simply deferring, for example, to place a transom, cellar-door, or a yard of moulding on the porch.

A Plot Against the Czar.

Paris, March 31.—The Echo de Paris publishes a dispatch from Copenhagen saying that a plot against the Czar, in which his mother and the head of the Holy Synod are implicated, has been discovered, the object of the conspirators being to take advantage of the state of the Czar's health, remove him from power, and confide the government to his uncle, who is classed as a notorious reactionary.

Mayor Van Wyck Gets Angry and Points Out Some Work That the Committee Might Do—Says the Canal Matter Ought to Have Its Attention—Insinuation About the New York Central.

New York, March 31.—The prospect of an investigation of the city departments aroused Mayor Van Wyck to anger and he expressed himself freely on the subject at a meeting of the Board of Estimate held in his office. The Board made some appropriations for schools, and while the matter was under discussion the Mayor said:

"It appears that of the $4,082,000 placed in the budget for new schools in the Borough of Manhattan the sum of $1,096,000 has been made available by this Board since Jan. 1. I suppose that is one of the things that induced the Legislature to send a committee down here to investigate us. If it comes I think we had better suggest to it to go back to Albany and probe the canal scandals. It will find a greater wealth of material."

When the Board had passed bills of charitable institutions for the month of February, amounting to $43,144, the Mayor spoke again.

"Another instance of reckless extravagance for that committee to investigate," he said.

Then he asked President Feitner if it was true that $500,000,000 worth of property in the city has been exempted from taxation by special acts of the Legislature.

"That is quite true," said Mr. Feitner.

"Then let the committee look into that," said the Mayor, who was quite angry by this time. "Let them recommend the repeal of some of those laws. If they want to investigate let them find out if there was a bargain between the New York Central Railroad and certain persons to destroy the usefulness of the canals up the State, so that the Central would not suffer by competition. There are plenty of things up in Albany that need looking into."

Speaking of the intimation in the Assembly resolution that money for bribes was raised in the Police Department, the Mayor said: "The Democrats in the Senate vote in a body against the police bills, so that no one can accuse them of being willing to accept bribes. It appears that if there was bribery it must have been Republicans who were bribed. To investigate this is to have the Republicans investigate themselves. When this committee comes down here we will say to it: 'Lay on Macbeth, and damned be he who first cries, Hold! enough!'"

With this substitution of the wicked and dispairing Macbeth for the noble Macduff, the Mayor pounded the table with his fit, having no claymore at hand with which to defy the committee.

The Comptroller reported favorably a resolution to pay John R. Thomas, the architect of the new Hall of Records, $5,000 as a part of his fee. The bill had been cut from $7,746, and as passed the charge was at the rate of 2½ per cent. on the cost of the work.

President Guggenheimer said that Mr. Thomas had been paid as high as 10 per cent. on other work, and, as a matter of curiosity, he wanted to know why he was not willing to accept 2½ per cent., or, rather, why he had been paid 10 per cent.

"Oh, I suppose he is another of those mugwump reformers who take every cent they can get," said the Mayor. "He was employed by the last administration."

The request of the Park Board for an appropriation of $75,000 to purchase some old Spanish cannon captured in Cuba, to be placed in the parks, came up for consideration.

The Mayor said the guns had not been of much use to the Spaniards and he was not sure that they would be worth anything to the city.

THE POLICE INQUIRY.

The Governor Behind the Bill and It Will Be Passed.

Albany, March 31.—The proposed investigation of Tammany corruption in New York City was the subject of a conference to-day between Senator Platt, State Chairman Odell and Speaker Nixon, of the Assembly, and Assemblyman Mazet. A makeup of the Investigating Committee was discussed. Mr. Mazet wil be chairman, but beyond this announcement nothing definite can be given. Speaker Nixon said after the conference that he will not publish the committee until to-morrow.

Assemblyman Fallows, of New York, whose successful work investigating the Surrogate's Court is well remembered, is mentioned as a probable member of the new committee. Mr. Fallows, if he accepts, will do so with reluctance. Mr. Collier, of Brooklyn, is mentioned as another possible member, as are also Messrs. McEwan, of Albany; Greenwood, of Wayne, and Redington, of New York.

The proposed investigation is the result of plans which have been under way for a week or ten days. Gov. Roosevelt, Senator Platt and Chairman Odell are back of it, so there can be no doubt about the authorization of the sensational Assembly resolution.

Suit for the Passaic's Pollution

Paterson, N. J., March 31.—The Sheriff of Passaic county has served papers on the city authorities of Paterson in a suit for $100,000 damages instituted by John P. Stockton, Jr., a lawyer, of Jersey City, on behalf of Henry and Catharine Simmons, who claim that the city of Paterson has ruined their ice business by polluting the Passaic River at Acquackanock, where the plaintiffs have been in the habit of getting their ice-crop. The alleged damage is claimed to have been wrought by the emptying of Paterson's sewage into the Passaic River. The plaintiffs allege that owing to the presence of the sewage they have been unable to gather any ice since 1897. It is said that the present suit is but one of a number that will be instituted by riparian owners who have suffered by the pollution of the Passaic.

The Easiest Way

To rent your house if it is in prospect of remaining vacant for the next twelve months is to step into or send to The Daily Press office a small advertisement for the Cent-a-word Column.

The Cost Is Trifling

When you consider the profitable results that may come from such publicity. Thousands of Plainfield people have tried it and found that the plan

Works and Pays Well.

Here are some more views of Tapp, the Salvation Army man, who is running for the Mayoralty of Wichita, Kan.: "Every policeman shall carry a Bible and stop swearing; every session of the City Council shall open and close with prayer; every Sunday divine service shall be held in the City Hall and all public officials must attend; girls in bloomers are to be fined $5 for a first offence and to be put in jail for a second; the city shall pay street car fare for all who wish to attend church Sundays, and every poor person is to be supplied with drugs and medicines free of charge."

Not in some years has the political horizon been as clear in New Jersey as it is today. But it is only the calm that precedes the storm, for during the next two years the politicians will have to step lively to keep up with the procession. In Union county this fall there is a Senator, County Clerk, Sheriff and Assemblymen to elect and next year will come the tug-of-war in selecting delegates to attend the National conventions to make Presidential tickets and to elect a Legislature to choose a successor to United States Senator Sewell.

Senator Sewell, who is not only the recognized commander of the State G. O. P. forces, but as well the official head of the National Guard under the kind favor of Governor Voorhees, is planning a trip to Europe for rest and recreation. But before going he is expected to approve of the plans for reorganizing the Guard on new lines. It is practically settled that there will be only four regiments in the new guard, with headquarters in Camden, Newark, Jersey City and Paterson.

The newspapers are making a great ado over a clerk who went into Wall street with nothing and came out with $75,000 as his own. Not a word was said, however, of the many who went in with $75,000, more or less, and came out with only a depleted bank roll and a sad look. 'Tis well to think of the multitude of unlucky as well as of the fortunate few in anticipating a plunge into the whirl of Wall street.

To the far-seeing and practical mind there are things that New Jersey should consider in its catering to the trusts other than the mere money-making chances. One of them is the odium that attaches to the commonwealth and lowers its standing in comparison with other States which do not condone and foster such pernicious practices as prevail here.

City Clerk MacMurray is anxious to change his official title to County Clerk, and to that end he is an active and bona fide candidate for the Republican nomination to that office next fall. The City Clerk's friends are lending a helping hand to his candidacy, and when the proper time arrives they will do their best to land the prize for the Plainfielder.

New Zealand has a law in force compelling every intoxicated man to have his photograph taken. His picture is then distributed among the innkeepers and bartenders, and they must refuse to sell him liquor. Then everytime a man wants a drink in New Zealand he must get it not only in but on his face.

The Pension Department has just discovered that three women have been drawing pensions for thirty years as the wives of one man, who was never married at all. And yet there are those who think that an effort to cause reforms in the pension business of this country is not undertaken in a patriotic spirit.

Mr. Cleveland says that he has not received an invitation to either of the dinners to be given in New York in honor of Jefferson. It would seem that the former President was outside of the breastworks; but then he has been there before and was able to climb back into the lines with great success.

Summit and Rahway Democrats have nominated physicians to head their municipal tickets as Mayors. In Summit it is Dr. Alexander A Taylor, and in Rahway Dr Silvers acts as the standard bearer of Democracy. They are both capable and able to prescribe the right kind of a local government.

Notwithstanding that the Republicans of Elizabeth have been able to capture the office of Mayor for the last few years, the Democrats keep right on electing a majority of the Aldermen. Indications point to the same result in the approaching city election at the county seat.

A letter from Boston, printed in The Wilwaukee Journal, declares that a movement has been set on foot to make ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney, of Massachusetts, the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

There is some inclination to criticise President Reed upon his ruling that a motion to relieve a committee in the Senate of a bill was out of order. It must be considered by these critics that to have ruled otherwise would have made it necessary to override all precedents and customs of the Senate. President Reed refused to do this and his colleagues stood by him. Both Democrats and Republican presidents have held to this rule for many years.—Unionist-Gazette.

* * * * *

The editor of the Plainfield News denies that he has sought to influence the Legislature in favor of the publication of the laws. We find that we were mistaken in this, and tender brother Runyon the amende, although he did not ask for it in the most gracious terms. The Fredonian will never do any man conscious injustice, and when it is betrayed by error into doing so, will frankly acknowledge its mistake. We long ago lost all respect for that fetish of editorial infallibility that deters some editors from acknowledging that they were wrong.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

"Slaves of Gold," a new sensational play by Elmer Grandin, an actor, who has been most prominent of late, was the offering of the Sawtelle Dramatic Company at Music Hall last night. It proved very satisfactory to a well-pleased, goodly-sized audience, and is one of the strongest plays yet presented. The leading characters, enacted by J. Al. Sawtelle and Jessie Sawtelle, were splendidly rendered, and this praise is due every individual member of the cast. Seldom has a more effective company been seen in this city, and lovers of fine dramatic work should not allow the opportunity go by to witness their performances. Tonight another new play will be presented, entitled "A Race for Life," and tomorrow afternoon, by special request, "Slaves of Gold" will be repeated. Tomorrow night, the closing night of the engagement, the very latest war drama, "Uncle Sam in Cuba," will be performed, and this is considered the crowning success of repertoire.

GIVE THE CHILDREN A DRINK

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it. In boiling it is as much properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about ¼ as much as coffee 15 and 25c.

He was 57 years of age and was for many years superintendent of the Millstown Manufacturing Company, of Millstown, N J He has been a resident of Garwood for the past three years. There was a hot time about 2 o'clock this morning at the livery stables of W. H. Barton, corner of Prospect street and North avenue. Early in the evening an unknown gentlemen hired a buggy and driver to take him to Plainfield, for which he agreed to pay $1 50. When he arrived at Plainfield the driver claims that he asked him to wait until he had done some business there. The man claims that he did not tell him to wait and that he was very much surprised to see the driver still waiting. Anyway the man claims that the driver told him that he might as well ride back home with him and this he did. When they arrived at Westfield Barton claimed that the man owed him $5. The gentleman refusing to pay, Constable Chamberlain was called up from his bed and tried to straighten out the tangle. After a good deal of loud talk and threats the man paid the $5 and departed.

A Record Breaking Machine.

President L. S. Woodbury of the Great Falls Iron Works has in contemplation the construction of what he chooses to term a horsecycle, whereby a horse can propel a four-wheeled vehicle on ordinary ground at the rate of one mile in fifty-nine seconds. The proposed machine can be made in two forms, either one of which Mr. Woodbury thinks will fill the bill.

The first is in the form of an ordinary buggy. Instead of being hitched ahead, the horse will occupy a position between the four wheels and operate a sort of treadmill. Should the velocity be so great as to attract too much air, then it is proposed to inclose the entire machine—horse, rider and all—in a whaleback or torpedo-cut shell, the propelling operation to remain the same. The seat of the rider will be directly behind or above the horse. President Woodbury is so confident of success that he is willing to back his bonds against silver that a mile can be made in fifty-nine seconds or better. The machine will be a novel one, and, if it should prove a success, will undoubtedly be a world-breaker in records for fast travelling.

A Blind Rider Awheel.

Thomas T. Hayden, Brooklyn's blind actor, can do many things that men who can see consider impossible, and who isn't afraid to undertake that which any other man can do.

Hayden has ridden a wheel—not alone, but on a tandem or a duplex—for several months.

When he was learning, Mr. Hayden used a duplex. It was safer than a tandem, but the pleasure is not so great as when there are but two wheels on the ground. A few weeks ago he ventured on a tandem and can do his part on one as well as any other man can do.

Although he is deprived of one of the greatest pleasures of wheeling, the view of the changing scenery, Hayden loves the sport more than most people who can see. It is one of the few diversions for him, and, besides, he takes pride in accomplishing what others consider remarkable.

A Kind Hearted Boarder.

Mr. Billings took up his cup of what the landlady called coffee, tasted it, sniffed it, and set it down.

"Have you anything to say against the coffee, Mr. Billings?" asked the landlady.

"No, ma'am," answered Billings. "I never speak ill of the absent."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 2, "The Birthday of Hope." Text, I Pet. i, 1-9.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who begat us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

Every person has some days in his calendar memorable above others. Birthdays are the first festivals we naturally learn to celebrate. With older years we meet experiences which change the whole direction of our lives and leave their impress indelibly on our character. Such events are kept in memory as joyous or sorrowful, and their anniversaries become red letter or black letter days forever.

National festivals mark the great battles or political changes which have been influential in shaping destiny.

Some days have been of importance to all nations and every individual. The birth of Jesus Christ has deeper meaning for every land than that of its most powerful sovereign. Of all days which deserve commemoration none shares in importance with that of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. In a deep sense all previous time was a preparation for it, and all subsequent ages have been shaped by it.

If human life and prospects are bounded by the grave and there be no day after death, then the world is meaningless and the struggle for existence is absurd. However forgetful we may be of the fact, it still remains the most important of truths. All our hope for the future personally and as a race is linked to the assurance that one man of the race has died and risen again to life never more to die. This one died of deliberate design in order to rise again and demonstrate His power over death. He furthermore offers to all who will follow His leadership and keep His commands that they shall likewise receive resurrection to a life incorruptible, eternal, blissful.

Whoever believes and accepts this becomes sober minded and hopeful. He looks forward to the visible, personal revelation of Jesus Christ and the closing of the events of this world epoch that a more glorious era, the age of divine humanity, may be established. Truly Easter day is the birthday of hope!

The Great Change.

No transformation in this world is more radical than that wrought in the nature of a man by the Holy Spirit when he becomes converted from evil to good. It is more than sorrow, more than repentance, more than doing penance, more than penitence. No word from the Latin carrying the idea of pain expresses the New Testament idea wrapped up in the word used by John Baptist, by Jesus and His apostles. The thought is rather one of "complete change." All the old way of thinking and doing is overturned. It is a new man arising from a divine birth. All the world seems renewed to such a one. But the world has not changed; only the man himself has been transformed and sees, feels and acts from new centers of being.

The great change does not come as the result of the man's deciding to live better. A hundred times one resolves this and fails. Then, with no more effort, rather with less struggle, he yields his will and finds himself different. Power, light, joy, peace—all come, but not by his effort. A power not himself, he knows, has done it; not flesh and blood, but spirit; not evil, but good; not many, but one, all powerful—the Holy Spirit.

Holy Week.

The Protestant community is coming to recognize increasingly the value of commemorative services during Holy Week. Whatever uncertainty may wrap the dates of other Christian festivals we are certain that the events of the Lord's passion and death occurred at this particular season of the year. We can follow clearly in the Scripture records the scenes from the supper at Bethany in the house of Simon the leper through the succeeding days of triumphal entry of Jerusalem, the arguments with Pharisees and Sadducees in the temple, the Passover supper and private discourses with His disciples, to the night betrayal, mock trial, crucifixion and burial, to the wondrous rising from the dead on Easter morn.

Nothing can be more conducive to devotion than in private or in public services to review these most solemn and important events of human history.

Let every League get closer to the heart of Jesus by following in thought the events of the last week of the Master's earthly work.

Prejudice and Conviction.

There is a time in the life of many young men when the claims of Christianity seem unreasonable or at least of doubtful force. It is a period of development when the rational powers are asserting their rights and the young reason has not acquired skill to sift truth from error. Happy is he who in such a time fills his mind with the Bible facts and allows his mental powers to mature before he settles his philosophy! Some become skeptics because of lack of knowledge of the facts. Even the famous scholar Max Muller was for some time credited with being skeptical of Scripture truth. He found that a reading of it carefully changed his whole attitude, removed his prejudices and produced conviction.

Great preparations are in progress in Indianapolis for the care of the international convention of the League. This will exceed in size, enthusiasm and interest all preceding meetings.

The organ of the Canadian League is named The Era, the same as that of the Church South. Secretary Crews is the editor.

The largest League chapter in Canada is at Galt and has a membership of 279.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 2—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—The birthday of hope.—I Pet. i, 1-9. (An Easter meeting.)

The birthday of the Christian hope here referred to was Easter day, the day on which Christ arose from the dead. Both the topic and the reference suggest a study of the hope born into the world when Christ overcame death and the grave.

The hope of Easter day is based upon a historical fact. It was the resurrection of Christ which begat this hope. "Blessed be God * * * who * * * hath begotten us again into a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." The hope is founded, therefore, upon the resurrection of Christ. And this is a historical fact. No fact in history is more fully attested than the fact of the death and resurrection of Christ. It is proved by "many infallible proofs." The New Testament is one continuous witness. The gospels record it; the Acts present it as the one chief theme of the apostles' preaching; the epistles base upon it the Christian life and doctrine. The Lord's day and Eastertide stand as constant witness to the accuracy and genuineness of this historical fact.

The hope of Easter day is a living hope. It is a hope that will be fulfilled. This follows naturally and necessarily from the fact that the hope is based upon a fact. Many hopes of life are illusions. They are based upon fancy, and not upon fact. When the time of their fulfillment arrives, like the mirage of the desert they disappear. Touch them and like the apples of Sodom they vanish away. Not so the Christian's hope, based upon the resurrection of Christ. The foundation is firm and secure. The hope based upon it must be realized.

The hope of Easter day is the hope of eternal life in heaven. It is a hope "to an inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven." It is a hope for eternity both for our friends and our loved ones. Christ arose. This begets in us a lively hope that our loved ones shall arise, that we shall arise and that we shall inherit the home prepared for us.

Blessed hope of Eastertide, first heard when the angels announced the glorious fact that Chirst was risen from the dead and never to cease to be heard till earth and sea shall give up their dead and those who have died in Christ, having arisen, shall reign with Him forever and forever!

Bible Readings.—Job. xix, 26, 27; Ps. xvii, 15; Isa. xxvi, 19; Dan. xii, 2, 3; Math. xxii, 31, 32; Luke xiv, 1-14; John v, 28, 29; xi, 19-27; Acts iv, 1, 2; Acts xxvi, 8-23; Rom. vi, 1-11; I Cor. xv, 12-20; II Cor. iv, 17, 18; Col. iii, 1-7; I John iii, 1, 2.

The Advantages of Yesterday.

Yesterday is no mausoleum of dead deeds, no storehouse of mummies. Memory is a granary, holding seed for tomorrow's sowing; memory is an armory, holding weapons for tomorrow's battles; memory is a medicine chest, with balms for tomorrow's hurts; memory is a library, with wisdom for tomorrow's emergency. Yesterday holds the full store of today's civilization; contains our tools, conveniences, knowledges; contains our battlefields and victories; above all, gives us Bethlehem and Calvary. But alone man's yesterday is impotent, his tomorrow insufficient. The true man binds all his days together with an earnest, intense, passionate purpose. His yesterdays, todays and tomorrows march together one solid column, animated by one thought, constrained by one conspiracy of desire, energizing toward one holy and helpful purpose—to serve man and love God.—Newell Dwight Hillis in "The Investment of Influence."

Their Part In History.

A Greek historian desired very intensely to say a word about the people of the city where he was born. He felt he could not write his history without saying something of his own native place, and accordingly he wrote this, "While Athens was building temples and Sparta was waging war my countrymen were doing nothing." I am afraid there are too many Christians of whom, if the book were written as to what they are doing in the church, it would have to be said they have been doing nothing all their lives.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

Thinking With God.

One great student described his work as thinking God's thoughts after Him. That is what all true study is. No one can really think God's thoughts while out of harmony with God. We may be thinkers with God as well as laborers with Him, but we cannot think with Him and not think of Him.—Christian Endeavor World.

Christian Endeavor In Egypt.

Christian Endeavor has found a place in the army in Egypt and has marched into the Sudan with General Kitchener. A soldier Endeavorer from Cairo, who was assigned to hospital work at Darmales camp, has organized a society.

The Snow.

How fair and beautiful appears the snow,
Hanging like jewels on the leafless trees,
Which now stand motionless, unstirred by breeze
Or lightest breath of wind that heaven can blow!
Like wondrous picture does the grand earth show,
Painted by hand divine with marvelous ease,
As if it knew it could not fail to please,
And o'er each soul a rapturous transport throw.
Would that our lives might be as bright and pure
As is the snow that all things now infold!
Then would our destiny be no more obscure,
And hapless fate would lose her iron hold,
And man, with face that might high heaven allure,
Would tempt bright angels from their harps of gold.

CHAPTER XIV.

That was a woeful night on the fog shrouded Pacific. In less than ten minutes from the moment of the crash the Idaho's stern was lifted high, then down she dived for her final berth, untold fathoms underneath, her steadfast captain standing to his post till the last soul left the doomed and deserted wreck.

It was God's mercy that limited the passenger list to a mere dozen in the first cabin and less than 20 in the second. The boat, with all the women, was pushed off from the side, the first officer taking charge. Through the fog they could dimly see the others lowered, then manned and laden. Discipline had been restored. Water and bread and blankets had been hastily passed to the longboat. The purser had found time to dive into his safe and to load up with some at least of the valuable contents. There was even a faint cheer when the steamer took the final plunge.

Huddled together, many of the women were weeping, all were pale with dread, but Loring and the ship's officer bade them be of good cheer. Even if they were not found by the Santiago they were but a few miles from shore. The sea, though rolling heavily, was not dangerous. They were sure of making land by morning. But there were women who could not be comforted. Their husbands or brothers were in the two smaller boats, perhaps paddling about in the darkness in vain search for the steamer that cut them down. For awhile there were answering shouts across the heaving waters. Then for half an hour the boat with the second officer, crammed with male passengers and members of the crew, kept close alongside—too close, for some of the former scrambled into the bigger craft and others tried to follow, so close that its young commander could mutter to his mate:

"The captain's boat is even fuller than mine. Can't you take off half a dozen?"

But the first officer shook his head.

"If the worst comes, they've got life preservers and can swim," said he. "These women would be helpless, except for what we can do for 'em."

For a time they shouted in hopes of being heard aboard the Santiago, but only those who have tried it know that it is a matter of merest luck when a steamer rounding to in a fog succeeds in finding or even coming anywhere near the spot where she was in collision not ten minutes before.

The Santiago's captain swore stoutly that, though badly damaged and compelled to put back to San Francisco, for three mortal hours they cruised about the scene, setting off rockets, firing guns, sounding the whistle, listening intently with lowered boats, but never heard a sound from the wreck, never until two days after knew the fate of the vessel they had cut down.

At last the first officer, fearful for his precious freight, bade his four oarsmen to pull for shore, his little pocket compass pointing the way. At dawn they heard the signals of a steamer through the dripping mist and raised their voices in a prolonged shout. An hour more and they were lifted, numb and wearied, but, oh, so thankful, to the deck of a coaster creeping up from Wilmington and Santa Barbara, and were comforted with chocolate and coffee, while for long, long hours the steamer cruised up and down, to and fro, seeking for their companions and never desisting until again the pall of night spread over the leaden sea.

Late the following morning the fog rolled back before the waking breeze, and the Broderick steamed hopefully on for the Golden Gate, and by nightfall was moored at her accustomed dock, there to be met by the tidings that while the second officer managed to beach his boat in safety, the captain's overloaded craft was swamped in the breakers off Point Pinos, and that brave old Turnbull had lost his life, dragged under by drowning men. At Monterey the people thought the longboat, too, must have overturned, and that all the women had perished. The Santiago, nearly sinking, had only just reached port. The beach above Point Pinos was thronged with people searching in the surf for the bodies of the victims, and the captain of the Idaho was broken hearted, if not well nigh crazed.

The news of the safety of the women flew from street to street, fast as the papers could speed their extras. Loving friends came pouring down to meet and care for the survivors on the Broderick. The owners of the Idaho hastened to congratulate and commend their first officer and praise his seamanship and wisdom. The women were conveyed in carriages to the homes of friends or cared for by the company, and after a brief hand clasp and parting word with Pancha, whose pathetic eyes haunted him for days, Mr. Loring took a cab and drove alone to headquarters. Evidently the story of the panic and its prompt suppression had not yet been told.

And then for at least five days the papers teemed with details of that marine disaster, and public spirited citizens started a subscription for a presentation to the first officer, through whose heroism and determination was checked what promised to be a mad scene of disorder and dismay, such as ensued when the Arctic went down and that "stern, brave mate, Gourlay, whom the sailors were wont to obey," was not there to check the undisciplined rush to the boats.

For 48 hours and thereafter the first officer modestly declared he had merely done his duty, sir, and no good seaman would have done less. The public dinner to be given in his honor, however, languished as a project on the later arrival of survivors from Monterey, and then inquiries began to be made for Lieutenant Loring and new stories to appear in papers that had not already committed themselves to other versions of the affair, and then it transpired that something had gone amiss at department headquarters.

Lieutenant Loring, after an interview with the commanding general, had hastened to Monterey in search of the captain and purser. The former he found there prostrate and actually flighty, so much so that he could give no coherent answer to questions propounded to him. In the marine hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound, was the huge sailor who had felled the commander to the deck in the rush for the remaining boats, a rush in which he was ringleader, and a piteous tale he told—that he had been shot by a passenger whom he was trying to prevent from getting into the boat they were holding for the women.

The gallant little second officer had gone to his wife and children in the southern part of the state, and was not there to tell the truth. The captain was almost delirious. The first officer in San Francisco had been tacitly posing as a marine lion and could not be well expected to volunteer information that might rob him of his laurels. The survivors among the passengers were scattered by this time, and the purser, whose testimony might be of great value, had disappeared.

"Must be in Frisco," said the agent who had been sent down to see that every man was furnished with clothing and money at the company's expense, and sent on his way measurably comforted. "Traynor had a desperate squeak for life," said the agent. "He was in the captain's boat when she sank and was weighed down with his money packages, belted about him underneath his coat, and was hauled ashore more dead than alive, and some of his valuables were lost—he couldn't tell how much."

And this was the man Mr. Loring most needed to see. There had come to department headquarters a person representing himself as the San Francisco agent of the Escalante brothers, presenting a written order for a valuable package which had been given the purser for safe keeping—had been locked by him in his safe—and which now could be found nowhere. Mr. Traynor had declared to the owners that after getting the women aboard the boat he had taken all the money from the safe and such packages as it was possible to carry and tossed three or four to Loring as he stood balancing himself on a thwart and clinging to the fall, and that he was sure one of them was that of the Senorita Pancha, for she was at the moment clasping Loring's knees and imploring him to sit down.

The boat was alternately lifting high and sinking deep as the great waves rolled by, and Traynor, while admitting haste and excitement, declared that he could almost swear that Loring received three packages and one of them must have been that now demanded by the Escalantes' agent. Hence the visit of that somber person to headquarters and his importunate appeals to Loring, who told him the whole story was absurd.

But, then, this agent had appealed to the general, and that officer, whose manner the day of Loring's return to duty had been marked by odd constraint, sent for the engineer and required of him a statement as to the truth or falsity of these allegations, and when Loring, startled and indignant, answered, "False, of course, sir," and demanded what further accusation there was the chief tossed aside the paper folder he was nervously fingering, sprang up and began to pace the floor, a favorite method, said those who long had known him, of working off steam when he was much excited.

"I can't discuss this painful matter, Mr. Loring," said he testily. "You'll have to see Colonel Strain, the adjutant general. This deplorable loss of Colonel Turnbull has upset everybody."

So Loring went to Colonel Strain, a man to whom he was but slightly known, and then it was developed that a young lady, wearing mourning, a very lovely girl, so every one described her, had called no less than three times to inquire if Mr. Loring were not returned. Once only had the general seen her, but Strain was three times her listener, and a patient one he proved and a most assiduous friend and sympathizer for several days until, as it subsequently transpired, in some way matters reached the ears of Mrs. Strain.

The colonel very pointedly told the engineer lieutenant that the lady claimed to have received letters proving that he was still in possession of the Nevins jewels while sojourning at Fort Yuma, had endeavored to compromise the matter by the tender of a check of $200, which in her destitute condition her sister had felt compelled to accept until she could have legal advice, and this, said Colonel Strain, followed now by the claim of this Mexican agent, "has created such a scandal in the general's eyes that you cannot too speedily take steps to assure him of your innocence, which, of course, you should have no difficulty in doing unless, unless"—and the colonel coughed dubiously.

For a moment Loring stood there like one in a daze. Good God! Geraldine Allyn his accuser! The girl who had wronged him so bitterly before! The girl whom he had sought to aid when he found her well nigh destitute! Gradually the whole force of the situation dawned upon him. With Turnbull dead, the captain daft and Traynor telling the strange story of his (Loring's) eagerness to examine the Escalante packet early on the voyage, and now declaring that he had given it into Loring's keeping, who in the name of heaven was left to speak for him?

Loring had come a stranger to this distant station. He had chosen to be sent at once to duty in a desert land. He was personally as little known to his superiors here at San Francisco as though they had never met. Even as men began about the steamship offices and on the streets and in the hotels, whither the Idaho's few passengers had told the tale, to speak of Walter Loring as the man who really quelled the panic, if not a mutiny, and saved the lives of a score of helpless men and women, that officer stood accused before his comrades of the army of breach of trust, of mean embezzlement, of low down theft and trickery, and not a man could he name to help to prove him innocent.

Blake, to be sure, was at Yuma, but what could he establish save that the stage had been attacked, Loring left alone, and when the cavalry returned there lay the engineer apparently unconscious, the empty saddlebag beside him? Blake had seen no robbers. Blake suspected Sancho of every villainy, but could convict him of none. Traynor, the purser, whether he believed or disbelieved his own story that he had passed that packet down to Loring, could truthfully declare that Loring had displayed most mysterious and unaccountable interest in it.

One talk with Pancha, it seems, had banished Loring's intention of confiding his suspicions and the whole story, in fact, to Mr. Traynor. And so there was no friend to whom he could turn. Five days after his arrival in San Francisco Loring found himself facing charges of the gravest nature, for Traynor, being sent for, told his story to the general in person, and Loring stood alone.

SURGERY WITHOUT ANÆSTHETICS.

The Mirror of the Knife Up to the Discovery of Anæsthesia Fifty Years Ago.

One of the most interesting papers read at the recent celebration in Boston of the fiftieth anniversary of the first administration of ether in a surgical operation was that by Dr. John Ashhurst of this city on "Surgery Before the Days of Anæsthetics." It vividly recalls the horrors of those days when the surgeon's knife was an object of far greater terror than now, and inflicted untold tortures upon the conscious patient.

"No braver or more gallant gentleman ever lived than Admiral Viscount Nelson, and after his right elbow had been shattered by a French bullet in the assault at Teneriffe he manifested the utmost courage, refusing to be taken to the nearest ship lest the sight of his injury should alarm the wife of a fellow officer whose own fate was uncertain, and when his own ship was reached he climbed up its side without assistance, saying: 'Tell the surgeon to make haste and get his instruments. I know I must lose my right arm, so the sooner it is off the better.' 'He underwent the amputation,' we learn from a private letter of one of his midshipmen, 'with the same firmness and courage that have always marked his character.' And yet so painfully was he affected that when next going into action at the famous battle of the Nile he gave standing orders to his surgeons that hot water should always be kept in readiness during an engagement, so that if another operation should be required he might at least have the poor comfort of being cut with warm instruments.—Philadelphia Record.

A Queer Experience.

Three years ago I was living in a car and travelling from town to town in the State of Washington. In Cheney I had a call from a real estate man. Some way or other the talk drifted to queer experiences. My friend told me he had one such experience in life, and one only. Ten years before he was running a train out of Chicago as a conductor on one of the Burlington lines. One morning after heavy rains, when there was freshets in the streams, he stood upon the platform of a way station about three miles from the crossing of a small river. He was about to signal his engineer to go ahead, when a voice spoke plainly in his ear, "Look out for the bridge!"

No one was standing near at the time. He walked forward and said to the engineer, "Jim, I think you had better slow down at the curve just this side of the bridge." "There is nothing the matter with the bridge," said the engineer, "or we would have had a wire from it." "Perhaps there isn't," replied the conductor, "but you slow down all the same." There was a sharp curve a short distance from the approach to the bridge, so near, in fact, that it would have been impossible to stop the train after coming in sight of the bridge had it been running at the usual rate of speed. The engineer slowed down. The bridge was gone. It had been carried away between the time the train left the last station and its arrival at the curve. Had it not been for the mysterious warning the whole train would have gone into the river.—Chicago Times-Herald.
